

Week beginning 4 May 2026

AUSTRALIA & NEW ZEALAND WEEKLY

Analysis and forecasts for this week's key releases.

In this week's edition:

Economic Insight: RBA May hike locked in.

The Week That Was: Policy perspectives from across the globe.

Focus on New Zealand: RBNZ's Breman says core inflation stable.

For the week ahead:

Australia: RBA policy decision, household spending indicator, dwelling approvals, goods trade balance.

New Zealand: RBNZ financial stability report, unemployment rate, employment, LCI wage inflation.

Japan: S&P Global services PMI.

China: RatingDog Services PMI.

Euro area: PPI, retail sales, Sentix investor confidence, S&P Global manufacturing PMI.

United States: Unemployment rate, average hourly earnings, trade balance, ADP employment change.

World: S&P Global Services PMI.

Information contained in this report current as at 1 May 2026.

Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance. The forecasts given above are predictive in character. Whilst every effort has been taken to ensure that the assumptions on which the forecasts are based are reasonable, the forecasts may be affected by incorrect assumptions or by known or unknown risks and uncertainties. The results ultimately achieved may differ substantially from these forecasts.

RBA May hike locked in

Luci Ellis
Chief Economist, Westpac Group

We reaffirm our expectation that the RBA Monetary Policy Board (MPB) will raise the cash rate a further 25bps at its May meeting, to 4.35%. Inflation was higher than the MPB was comfortable with prior to the Middle East conflict, spurring it to lift the cash rate in both February and March. The RBA doubled down on its views that the economy was tighter than full employment and needed to be restrained to get inflation back under control.

Those rate hikes were based on data relating to the period before the war. While petrol prices have since reversed much of the 32.8% increase recorded in March, part of this was driven by the cut to excise, due to expire in a few months. Diesel prices – and thus freight costs – remain very elevated. The RBA could look through higher fuel prices if that was all that was happening, but it is not. Pass-through to other (non-fuel) prices is clearly starting, touching everything from building products to takeaway food if the reports we are receiving are any guide. The RBA will be hearing similar stories from firms in its liaison program.

March would have been very early days for much pass-through to be evident in the CPI. For example, many of the price increases for building products we are aware of did not take effect until 1 April. Today's CPI data nonetheless show scattered signs of pass-through to other prices. There were some promising signs in softer monthly prices of appliances and some other household goods. However, home-building and vehicle repair costs, along with downstream insurance inflation, all picked up in the month and quarter. Services related to audio-visual, computing and telecommunications also increased in the month, which for telecommunications went against the run of recent months' results.

This is occurring in the context of a starting point where non-tradables and services inflation are already too high. At 0.8%qtr, the RBA's preferred quarterly trimmed mean measure of inflation is still too high for the RBA to walk past, even though it was a touch lower than our pre-release expectation, a downside risk we had flagged.

Together with the spike in both consumer inflation expectations and business survey measures of costs and prices, the March inflation data will have the RBA's inflation warning lights flashing bright red. The MPB will see an imperative to address high inflation despite the caution expressed by the minority voters in March.

Some observers point to the demand-destruction higher fuel prices can unleash via the hit to real incomes, which will dampen inflation on its own eventually. This is plausible, but it will take too long to assuage an RBA facing an extended period of above-target inflation.

Indeed, based on its communication so far, especially the March minutes, the MPB puts little weight on that argument. The minutes characterised the supply shock as 'further exacerbating existing capacity pressures', and the future demand destruction as just a possibility. This view flows from the RBA's analysis that the economy is already too tight, as inferred from inflation already being above target. It is also taking signal from the income boost from higher LNG prices, but no disinflationary signal from exchange rate appreciation beyond what is already implied by the RBA's own actions on rates.

“We reaffirm our view that the RBA will raise the cash rate 25bps to 4.35% next week.”

We also consider significant what the RBA has not communicated in recent weeks. When markets began pricing in multiple policy rate hikes by the ECB, Bank of England and Bank of Canada, senior officials at those central banks pushed back. Indeed, BoE Governor Bailey stated in an interview with Reuters that “markets had gotten ahead of themselves”. ECB President Lagarde used a speech on 25 March to highlight that the current shock was likely to be less inflationary than the energy shock in 2022 when Russia invaded Ukraine at a time that other supply chains were still recovering from pandemic disruption. The RBA has not pushed back in the same way. In addition to the higher starting point for inflation here, part of the reason seems to be that Australia is already seeing the pass-through to other prices that other central banks are still at the stage of watching for.

All this adds up to the MPB wanting to tighten policy further. The refreshed forecast in the Statement on Monetary Policy will allow the RBA to set out its views of the inflation impulse from the war, making May a good opportunity to take, and explain, the next step.

The outlook for the cash rate beyond May is necessarily less certain. We hold to our base case that there will be two further rate hikes after May, in June and August. The RBA's experience last year, when underlying inflation popped back up almost immediately after it cut rates, will have nudged some within the RBA to the idea that the cash rate needs to be higher than its previous peak to really get inflation under control (for the technically-minded, their individual estimates of the neutral rate got revised up). While outwardly the RBA continues to characterise its strategy as being willing to be a bit less activist to hold onto the post-pandemic employment gains, most of the original architects of that strategy have left the building and those inclined to be more activist will have more influence.

There is a chance that the RBA ends up doing less than our base case, if the voices on the MPB that counselled caution in March can sway other members, or if pass-through to non-fuel prices turns out to be less than current information suggests. However, we put less weight on this scenario given the starting point for domestically driven inflation.

Cliff Notes: policy perspectives from across the globe

Elliot Clarke, Head of International Economics
Illiana Jain, Economist

In Australia, the Q1 CPI report provided the first official estimate of the impact on local prices of the Middle East conflict. Headline inflation accelerated sharply to 1.4% (4.1%yr) in Q1 on the back of a 33% surge in auto fuel prices in March alone. Fortunately, a large portion of this spike has since unwound following the fuel excise cut, although fuel prices remain materially above the pre-conflict level.

While there were some signs of price pressures across home-building, vehicle repair and insurance, it is too early to detect, let alone accurately assess, evidence of pass-through. That said, underlying trimmed mean inflation still rose 0.8% in Q1, with annual growth at 3.5%yr, a full percentage point above the mid-point of the target. Notably, March's data pre-dates the wide range of price increases reported anecdotally for building products and other items which came into effect in April.

Following the CPI release, Chief Economist Luci Ellis reaffirmed our call for the RBA to increase the cash rate by 25bps to 4.35% at the May policy meeting. The combination of an elevated starting point for inflation and imminent risk of pass-through will compel the RBA to act pre-emptively to contain inflation expectations. Next week's voting split, updated staff forecasts and the tone of communications will be informative on the baseline policy outlook and risks. For now, we retain our base case of another two hikes beyond May, in June and August, taking the cash rate to a peak of 4.85%.

The combination of higher inflation, slower growth and rising unemployment is also fostering a complex macroeconomic backdrop for the 2026/27 Federal Budget, due May 12. A full preview will be published next week, but our preliminary note sets out our central expectation that commodity price windfalls are likely to more than offset spending pressures and result in a net improvement in the budget's bottom line over the forward estimates.

Offshore, at the beginning of the week the Bank of Japan held its policy rate at 0.75% in a 6-3 vote. Updated forecasts highlight the risk of stagflation, with FY26 growth revised sharply lower to 0.5% (from 1.5%) and core inflation now expected to remain above 2% through to FY28. With Japanese firms increasingly willing to pass on costs, the Middle East conflict risks amplifying domestic inflationary pressures.

The BoJ remains focused on restoring the policy rate as an effective policy lever. Further hikes were signalled, but the timing left open. With policy settings still considered accommodative and a weak yen threatening import inflation, we anticipate the next hike to occur in June, though there is a risk it is delayed to July. The Financial Statements Statistics update due on 1 June will be an important release to gauge firms' response to the crisis and the implications for both inflation and activity.

In the US, the FOMC then kept the stance of policy unchanged at its April meeting. The tone of the statement was balanced, with a sanguine view on GDP growth and the labour market and inflation simply characterised as "elevated". The statement also noted that "the Committee is attentive to the risks to both sides of its dual mandate", while Chair Powell remarked in the press conference that, in his view, policy is in a good place to take time to monitor conditions, being at the "high end of neutral, perhaps mildly restrictive". Governors Hammack, Kashkari and Logan also showed greater concern over inflation than the labour market at this meeting, wanting to maintain the target range for the federal funds rate and signal that a hike was as likely as a cut on current information.

The Bank of Canada also kept its policy stance unchanged. The conflict in the Middle East and US trade policy were called out as sources of uncertainty for the global economy. But overall, the outlook for Canada's economy was viewed as little changed from January. Assuming a protracted resolution to the Middle East conflict into 2027, GDP growth is expected to strengthen through 2027-2028 and inflation to turn back towards the 2%yr target from 3%yr in the near term, allowing the Bank of Canada to remain on hold.

"The initial consequences of the Middle East conflict for Australian consumer inflation were seen."

Thereafter in Europe, the ECB Governing Council opted to maintain its current policy stance. The ECB acknowledged that "upside risks to inflation and downside risks to growth have intensified" and the merits of a rate hike were discussed, but developments to date were not sufficient to convince the Governing Council to take immediate action – the decision to hold was unanimous. At its previous meeting in March, the ECB presented two downside scenarios alongside its baseline. In the April press conference, President Lagarde was reluctant to discuss the details of those scenarios, noting simply that conditions are diverging from March's baseline and the upcoming six weeks "will be the right time" to assess the economy "in order to make an informed decision". Her comments appeared carefully chosen to signal openness to a rate increase in June. Therefore, barring any major changes in the dynamics of the Middle East conflict, we continue to believe that a 25bp policy rate hike is the most probable outcome at the next meeting.

The Bank of England's April meeting also unfolded broadly as expected, the MPC voting 8-1 to keep the policy rate at 3.75%. Chief Economist Hew Pill was the sole dissenter, preferring "a prompt but modest hike in Bank Rate" to contain the risk of second-round inflationary effects. The policy statement maintained a hawkish bias, however, emphasising the potential impact of the energy price shock – its scale and duration – on UK inflation and the committee's readiness to act to ensure inflation returns to the 2% target. Policy makers also showed concern over economic growth and the labour market, with slack increasing prior to the conflict.

Risks to the economic outlook were illustrated using three alternative scenarios, differentiated by oil and gas price assumptions and the persistence of second-round inflation effects. In the first two scenarios, the Brent oil price averages $108 in Q2 2026 then decreases at different speeds. Both scenarios showed headline inflation peaking above 3.5%yr this year before easing in 2027. Importantly, the Governor emphasised that, if the economy evolves in line with these scenarios, further policy tightening may not be required – the removal of the circa 50bp of easing priced before the conflict potentially sufficient to bring inflation back to the 2% target. The committee judged that the most severe scenario – where Brent averages $127 this quarter and remains above $100 well into 2028 – would likely require "a forceful tightening in monetary policy", however. The Governor declined to specify what interest rate changes this would entail, but noted the need to act quickly to minimise second-round effects. Bank Rate hikes this year are therefore not guaranteed, but with Brent Oil surging as much as 20% this week to a peak around USD126 (now USD114) as the US and Iran remained at an impasse, conditions may eventually become too close to the BoE's most severe scenario for the MPC to ignore. We continue to expect a Bank Rate hike at the next policy meeting in June, with further tightening possible, but dependent on evolving circumstances.

RBNZ's Breman says core inflation stable

Darren Gibbs
Senior Economist

The domestic focus during this past holiday-shortened week has remained on gathering up-to-date information on how the New Zealand economy is being impacted by the ongoing Middle East conflict and assessing the RBNZ's likely response.

Early in the week, RBNZ Governor Breman participated in an event in Hamilton as part of her regional engagement programme. While there were no formal speech notes, the RBNZ issued a press statement outlining the points that she planned to make during a panel discussion, while audio from the session was also made available. In our view, Breman's comments were consistent with those made at the 8 April OCR review. Specifically, Breman stated that "...the Reserve Bank remains focused on balancing inflation control with supporting economic recovery." And she reiterated that "...monetary policy can and should ensure that a temporary increase in inflation does not turn into enduring inflationary pressures."

Perhaps the main news was Breman's reflection on last week's Q1 CPI report. She noted that annual inflation of 3.1% was slightly higher than expected at the time of the April OCR Review. But importantly, she added that "...measures of core inflation, which look through this volatility, have remained stable within the target band." She also emphasised that the Bank was focused on the prospect of second-round inflation effects, specifically transmitted through the labour market, rather than the first-round impact of higher fuel prices. These comments suggest that the RBNZ will take the time necessary to fully understand the nature and implications of the conflict before deciding how it should respond. Breman's comments were the initial catalyst for the repricing of prospects of a rate hike at the RBNZ's 27 May meeting, which the market now views as around 25% (down from 60% at the beginning of the week). Confidence reports released later in the week – discussed below – have contributed to that repricing. For the record, Westpac continues to forecast a first lift in the OCR in September.

Staying with the RBNZ, it was announced this week that the Minister of Finance and the Bank's Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) have agreed changes to the MPC Charter. These changes will provide more transparency and accountability to MPC decision-making. They also are a subset of the reforms we recommended in a note published last year before the new Governor took up her role. While the new Charter continues to encourage the formation of a consensus decision, it requires that the votes of individual members be attributed when a vote takes place. As well as attributing votes, material differences of view or judgement within the Committee will also be attributed in the published Record of Meeting, even when no vote is taken. This will make it easier for MPC members to publicly express differing views on the economic outlook and monetary policy strategy (indeed, it makes clear that members are encouraged to communicate those views externally). The new Charter will be in place for the RBNZ's 27 May meeting so will help elucidate any differences in view amongst the MPC. These reforms are a welcome step in the right direction in our view. Although just how effective the changes will be is still to be assessed in light of just how frequent votes are and the threshold applied when determining if an alternative view is specifically recorded.

Activity past year vs expected year ahead

On the data front, the focus was the ANZ's Business Outlook Survey for April. Overall, the broad theme of the survey was much as should have been expected based on the late responses to last month's survey and the results of last week's QSBO business survey. Headline business confidence has taken a significant knock, with net optimism declining to -10.6 from 32.5 in April – the first negative reading since 2023. Encouragingly, firms remain more optimistic about their own situation, although the proportion of firms expecting their own trading activity to increase over the next year has halved to 19.6. A similar proportion continue to report an increase in activity levels over the past year, suggesting that demand is holding up for many firms. Uncertainty is curbing firms' willingness to invest in expanding their businesses, however, with net hiring intentions turning modestly negative in April and net investment intentions sliding to barely positive levels. Overall, this survey portrays the picture we expected to see a few weeks ago when we significantly downgraded our view on growth through mid-2026.

Predictably, firms' year-ahead inflation expectation increased to 3.81% from 3.08% previously, even as the net proportion of firms reporting an intention to raise prices fell modestly from March. Firms reported a sharply higher expected increase in their costs over the next three months, whereas expected price increases were little changed from last month's survey. This points to significant pressure on firms' profit margins. Perhaps as a response, firms forecast for year-ahead wage growth fell to just 2.5% - now close to last year's low. The latter is likely to be viewed somewhat encouragingly by the RBNZ given its concern that high near-term headline CPI inflation rate could morph into second-round inflation by driving a wage-price spiral (albeit the current slack in the economy).

Consumer confidence and inflation expectations

Turning to the rest of this week's data, the ANZ's consumer confidence index slumped a further 12% to a three-year low of 80.3 in April. This reading is in line with the responses that had been collected in the final week of the March survey, suggesting that confidence may have been broadly stable over the past month. The net proportion of households thinking it's a good time to buy a major household item (the best retail indicator) fell 11ppts to -25, which is the lowest level since September 2024. This appears consistent with some recent anecdotes from the retail sector. Household's two-year ahead inflation jumped 0.9ppts to 6.6%, thus exceeding the levels reached even during the Covid spike.

The final piece of data this week was the building consents report for March. The number of dwelling consents fell a modest 1.3% during the month but were still 8.2% higher than a year earlier. Given that most of the consents issued in March were likely filed in February, it will be another month or two before any impact from the Middle East conflict becomes evident in the building consents figures.

One piece of good news this week was the Government's announcement that it had reached an agreement with one of the largest fuel companies to supply 90m litres of diesel – equivalent to nine days of regular demand – to fill the additional storage space that will become available towards the end of June. This will increase the average level of diesel in the country at any given time by about a third, adding a small but welcome degree of resilience.

Looking ahead to next week, the focus domestically will be on the March quarter labour market surveys. While these surveys will give no insight about the emerging impact of the Middle East conflict, they will still provide important information on the degree of spare capacity and labour cost pressure prior to the oil price shock.

As my colleague Michael Gordon wrote in his preview, we expect that the unemployment rate likely remained stable at 5.4% during the March quarter. While the tax-based Monthly Employment Indicator (MEI) points to a modest lift in employment in the quarter – broadly in line with growth in the working age population – we expect the Household Labour Force Survey (HLFS) of measure of employment will post a 0.1%q/q decline. This simply reflects our sense that the 0.5%q/q increase in the HLFS measure in the December quarter was likely overstated, with the MEI failing to validate the HLFS's indication of a sharp rise in employment among the under-25s during that quarter. With the labour force participation rate in the December quarter likely similarly overstated, we expect a modest decline in participation to be recorded in the March quarter.

Turning to labour costs, given the usual lags, spare capacity in the labour market will likely continue to have restrained wage growth in the March quarter. We expect a 0.5%q/q rise in the Labour Cost Index (LCI) for the March quarter, leaving annual growth at around 2%. Our forecast for private sector wage growth is slightly more subdued at 0.4%q/q. The public sector tends to see larger pay increases in March quarters – we've pencilled in a 0.8%q/q rise, though this would still see annual growth slow from 2.2% to 2.0%.

Our picks are a little softer than the RBNZ's February Monetary Policy Statement forecasts, which assumed faster jobs growth and a decline in the unemployment rate by this point. At the margin, a result in line with our forecasts would strengthen the case for caution before lifting the OCR. But the bigger issue for the RBNZ will be what has happened since the MPS: the Middle East oil shock will hinder the economic recovery, potentially leading to delays in hiring, layoffs and business failures. The RBNZ will need to balance what this might mean for medium-term inflation against the risk that high near-term inflation could nonetheless raise medium-term inflation expectations.

AUS: Mar Dwelling Approvals (%mth)

May 4, Last: 29.7, Westpac f/c: -5.0
Market f/c: -10.0, Range: -29.0 to -4.0

Dwelling approvals rebounded sharply in Feb, up 29.7%mth and 14%yr. The bounce more than retraced a 20% drop through Dec-Jan that followed a choppy run over the previous four months. The volatility has centred on private unit approvals. Private detached house approvals were broadly flat in Feb but have shown positive underlying momentum since the start of the year.

March is likely to show a move lower, the Feb jump taking high rise approvals to an elevated high level that is unlikely to sustain. Detached house and medium density unit approvals should retain some positive momentum. While the mix is uncertain, a 5% decline in total approvals is plausible. Note that it will take a several months for interest rate rises and other developments to impact dwelling approvals.

Approvals ascent re-emerges

AUS: Mar Household Spending Indicator (%mth)

May 5, Last: 0.3, Westpac f/c: 2.0
Mkt f/c: 1.5, Range: -0.5 to 2.4

The Household Spending Indicator rose 0.3%mth in Feb, matching Jan's outcome and in line with its average monthly pace over the past two years. Annual growth edged up to 4.6%yr.

March is expected to show a big jump led by a sharp rise in fuel prices and a pull-forward in fuel purchases. Our Westpac-DataX Card Tracker suggests the ABS spending indicator is likely to be up around 2% for the month. That would mark the strongest monthly increase since July 2022 and take annual growth to just above 6.5%yr. Note that the March report will also include estimates for Q1 household spending in real, inflation-adjusted terms. With nominal spend tracking a 1.1% rise in the quarter and the CPI posting a 1.4% rise, real spending may record a small decline for the quarter.

Monthly household spending indicator

AUS: RBA Policy Decision (%)

May 5, Last: 4.10, Westpac f/c: 4.35
Market f/c: 4.35, Range: 4.10 to 4.35

Westpac expects the RBA Monetary Policy Board (MPB) will deliver its third consecutive 25bp rate hike at the May meeting, raising the cash rate back to its previous peak of 4.35%.

The Q1 CPI report demonstrated that inflation was higher than the MPB was comfortable with prior to the Middle East conflict. Pass-through of higher fuel costs to other prices throughout the economy is clearly starting. Given the higher starting point and faster pass-through, communications from RBA officials have not pushed back on market's pricing in rate hikes over recent weeks, unlike other central banks.

This round will include a refresh of the staff forecasts which will allow the RBA to set out its views of the inflation impulse from the war. For more detail, see Page 2.

RBA to hike in May

AUS: Mar Goods Trade Balance ($bn)

May 7, Last: 5.7, Westpac f/c: 3.9

Mkt f/c: 4.4, Range: 2.0 to 7.5

A combination of an increase in gold exports, along with a rebound in rural goods outflows, led to an almost 5%^{mt} rise in export values in February. Imports fell by more than 3%^{mt}, primarily due to ongoing volatility in key capital goods imports, leaving the goods trade balance at a seven-month high of $5.7bn.

March is typically a strong month for key commodity exports, but seasonally adjusted data may show lower shipments of the Big 3 commodities. This is despite a significant rise in coal exports, driven by increased demand from Asia. Disruptions from the Middle East conflict could affect Australian imports – although data from ports does not currently indicate a significant impact on oil imports, so we have pencilled in a modest recovery in imports. Overall, we think the headline goods surplus will ease back below $4bn, a level in line with last year's average.

More volatility in goods trade to be expected

NZ: Q1 Labour Market Surveys (%)

May 6, Unemployment Rate, Last: 5.4, Westpac f/c: 5.4

May 6, LCI Private Sector, Last: 0.5, Westpac f/c: 0.4

We expect the unemployment rate to hold steady at 5.4% for the March quarter. High-frequency indicators have pointed to a modest lift in jobs in recent months, though not outpacing the growth in the working-age population. We do expect to see a small downward correction in the HLFS employment measure, after an overstated 0.5% rise in the December quarter, but this doesn't alter the general picture – we recommend focusing on the unemployment rate, as this is less vulnerable to sampling errors. Given the existing slack in the labour market, wage growth is likely to have remained subdued.

Labour market indicators

US: April employment report

May 8, payrolls, Last: 178k, Mkt f/c: 60k, WBC f/c: 90k

May 8, U/E rate, Last: 4.3%, Mkt f/c: 4.3%, WBC f/c: 4.3%

Nonfarm payrolls rebounded 178k in March, taking the 3-month average to 68k, a material step up from the month-average through the second half of 2025, -8k.

While the unemployment rate is essentially unchanged at 4.3% over the past year, household employment growth has been materially weaker than payrolls. Had the participation rate not declined by around 0.7ppts, the unemployment rate would instead be close to 5.0%.

In April, a robust gain in employment, circa 90k for payrolls, is likely to keep the unemployment rate unchanged, though risks for employment remain skewed to the downside after a weak period for activity growth.

AUSTRALIAN DWELLING APPROVALS BULLETIN

Unit approvals reverse course

Key points

- Total dwelling approvals partially unwound February's sharp gains, falling 10.5%mth in March. The annual pace eased to 9.0%yr, though the large lift in the previous month continues to leave approvals at an elevated level.
- As in recent months, private unit approvals drove the headline outcome, declining 26%mth following February's 101%mth surge. Private detached house approvals rose 0.9%mth. On a rolling three-month basis, house approvals increased 5.1%qtr, signalling a continued upswing in detached housing momentum.
- State-level outcomes remain uneven on a rolling three-month basis, with approvals strongest in Qld and WA, while NSW, Vic and SA recorded declines.
- Looking ahead, further expected RBA cash rate rises throughout 2026, alongside softer dwelling price growth are likely to temper the near-term recovery.

Detached dwelling approvals in a clearer upswing

Luka Belobrajdic
Economist

Total dwelling approvals partially unwound the sharp gains recorded last month, falling 10.5%mth in March. The result was below our expectation but broadly in line with the market expectation. The annual pace eased to 9.0%yr, although the large rise in last month's result continues to leave approvals at an elevated level. Indeed, the key takeaway looks to be of a clearer upswing emerging in the detached houses segment.

Note that most figures in the charts and table are presented on a rolling-three month basis to smooth out monthly volatility.

As in recent results, private unit approvals continued to drive volatility, declining 26%mth, following a 101%mth rise in February. The March outcome does not fully unwind last month's gains, with private unit approvals remaining above their average level over the past 12 months. Units accounted for just over 39% of private approvals in the month, down from the 47% high in February. High rise unit approvals again drove the headline move, with Westpac's seasonally-adjusted estimates across both private and public sectors falling 21%mth, while low mid rise approvals declined 7.5%mth. As a result, the annual growth rate for high rise units eased to 15%yr, while low mid rise approvals moved into contraction (-2.7%yr).

Private detached dwelling approvals rose 0.9%mth, with February approvals revised sharply higher to 2.0%mth (+1.8ppts). On a rolling three month basis, total house approvals increased 5.1%qtr, the strongest result since October 2023, and signalling a continued upswing in detached dwelling approvals.

Dwelling approvals remain strongest in states experiencing the most robust dwelling price growth (see here). On a rolling three month basis, gains are concentrated in Qld (27%yr) and WA (23%yr), led primarily by unit approvals, although detached dwellings are providing more balanced support in WA. In contrast, approvals declined in Vic (-1.5%yr), SA (-5.1%yr) and NSW (-11%yr). In NSW and Vic, declines were driven primarily by units, with house approvals continuing to post gains.

In value terms, residential building approvals fell 16%mth, an 18% decline in new residential approvals partially offset by a 0.8% rise in renovation activity. The value of non residential approvals fell sharply (-25%mth), led by a significant fall in the data centre dominated 'other commercial' segment (-93%mth). The total value of buildings approved declined 19%mth.

Looking ahead, further expected RBA cash rate increases across May, June and August, alongside softer dwelling price growth, are likely to temper the near term recovery in dwelling approvals. While detached housing momentum has improved, volatility in unit approvals and broader affordability constraints suggest the recovery is likely to remain uneven.

AUSTRALIAN DWELLING PRICES BULLETIN

Price growth slows across all capital cities

Key points

- The Cotality home value index rose 0.2% in April - the weakest monthly outcome since January 2025 - following revised gains of 0.4%mth in March and 0.5%mth in February. Annual growth eased to 9.1%yr.
- The April update points to early signs of weakness linked to tighter monetary policy and a more uncertain global backdrop.
- The slowdown remains most pronounced in Sydney and Melbourne, where price declines have persisted and turnover has fallen sharply. In contrast, price growth across other capital cities has eased only modestly and remains robust.
- With further interest rate increases expected over coming months, alongside heightened global uncertainty, additional headwinds are likely, and the risk of a further deceleration in dwelling price growth has increased.

Price growth slows, sales retreat further

The Cotality home value index, covering the eight major capital cities, rose 0.2% in April - the weakest result since January 2025. This follows a revised down 0.4%^{3mth} in March and 0.5%^{3mth} in February, marking a period of lower growth after the stronger outcomes recorded late last year, when prices rose 0.9–1.2%^{3mth} over August–November. Annual growth softened to 9.1%^{yr} in April.

The April data suggests that the housing market may be beginning to feel the brunt of higher interest rates and a more uncertain global outlook. That said, divergence across markets remains evident: price declines have continued in Sydney and Melbourne, while monthly price growth in other capitals has seen a mild deceleration but remains robust.

Note that, unless specified, figures in titles, tables and the commentary below are in non-seasonally adjusted terms, consistent with the 'headline' figures reported by Cotality. Figures shown in charts are in seasonally adjusted terms.

While still early days, the April read provides clearer insight into the initial impact of tighter monetary policy and uncertainty arising from the Middle East conflict. Prices rose 0.2%^{3mth} in non seasonally adjusted terms, with the seasonally adjusted measure matching this outcome.

Turnover continued to trend lower, with preliminary estimates suggesting a quarterly decline of 5.3% - led by Sydney and Melbourne. The ongoing decline likely reflects increased pessimism following recent RBA policy rate hikes and weaker consumer confidence, with the unemployment expectations sub-index falling sharply, likely translating into increased hesitation in committing to a property purchase (see here). At the margin, prospective changes to capital gains tax may also be influencing purchasing decisions. Despite the weakness, sales continue to outpace new listings, indicating supply remains tight, although listings are closing the gap - rising to their highest level since 2024 at 22,900.

Auction clearance rates remained below long run averages in Sydney and Melbourne. Clearance rates in both cities reached recent lows in April, consistent with the pronounced slowing in price growth observed in these markets. Note that clearance rates are only meaningful indicators for Sydney and Melbourne.

By dwelling type, the slowdown since late last year has remained more pronounced for houses than units, although in April unit price growth (0.1%^{3mth}) was slightly softer than for houses (0.2%^{3mth}). The slowdown continues to be most evident in top-tier properties, which recorded a 0.5%^{3mth} decline in April, while lower-priced tiers continued to gain.

Dwelling prices: city groups and regional areas

The April price results by capital city were as follows:

- Sydney: Prices extended their decline, falling 0.6%mt in non seasonally adjusted terms - the largest monthly fall since December 2024. House prices declined a further 0.7%, while unit prices also fell (-0.4%mt). Weakness was concentrated in the top 25% of dwellings, which declined 1.2%mt. Annual growth slowed to 4.2%yr.
- Melbourne: Prices again recorded the sharpest decline among the capitals, falling 0.6%mt. Both houses (-0.8%mt) and units (-0.1%mt) contributed to the decline. As in Sydney, weakness was concentrated in the top quartile, which fell -1.2%mt. Annual growth was 2.0%yr.
- Brisbane: Price growth slowed modestly, to 1.2%mt, down from 1.8%mt in March. Both houses and units recorded more subdued gains of 1.2%mt and 1.4%mt respectively. Growth was supported primarily by the bottom 25% of dwellings, which rose 1.7%mt. Annual growth remains very strong at 19.7%yr.
- Adelaide: Prices rose 1.1%mt, slightly softer than the March outcome. Annual growth lifted further to 12.2%yr.
- Perth: Price growth, although having slowed, continued to outperform all other capitals, increasing 2.1%mt. Annual growth accelerated further to 26%yr, the strongest result since January 2007. Both houses and units contributed, rising 2.1%mt and 2.2%mt respectively, with the bottom quartile recording the strongest growth (2.4%mt).

- Outcomes across the smaller capitals were more subdued. Price growth softened in Darwin (1.3%mt, 19.6%yr), edged modestly higher in Hobart (0.2%mt, 2.6%yr), and was flat in Canberra (5.6%yr).
- Regional markets, as has been the recent pattern, continue to outperform their respective capitals in NSW and Victoria, while lagging the pace of growth seen in the mid sized capitals. Annual growth ranges from 7.9%yr in regional Victoria, to 9.1%yr in regional NSW, and 15%yr in regional Queensland (which includes the Gold and Sunshine Coasts).

Overall, the April results confirm that price growth is slowing across all capital cities, with Sydney and Melbourne acting as a material drag, while Brisbane, Adelaide and Perth continue to power ahead. Turnover has continued to decline through 2026, although it remains early in the adjustment process. It often takes several months for the full effects of interest rate changes to become apparent in housing market conditions, particularly given the labour market so far has remained relatively firm despite growing global headwinds (see here).

Looking ahead, we expect three further RBA cash rate hikes this year, and the Middle East conflict appears increasingly prolonged continuing to weigh on global energy markets and the Australian economy. In this context, the outlook for the housing market has become more uncertain, with a further price growth deceleration looking increasingly likely.

MORNING REPORT

Today's economic developments and market movements.

Key themes

Market sentiment diverged across regions as Iran's new supreme leader reaffirmed control over the Strait of Hormuz and President Trump maintained the US naval blockade in the absence of a nuclear deal. Elsewhere, stronger US GDP growth supported sentiment, while the BoE and ECB held rates steady.

US and European stocks rose on strong data and earnings, while the ASX 200 extended its longest run of daily declines since 2018.

Overseas bond markets rallied as oil prices eased, with US and European yields falling.

The USD weakened as the Yen strengthened sharply following Japanese FX market intervention.

Oil prices eased amid the expiry of the June Brent contract, while gold rebounded on USD weakness.

Financial Markets

Market sentiment diverged across regions overnight. In the Middle East, Iran's new supreme leader Khamenei vowed not to give up the country's nuclear or missile technologies and reiterated that Iran would retain control of the Strait of Hormuz. Reports also suggested President Trump had been briefed on new military options in Iran, having reinforced that the US would not lift its naval blockade without a nuclear deal.

Elsewhere, an acceleration in US GDP growth to 2% annualised in Q1 supported US equities, while the Bank of England and European Central Bank both left policy rates unchanged, delivering no major surprises but continuing to highlight upside risks to inflation.

- Equity markets showed clear regional divergence. In the US, solid GDP growth and strong corporate earnings lifted markets, with the S&P 500 posting its strongest monthly performance in more than five years and rising 1.0% on the day. The Dow Jones gained 1.6%, while the NASDAQ 100 lagged slightly, up 0.9%.
- European equities also advanced, supported by steady central bank policy, with the Euro Stoxx 50 rising 1.1% and the FTSE 100 gaining 1.6%. In contrast, Asian markets closed lower, with the Nikkei 225 down -1.1% and the Hang Seng falling -1.3%. Locally, the ASX 200 extended its losing streak, ending -0.2% lower, its longest run of daily declines since September 2018.
- US bond markets rallied as the recent surge in oil prices stalled - the 2 year yield falling 8bps and the 10 year down 6bps. Futures pricing again reversed course, implying an 11% probability of a rate cut by year end. Elsewhere, the 10 year Bund yield fell 7bps and the 10 year Gilt declined 6bps.
- Australian government bonds moved higher, tracking the previous night's rally in US Treasuries. The 3-year yield rose 8bps and the 10-year increased 7bps. Swaps price a 76% probability of a rate hike at next week's meeting, with the implied terminal cash rate for year-end at 4.85%.
- In FX markets, the USD weakened, with the DXY down 0.9%. The Australian dollar rose 1.2% to 0.7201 against the USD and also strengthened against other major currencies. The Yen saw a sharp move, with USD/JPY falling -2.4% following Japanese intervention in FX markets.
- The expiry of the June Brent contract helped soften the recent surge in oil prices. Brent fell -3.4% to US$114/bbl, while WTI declined -1.3% to US$106/bbl, though Dated Brent remained elevated at US$123/bbl. Gold rebounded, rising 1.5% as the USD fell, while iron ore gained 0.7%, with higher Middle East related costs offsetting the resolution of the BHP-CMRG dispute.

International Data

With Governor Bailey pushing back against expectations for more aggressive tightening, the BoE left policy unchanged at 3.75% by an 8-1 vote, with Chief Economist Huw Pill the sole dissenter, favouring a modest hike to curb second-round inflation risks. The policy statement retained a hawkish bias, although policymakers appeared increasingly concerned about growth and loosening labour market conditions, which could see underlying inflation pressures ease over time.

The ECB Governing Council opted to maintain its policy stance, delivering no significant surprises. The statement seemed to place greater emphasis on the risks of second-round effects, which the ECB is monitoring particularly closely. The ECB acknowledged that "upside risks to inflation and downside risks to growth have intensified". Nevertheless, this was not sufficient to convince any policy makers to take action at this policy meeting - the decision to hold was unanimous.

US GDP gained 2% on an annualised basis in Q1 according to the first estimate. Personal consumption weakened further to 1.6% annualised. However, business investment surged almost 9% on the AI infrastructure build out, and government spending experienced a partial reversal of Q4's shutdown induced weakness. Net exports subtracted 1.3ppts from growth in Q1. In March, personal spending gained 0.9%. Personal income growth was robust, however, gaining 0.6%. The US employment cost index was largely as expected in Q1, total compensation rising 0.9%.

Euro Area GDP rose 0.1% in Q1. The unemployment rate meanwhile edged down to 6.2%. In April, consumer inflation jumped 1.0% as the Middle East conflict impacted energy prices. Annual growth remained near target, at 2.2%yr.

Local Data

In Australia, March private credit rose a stronger than expected 0.7%mt, suggesting continued resilience despite tighter monetary policy and a more uncertain economic backdrop (see here).

MORNING REPORT

Today's economic developments and market movements.

Key themes

Market sentiment diverged across regions as Iran's new supreme leader reaffirmed control over the Strait of Hormuz and President Trump maintained the US naval blockade in the absence of a nuclear deal. Elsewhere, stronger US GDP growth supported sentiment, while the BoE and ECB held rates steady.

US and European stocks rose on strong data and earnings, while the ASX 200 extended its longest run of daily declines since 2018.

Overseas bond markets rallied as oil prices eased, with US and European yields falling.

The USD weakened as the Yen strengthened sharply following Japanese FX market intervention.

Oil prices eased amid the expiry of the June Brent contract, while gold rebounded on USD weakness.

Financial Markets

Market sentiment diverged across regions overnight. In the Middle East, Iran's new supreme leader Khamenei vowed not to give up the country's nuclear or missile technologies and reiterated that Iran would retain control of the Strait of Hormuz. Reports also suggested President Trump had been briefed on new military options in Iran, having reinforced that the US would not lift its naval blockade without a nuclear deal.

Elsewhere, an acceleration in US GDP growth to 2% annualised in Q1 supported US equities, while the Bank of England and European Central Bank both left policy rates unchanged, delivering no major surprises but continuing to highlight upside risks to inflation.

- Equity markets showed clear regional divergence. In the US, solid GDP growth and strong corporate earnings lifted markets, with the S&P 500 posting its strongest monthly performance in more than five years and rising 1.0% on the day. The Dow Jones gained 1.6%, while the NASDAQ 100 lagged slightly, up 0.9%.
- European equities also advanced, supported by steady central bank policy, with the Euro Stoxx 50 rising 1.1% and the FTSE 100 gaining 1.6%. In contrast, Asian markets closed lower, with the Nikkei 225 down -1.1% and the Hang Seng falling -1.3%. Locally, the ASX 200 extended its losing streak, ending -0.2% lower, its longest run of daily declines since September 2018.
- US bond markets rallied as the recent surge in oil prices stalled - the 2 year yield falling 8bps and the 10 year down 6bps. Futures pricing again reversed course, implying an 11% probability of a rate cut by year end. Elsewhere, the 10 year Bund yield fell 7bps and the 10 year Gilt declined 6bps.
- Australian government bonds moved higher, tracking the previous night's rally in US Treasuries. The 3-year yield rose 8bps and the 10-year increased 7bps. Swaps price a 76% probability of a rate hike at next week's meeting, with the implied terminal cash rate for year-end at 4.85%.
- In FX markets, the USD weakened, with the DXY down 0.9%. The Australian dollar rose 1.2% to 0.7201 against the USD and also strengthened against other major currencies. The Yen saw a sharp move, with USD/JPY falling -2.4% following Japanese intervention in FX markets.
- The expiry of the June Brent contract helped soften the recent surge in oil prices. Brent fell -3.4% to US$114/bbl, while WTI declined -1.3% to US$106/bbl, though Dated Brent remained elevated at US$123/bbl. Gold rebounded, rising 1.5% as the USD fell, while iron ore gained 0.7%, with higher Middle East related costs offsetting the resolution of the BHP-CMRG dispute.

International Data

With Governor Bailey pushing back against expectations for more aggressive tightening, the BoE left policy unchanged at 3.75% by an 8-1 vote, with Chief Economist Huw Pill the sole dissenter, favouring a modest hike to curb second-round inflation risks. The policy statement retained a hawkish bias, although policymakers appeared increasingly concerned about growth and loosening labour market conditions, which could see underlying inflation pressures ease over time.

The ECB Governing Council opted to maintain its policy stance, delivering no significant surprises. The statement seemed to place greater emphasis on the risks of second-round effects, which the ECB is monitoring particularly closely. The ECB acknowledged that "upside risks to inflation and downside risks to growth have intensified". Nevertheless, this was not sufficient to convince any policy makers to take action at this policy meeting - the decision to hold was unanimous.

US GDP gained 2% on an annualised basis in Q1 according to the first estimate. Personal consumption weakened further to 1.6% annualised. However, business investment surged almost 9% on the AI infrastructure build out, and government spending experienced a partial reversal of Q4's shutdown induced weakness. Net exports subtracted 1.3ppts from growth in Q1. In March, personal spending gained 0.9%. Personal income growth was robust, however, gaining 0.6%. The US employment cost index was largely as expected in Q1, total compensation rising 0.9%.

Euro Area GDP rose 0.1% in Q1. The unemployment rate meanwhile edged down to 6.2%. In April, consumer inflation jumped 1.0% as the Middle East conflict impacted energy prices. Annual growth remained near target, at 2.2%yr.

Local Data

In Australia, March private credit rose a stronger than expected 0.7%mt, suggesting continued resilience despite tighter monetary policy and a more uncertain economic backdrop (see here).

Financial Markets

Market sentiment diverged across regions overnight. In the Middle East, Iran's new supreme leader Khamenei vowed not to give up the country's nuclear or missile technologies and reiterated that Iran would retain control of the Strait of Hormuz. Reports also suggested President Trump had been briefed on new military options in Iran, having reinforced that the US would not lift its naval blockade without a nuclear deal.

Elsewhere, an acceleration in US GDP growth to 2% annualised in Q1 supported US equities, while the Bank of England and European Central Bank both left policy rates unchanged, delivering no major surprises but continuing to highlight upside risks to inflation.

- Equity markets showed clear regional divergence. In the US, solid GDP growth and strong corporate earnings lifted markets, with the S&P 500 posting its strongest monthly performance in more than five years and rising 1.0% on the day. The Dow Jones gained 1.6%, while the NASDAQ 100 lagged slightly, up 0.9%.
- European equities also advanced, supported by steady central bank policy, with the Euro Stoxx 50 rising 1.1% and the FTSE 100 gaining 1.6%. In contrast, Asian markets closed lower, with the Nikkei 225 down -1.1% and the Hang Seng falling -1.3%. Locally, the ASX 200 extended its losing streak, ending -0.2% lower, its longest run of daily declines since September 2018.
- US bond markets rallied as the recent surge in oil prices stalled - the 2 year yield falling 8bps and the 10 year down 6bps. Futures pricing again reversed course, implying an 11% probability of a rate cut by year end. Elsewhere, the 10 year Bund yield fell 7bps and the 10 year Gilt declined 6bps.
- Australian government bonds moved higher, tracking the previous night's rally in US Treasuries. The 3-year yield rose 8bps and the 10-year increased 7bps. Swaps price a 76% probability of a rate hike at next week's meeting, with the implied terminal cash rate for year-end at 4.85%.
- In FX markets, the USD weakened, with the DXY down 0.9%. The Australian dollar rose 1.2% to 0.7201 against the USD and also strengthened against other major currencies. The Yen saw a sharp move, with USD/JPY falling -2.4% following Japanese intervention in FX markets.
- The expiry of the June Brent contract helped soften the recent surge in oil prices. Brent fell -3.4% to US$114/bbl, while WTI declined -1.3% to US$106/bbl, though Dated Brent remained elevated at US$123/bbl. Gold rebounded, rising 1.5% as the USD fell, while iron ore gained 0.7%, with higher Middle East related costs offsetting the resolution of the BHP-CMRG dispute.

International Data

With Governor Bailey pushing back against expectations for more aggressive tightening, the BoE left policy unchanged at 3.75% by an 8-1 vote, with Chief Economist Huw Pill the sole dissenter, favouring a modest hike to curb second-round inflation risks. The policy statement retained a hawkish bias, although policymakers appeared increasingly concerned about growth and loosening labour market conditions, which could see underlying inflation pressures ease over time.

The ECB Governing Council opted to maintain its policy stance, delivering no significant surprises. The statement seemed to place greater emphasis on the risks of second-round effects, which the ECB is monitoring particularly closely. The ECB acknowledged that "upside risks to inflation and downside risks to growth have intensified". Nevertheless, this was not sufficient to convince any policy makers to take action at this policy meeting - the decision to hold was unanimous.

US GDP gained 2% on an annualised basis in Q1 according to the first estimate. Personal consumption weakened further to 1.6% annualised. However, business investment surged almost 9% on the AI infrastructure build out, and government spending experienced a partial reversal of Q4's shutdown induced weakness. Net exports subtracted 1.3ppts from growth in Q1. In March, personal spending gained 0.9%. Personal income growth was robust, however, gaining 0.6%. The US employment cost index was largely as expected in Q1, total compensation rising 0.9%.

Euro Area GDP rose 0.1% in Q1. The unemployment rate meanwhile edged down to 6.2%. In April, consumer inflation jumped 1.0% as the Middle East conflict impacted energy prices. Annual growth remained near target, at 2.2%yr.

Local Data

In Australia, March private credit rose a stronger than expected 0.7%mt, suggesting continued resilience despite tighter monetary policy and a more uncertain economic backdrop (see here).

Speculation about tax reform in the upcoming federal budget abounds. That presumes a lot about the problems the budget should solve and whether the tax system is the right solution.

- Pre-budget speculation has tended to start from the presumption that more revenue is needed. The justification is sometimes the perceived need to fund spending priorities that are assumed – perhaps erroneously – to be rising. In other quarters, minimising the deficit or government debt appears to be the objective. Whatever the objective, it should be scrutinised not assumed.

- Speculation about changes to the capital gains tax (CGT) regime highlight the potential to increase revenue, but there is no guarantee of this. For example, switching back to the pre-1999 regime or the simplified version of it we have previously suggested will only boost revenue if asset price growth exceeds 5%.
- There are many possible objectives that fiscal systems – tax and spending – can address, often different objectives in different parts of the system. “Boost revenue” is not the only possible goal, and tweaking the tax system is not the only solution to a policy objective.

Speculation is building as budget night approaches. While the government must deal with the immediate issues in front of it stemming from the Middle East conflict, many observers are focused on the maxim “never let a good crisis go to waste” and hoping for broader reforms – usually the same ones they were advocating before the conflict erupted. The question of what the budget should do rests, however, on the deeper question of what problems the government is trying to solve.

For example, recent discussion has been focused on an assumed need for extra revenue. Tax reforms are dissected for how much more they might raise, while revenue windfalls from higher commodity prices are downplayed. Underlying this view are other presumptions – seemingly widespread across different levels of government and the bureaucracy – that “people expect more from government nowadays” and that governments should strive to meet those expectations. Absent from these discussions are the questions of whether the government’s effort and resources are being deployed effectively, and whether it can stop doing some things altogether.

A related presumption underlying the search for more revenue is the belief that population ageing is shrinking the workforce, even though this is not true in Australia and most other advanced economies outside North America.

A separate pathway to the search for more revenue comes from a different premise: that the federal fiscal position is weak and large revenue measures (and/or spending cuts) must be found to reduce the deficit significantly. It is good to have strong public finances. It keeps government borrowing costs low and leaves plenty of space to spend in a crisis. Yet the presumption that government finances are parlous and in need of repair sits oddly with Australia’s actual federal fiscal position, which is stronger than many of its peers.

Take the recent speculation about removing the CGT discount. It has been touted as a revenue-raising measure, but there is no guarantee of this. One could consider moving back to the pre-1999 system of adjusting the gain for growth in CPI and applying the full marginal rate to the remainder. Alternatively, one could consider the simplified version we suggested in 2023, where the adjustment is 2.5% per year the asset is held – the midpoint of the RBA’s inflation target – regardless of actual inflation over the holding period.

Applying a full marginal rate to an adjusted return still taxes mobile capital more lightly than other income, as economic theory would suggest. It has an advantage over the current system of not privileging capital gains-producing assets over income-producing assets at the margin. Because assets that can be leveraged are especially advantaged by the current system, switching back to the pre-1999 system or our simplified alternative would also promote financial stability. It would increase the effective tax rate on capital gains during booms in real asset prices, and our simplified proposal would also lean against periods of high CPI inflation.

What it will not do, though, is necessarily boost revenue. If asset prices rise by less than 5% per year, revenue is lower. For example, a 4% rise, less 2.5% deduction, means tax is paid on 1½% of capital gains. The current system of half the marginal rate on the full gain would be the equivalent of taxing 2% of gains if asset prices rose 4%/yr. Revenue is only higher than the current scheme if asset prices rise by more than 5%. And even in that case, the increase in revenue might only be small once people have adjusted to the change and the other possible design decisions associated with it, such as grandfathering and limits on the number and type of assets eligible for the discount.

Absent from the current discourse is any discussion of the proper role and size of government, or the level of government that is best placed to take on the functions required. As Westpac Economics colleague Pat Bustamante has previously shown, the size of government in Australia has increased substantially over the past decade. When private demand indirectly induced by public spending is included (think legal work for construction companies working on public infrastructure projects), the footprint of public demand has risen from 27% to 35% of GDP over the past decade.

Much of this expansion is desirable. We should want to care for disabled and elderly Australians properly and have high-quality childcare available at an affordable price. That takes resources, and private markets alone are unlikely to deliver enough of these services. Likewise, with population growth running around 1½%, both pre-pandemic and currently, we will always need more public infrastructure. Both types of spending also have positive spillovers. Social care spending allows those who were providing informal care to enter paid employment. And done well, infrastructure spending can boost skills and productivity and open up new opportunities through better logistics.

The question of what should or will happen in the budget boils down to which of the many possible objectives government wants to prioritise. Is it addressing the growing income tax burden in a system of fixed tax brackets, or minimising the deficit, or making the tax system more responsive to the economic cycle, or providing more services to meet the public's expectations, or doing so more efficiently? What about national and economic security? The budget is a complex beast and different design decisions can address different objectives. This is not like monetary policy, where there is only one instrument and at most two objectives, inflation and full employment, which are in any case correlated at least some of the time.

Global economic and geopolitical developments pose challenges, while new technology and an expanding, ageing workforce create opportunities. We should not assume that tweaking the tax system is the answer to every issue. Your fiscal priorities should relate to your public policy objectives.

The words “believe”, “anticipate”, “expect”, “intend”, “plan”, “predict”, “continue”, “assume”, “positioned”, “may”, “will”, “should”, “shall”, “risk” and other similar expressions that are predictions of or indicate future events and future trends identify forward-looking statements. These forward-

looking statements include all matters that are not historical facts. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance, nor are forecasts of future performance. Whilst every effort has been taken to ensure that the assumptions on which any forecasts are based are reasonable, the forecasts may be affected by incorrect assumptions or by known or unknown risks and uncertainties. The ultimate outcomes may differ substantially from any forecasts.

Conflicts of Interest: In the normal course of offering banking products and services to its clients, the Westpac Group may act in several capacities (including issuer, market maker, underwriter, distributor, swap counterparty and calculation agent) simultaneously with respect to a financial instrument, giving rise to potential conflicts of interest which may impact the performance of a financial instrument. The Westpac Group may at any time transact or hold a position (including hedging and trading positions) for its own account or the account of a client in any financial instrument which may impact the performance of that financial instrument.

Author(s) disclaimer and declaration: The author(s) confirms that (a) no part of his/her compensation was, is, or will be, directly or indirectly, related to any views or (if applicable) recommendations expressed in this material; (b) this material accurately reflects his/her personal views about the financial products, companies or issuers (if applicable) and is based on sources reasonably believed to be reliable and accurate; (c) to the best of the author's knowledge, they are not in receipt of inside information and this material does not contain inside information; and (d) no other part of the Westpac Group has made any attempt to influence this material.

Further important information regarding sustainability-related content: This material may contain statements relating to environmental, social and governance (ESG) topics. These are subject to known and unknown risks, and there are significant uncertainties, limitations, risks and assumptions in the metrics, modelling, data, scenarios, reporting and analysis on which the statements rely. In particular, these areas are rapidly evolving and maturing, and there are variations in approaches and common standards and practice, as well as uncertainty around future related policy and legislation. Some material may include information derived from publicly available sources that have not been independently verified. No representation or warranty is made as to the accuracy, completeness or reliability of the information. There is a risk that the analysis, estimates, judgements, assumptions, views, models, scenarios or projections used may turn out to be incorrect. These risks may cause actual outcomes to differ materially from those expressed or implied. The ESG-related statements in this material do not constitute advice, nor are they guarantees or predictions of future performance, and Westpac gives no representation, warranty or assurance (including as to the quality, accuracy or completeness of the statements). You should seek your own independent advice.

MORNING REPORT

Today's economic developments and market movements.

Key themes

Market sentiment diverged across regions as Iran's new supreme leader reaffirmed control over the Strait of Hormuz and President Trump maintained the US naval blockade in the absence of a nuclear deal. Elsewhere, stronger US GDP growth supported sentiment, while the BoE and ECB held rates steady.

US and European stocks rose on strong data and earnings, while the ASX 200 extended its longest run of daily declines since 2018.

Overseas bond markets rallied as oil prices eased, with US and European yields falling.

The USD weakened as the Yen strengthened sharply following Japanese FX market intervention.

Oil prices eased amid the expiry of the June Brent contract, while gold rebounded on USD weakness.

Financial Markets

Market sentiment diverged across regions overnight. In the Middle East, Iran's new supreme leader Khamenei vowed not to give up the country's nuclear or missile technologies and reiterated that Iran would retain control of the Strait of Hormuz. Reports also suggested President Trump had been briefed on new military options in Iran, having reinforced that the US would not lift its naval blockade without a nuclear deal.

Elsewhere, an acceleration in US GDP growth to 2% annualised in Q1 supported US equities, while the Bank of England and European Central Bank both left policy rates unchanged, delivering no major surprises but continuing to highlight upside risks to inflation.

- Equity markets showed clear regional divergence. In the US, solid GDP growth and strong corporate earnings lifted markets, with the S&P 500 posting its strongest monthly performance in more than five years and rising 1.0% on the day. The Dow Jones gained 1.6%, while the NASDAQ 100 lagged slightly, up 0.9%.
- European equities also advanced, supported by steady central bank policy, with the Euro Stoxx 50 rising 1.1% and the FTSE 100 gaining 1.6%. In contrast, Asian markets closed lower, with the Nikkei 225 down -1.1% and the Hang Seng falling -1.3%. Locally, the ASX 200 extended its losing streak, ending -0.2% lower, its longest run of daily declines since September 2018.
- US bond markets rallied as the recent surge in oil prices stalled - the 2 year yield falling 8bps and the 10 year down 6bps. Futures pricing again reversed course, implying an 11% probability of a rate cut by year end. Elsewhere, the 10 year Bund yield fell 7bps and the 10 year Gilt declined 6bps.
- Australian government bonds moved higher, tracking the previous night's rally in US Treasuries. The 3-year yield rose 8bps and the 10-year increased 7bps. Swaps price a 76% probability of a rate hike at next week's meeting, with the implied terminal cash rate for year-end at 4.85%.
- In FX markets, the USD weakened, with the DXY down 0.9%. The Australian dollar rose 1.2% to 0.7201 against the USD and also strengthened against other major currencies. The Yen saw a sharp move, with USD/JPY falling -2.4% following Japanese intervention in FX markets.
- The expiry of the June Brent contract helped soften the recent surge in oil prices. Brent fell -3.4% to US$114/bbl, while WTI declined -1.3% to US$106/bbl, though Dated Brent remained elevated at US$123/bbl. Gold rebounded, rising 1.5% as the USD fell, while iron ore gained 0.7%, with higher Middle East related costs offsetting the resolution of the BHP-CMRG dispute.

International Data

With Governor Bailey pushing back against expectations for more aggressive tightening, the BoE left policy unchanged at 3.75% by an 8-1 vote, with Chief Economist Huw Pill the sole dissenter, favouring a modest hike to curb second-round inflation risks. The policy statement retained a hawkish bias, although policymakers appeared increasingly concerned about growth and loosening labour market conditions, which could see underlying inflation pressures ease over time.

The ECB Governing Council opted to maintain its policy stance, delivering no significant surprises. The statement seemed to place greater emphasis on the risks of second-round effects, which the ECB is monitoring particularly closely. The ECB acknowledged that "upside risks to inflation and downside risks to growth have intensified". Nevertheless, this was not sufficient to convince any policy makers to take action at this policy meeting - the decision to hold was unanimous.

US GDP gained 2% on an annualised basis in Q1 according to the first estimate. Personal consumption weakened further to 1.6% annualised. However, business investment surged almost 9% on the AI infrastructure build out, and government spending experienced a partial reversal of Q4's shutdown induced weakness. Net exports subtracted 1.3ppts from growth in Q1. In March, personal spending gained 0.9%. Personal income growth was robust, however, gaining 0.6%. The US employment cost index was largely as expected in Q1, total compensation rising 0.9%.

Euro Area GDP rose 0.1% in Q1. The unemployment rate meanwhile edged down to 6.2%. In April, consumer inflation jumped 1.0% as the Middle East conflict impacted energy prices. Annual growth remained near target, at 2.2%yr.

Local Data

In Australia, March private credit rose a stronger than expected 0.7%mt, suggesting continued resilience despite tighter monetary policy and a more uncertain economic backdrop (see here).

MORNING REPORT

Today's economic developments and market movements.

Key themes

Market sentiment diverged across regions as Iran's new supreme leader reaffirmed control over the Strait of Hormuz and President Trump maintained the US naval blockade in the absence of a nuclear deal. Elsewhere, stronger US GDP growth supported sentiment, while the BoE and ECB held rates steady.

US and European stocks rose on strong data and earnings, while the ASX 200 extended its longest run of daily declines since 2018.

Overseas bond markets rallied as oil prices eased, with US and European yields falling.

The USD weakened as the Yen strengthened sharply following Japanese FX market intervention.

Oil prices eased amid the expiry of the June Brent contract, while gold rebounded on USD weakness.

Financial Markets

Market sentiment diverged across regions overnight. In the Middle East, Iran's new supreme leader Khamenei vowed not to give up the country's nuclear or missile technologies and reiterated that Iran would retain control of the Strait of Hormuz. Reports also suggested President Trump had been briefed on new military options in Iran, having reinforced that the US would not lift its naval blockade without a nuclear deal.

Elsewhere, an acceleration in US GDP growth to 2% annualised in Q1 supported US equities, while the Bank of England and European Central Bank both left policy rates unchanged, delivering no major surprises but continuing to highlight upside risks to inflation.

- Equity markets showed clear regional divergence. In the US, solid GDP growth and strong corporate earnings lifted markets, with the S&P 500 posting its strongest monthly performance in more than five years and rising 1.0% on the day. The Dow Jones gained 1.6%, while the NASDAQ 100 lagged slightly, up 0.9%.
- European equities also advanced, supported by steady central bank policy, with the Euro Stoxx 50 rising 1.1% and the FTSE 100 gaining 1.6%. In contrast, Asian markets closed lower, with the Nikkei 225 down -1.1% and the Hang Seng falling -1.3%. Locally, the ASX 200 extended its losing streak, ending -0.2% lower, its longest run of daily declines since September 2018.
- US bond markets rallied as the recent surge in oil prices stalled - the 2 year yield falling 8bps and the 10 year down 6bps. Futures pricing again reversed course, implying an 11% probability of a rate cut by year end. Elsewhere, the 10 year Bund yield fell 7bps and the 10 year Gilt declined 6bps.
- Australian government bonds moved higher, tracking the previous night's rally in US Treasuries. The 3-year yield rose 8bps and the 10-year increased 7bps. Swaps price a 76% probability of a rate hike at next week's meeting, with the implied terminal cash rate for year-end at 4.85%.
- In FX markets, the USD weakened, with the DXY down 0.9%. The Australian dollar rose 1.2% to 0.7201 against the USD and also strengthened against other major currencies. The Yen saw a sharp move, with USD/JPY falling -2.4% following Japanese intervention in FX markets.
- The expiry of the June Brent contract helped soften the recent surge in oil prices. Brent fell -3.4% to US$114/bbl, while WTI declined -1.3% to US$106/bbl, though Dated Brent remained elevated at US$123/bbl. Gold rebounded, rising 1.5% as the USD fell, while iron ore gained 0.7%, with higher Middle East related costs offsetting the resolution of the BHP-CMRG dispute.

International Data

With Governor Bailey pushing back against expectations for more aggressive tightening, the BoE left policy unchanged at 3.75% by an 8-1 vote, with Chief Economist Huw Pill the sole dissenter, favouring a modest hike to curb second-round inflation risks. The policy statement retained a hawkish bias, although policymakers appeared increasingly concerned about growth and loosening labour market conditions, which could see underlying inflation pressures ease over time.

The ECB Governing Council opted to maintain its policy stance, delivering no significant surprises. The statement seemed to place greater emphasis on the risks of second-round effects, which the ECB is monitoring particularly closely. The ECB acknowledged that "upside risks to inflation and downside risks to growth have intensified". Nevertheless, this was not sufficient to convince any policy makers to take action at this policy meeting - the decision to hold was unanimous.

US GDP gained 2% on an annualised basis in Q1 according to the first estimate. Personal consumption weakened further to 1.6% annualised. However, business investment surged almost 9% on the AI infrastructure build out, and government spending experienced a partial reversal of Q4's shutdown induced weakness. Net exports subtracted 1.3ppts from growth in Q1. In March, personal spending gained 0.9%. Personal income growth was robust, however, gaining 0.6%. The US employment cost index was largely as expected in Q1, total compensation rising 0.9%.

Euro Area GDP rose 0.1% in Q1. The unemployment rate meanwhile edged down to 6.2%. In April, consumer inflation jumped 1.0% as the Middle East conflict impacted energy prices. Annual growth remained near target, at 2.2%yr.

Local Data

In Australia, March private credit rose a stronger than expected 0.7%mt, suggesting continued resilience despite tighter monetary policy and a more uncertain economic backdrop (see here).

First Impressions: NZIER Quarterly Survey of Business Opinion, March quarter 2026

Business confidence fell sharply after the Iran conflict, with the gloom deepening over the course of March.

Key results (seasonally adjusted)

General business situation: +1 (Prev: +39)

Trading activity, past three months: 0 (Prev: -3)

Trading activity, next three months: +13 (Prev: +22)

Average selling prices, past three months: +22 (Prev: +13)

Average selling prices, next three months: +43 (Prev: +25)

Business confidence has unsurprisingly taken a knock since the Iran war kicked off at the end of February. Indeed, given the fast-moving situation, the headline results of the Quarterly Survey of Business Opinion understate the degree of the shock. Firms noted ongoing cost pressures, and a growing number of them are intending to raise their prices, but their ability to do so remains mixed. Overall, today's survey probably underscores rather than deepens the dilemma that the RBNZ will be facing in the coming months.

Sentiment about the general business situation fell from +39 to +1, the lowest reading since September 2024 – and that doesn't come close to telling the full story. Surveying began on 6 March, and the initial batch of responses was a net 34% positive. After the first reminder in mid-March, the next batch was a net 7% negative, and the last batch at the end of March was a whopping net 57% negative. NZIER didn't provide this breakdown for the other survey questions, but we can reasonably assume that there was a similar deterioration over the course of the month.

The own-activity measure for the last quarter actually picked up a little compared to the December survey, emphasising that the economy was regaining some momentum before the Iran war. Expectations for the next quarter fell from +22 to +13, though again the picture is likely to have looked significantly worse by the end of the survey period.

A net 37% of firms reported a rise in their costs, unchanged from last quarter. Expected costs for the next quarter were a net 45%, up from 39% in December – not a big increase, but this measure was already at elevated levels.

A net 22% of firms increased their prices last quarter, compared to 13% in December. More notably, a net 43% plan to raise their prices in the next quarter, the highest reading since September 2023. Firms' ability to raise their prices remained mixed across sectors though: for instance, builders reported a sharp rise in costs but a net 25% lowered their own prices last quarter.

Employment was down a net 5% past quarter, after a brief pickup in December, and hiring intentions also turned negative again. That said, there is evidence of labour shortages emerging again for skilled roles, though not for unskilled ones.

China is set to benefit from global energy unrest

Chinese exports will receive a material boost from high oil prices. The consumer remains a risk to GDP growth, however.

China's economy has begun 2026 in good health despite the conflict in the Middle East, registering annual GDP growth of 5.0% in Q1. In time, recent developments are likely to prove a net positive for China, spurring greater demand for green technology across developed and developing markets.

Not only were the March readings for the official NBS manufacturing and services PMI's favourable, registering increases to 50.4 and 50.1, but the partial data through February and March showed the beginning of a long-awaited stabilisation in consumer demand and turn for housing investment, retail sales growth beating estimates in February at 2.8%ytd (although growth slowed again in March to 2.4%ytd) and the decline in property investment almost halving from -17.2%ytd in December to -11.2%ytd in March. The latter result is particularly welcome given construction activity has declined almost 40% since end-2021.

In the short term, an end to the sharp decline in property investment will add meaningfully to economic growth given the sector still makes up circa 15% of the aggregate economy. In the medium to long-term though, not only will investment activity need to expand sustainably, but wealth must follow. As yet, there is no evidence of price growth, with new and existing home prices falling a further 0.2% in March.

We remain circumspect on the rate at which retail sales growth will accelerate from here near term, anticipating it is unlikely to return to trend, let alone outperform, until pro-active fiscal policy comes into effect. Authorities signalled an intention to act at the March NPC, but detail has been scarce since.

It is potentially the case that the Government wants clean air for reforms, which the Middle East conflict and the upcoming May meeting between President Xi and President Trump precludes for now. Though authorities may also feel the domestic economy has been given additional time to find its own path without intervention. The response of consumers and businesses across developed and developing markets to the current surge in energy prices will almost surely be an acceleration in demand for renewable energy products and electric vehicles, which China is globally dominant in and has ample spare capacity to produce and ship.

Even without a further material improvement in domestic demand, the short-term downside risks for Chinese GDP growth are receding thanks to this catalyst. Note too, the positive impulse is likely to prove lasting as geopolitical uncertainty over energy supply produces a national imperative to reduce reliance on the Middle East, particularly amongst south-east Asia, Latin America and Africa, where Chinese firms are experiencing particularly rapid demand growth.

Indeed, the learnings from this crisis, and what is expected to be a favourable result from the May meeting between President Xi and President Trump, could also skew long-term risks for Chinese growth and sentiment to the upside. This is not to say that 5.0% growth is probable for 2026–2028, but rather that growth is increasingly likely to stabilise around 4.5% instead of 4.0%.

Attaining annual growth of 5.0% over successive years would require material gains for trade, industrial investment, property construction and household consumption. The latter would necessitate a dramatic turn in actual and expected wealth and sentiment, however. While not impossible, given the poor starting point on both fronts, this is best considered a low probability and long-coming upside risk.

Sooner than later though, the favourable shift in global opportunities and risks for China is likely to support stronger demand in Chinese financial instruments. Yields and credit spreads will remain compressed, enticing additional real economy investment, and equities should see sustained inflows of new capital.

Paired with continued strength in the trade balance and the returns from offshore investments currently being made by Chinese firms, demand for the renminbi will grow in depth and breadth. Given the diversity of Chinese interests across the globe, currency gains are expected on a trade-weighted basis but will be most acute bilaterally versus the US dollar – the only currency Chinese entities look to be reducing their exposure to. Importantly, trade-weighted currency gains are likely to be proportional to China’s competitiveness opportunities, and so should not materially narrow the current account.

This analysis was initially released in the April edition of Westpac Market Outlook.

MORNING REPORT

Today's economic developments and market movements.

Key themes

Market sentiment diverged across regions as Iran's new supreme leader reaffirmed control over the Strait of Hormuz and President Trump maintained the US naval blockade in the absence of a nuclear deal. Elsewhere, stronger US GDP growth supported sentiment, while the BoE and ECB held rates steady.

US and European stocks rose on strong data and earnings, while the ASX 200 extended its longest run of daily declines since 2018.

Overseas bond markets rallied as oil prices eased, with US and European yields falling.

The USD weakened as the Yen strengthened sharply following Japanese FX market intervention.

Oil prices eased amid the expiry of the June Brent contract, while gold rebounded on USD weakness.

Financial Markets

Market sentiment diverged across regions overnight. In the Middle East, Iran's new supreme leader Khamenei vowed not to give up the country's nuclear or missile technologies and reiterated that Iran would retain control of the Strait of Hormuz. Reports also suggested President Trump had been briefed on new military options in Iran, having reinforced that the US would not lift its naval blockade without a nuclear deal.

Elsewhere, an acceleration in US GDP growth to 2% annualised in Q1 supported US equities, while the Bank of England and European Central Bank both left policy rates unchanged, delivering no major surprises but continuing to highlight upside risks to inflation.

- Equity markets showed clear regional divergence. In the US, solid GDP growth and strong corporate earnings lifted markets, with the S&P 500 posting its strongest monthly performance in more than five years and rising 1.0% on the day. The Dow Jones gained 1.6%, while the NASDAQ 100 lagged slightly, up 0.9%.
- European equities also advanced, supported by steady central bank policy, with the Euro Stoxx 50 rising 1.1% and the FTSE 100 gaining 1.6%. In contrast, Asian markets closed lower, with the Nikkei 225 down -1.1% and the Hang Seng falling -1.3%. Locally, the ASX 200 extended its losing streak, ending -0.2% lower, its longest run of daily declines since September 2018.
- US bond markets rallied as the recent surge in oil prices stalled - the 2 year yield falling 8bps and the 10 year down 6bps. Futures pricing again reversed course, implying an 11% probability of a rate cut by year end. Elsewhere, the 10 year Bund yield fell 7bps and the 10 year Gilt declined 6bps.
- Australian government bonds moved higher, tracking the previous night's rally in US Treasuries. The 3-year yield rose 8bps and the 10-year increased 7bps. Swaps price a 76% probability of a rate hike at next week's meeting, with the implied terminal cash rate for year-end at 4.85%.
- In FX markets, the USD weakened, with the DXY down 0.9%. The Australian dollar rose 1.2% to 0.7201 against the USD and also strengthened against other major currencies. The Yen saw a sharp move, with USD/JPY falling -2.4% following Japanese intervention in FX markets.
- The expiry of the June Brent contract helped soften the recent surge in oil prices. Brent fell -3.4% to US$114/bbl, while WTI declined -1.3% to US$106/bbl, though Dated Brent remained elevated at US$123/bbl. Gold rebounded, rising 1.5% as the USD fell, while iron ore gained 0.7%, with higher Middle East related costs offsetting the resolution of the BHP-CMRG dispute.

International Data

With Governor Bailey pushing back against expectations for more aggressive tightening, the BoE left policy unchanged at 3.75% by an 8-1 vote, with Chief Economist Huw Pill the sole dissenter, favouring a modest hike to curb second-round inflation risks. The policy statement retained a hawkish bias, although policymakers appeared increasingly concerned about growth and loosening labour market conditions, which could see underlying inflation pressures ease over time.

The ECB Governing Council opted to maintain its policy stance, delivering no significant surprises. The statement seemed to place greater emphasis on the risks of second-round effects, which the ECB is monitoring particularly closely. The ECB acknowledged that "upside risks to inflation and downside risks to growth have intensified". Nevertheless, this was not sufficient to convince any policy makers to take action at this policy meeting - the decision to hold was unanimous.

US GDP gained 2% on an annualised basis in Q1 according to the first estimate. Personal consumption weakened further to 1.6% annualised. However, business investment surged almost 9% on the AI infrastructure build out, and government spending experienced a partial reversal of Q4's shutdown induced weakness. Net exports subtracted 1.3ppts from growth in Q1. In March, personal spending gained 0.9%. Personal income growth was robust, however, gaining 0.6%. The US employment cost index was largely as expected in Q1, total compensation rising 0.9%.

Euro Area GDP rose 0.1% in Q1. The unemployment rate meanwhile edged down to 6.2%. In April, consumer inflation jumped 1.0% as the Middle East conflict impacted energy prices. Annual growth remained near target, at 2.2%yr.

Local Data

In Australia, March private credit rose a stronger than expected 0.7%mth, suggesting continued resilience despite tighter monetary policy and a more uncertain economic backdrop (see here).

Financial Markets

Market sentiment diverged across regions overnight. In the Middle East, Iran's new supreme leader Khamenei vowed not to give up the country's nuclear or missile technologies and reiterated that Iran would retain control of the Strait of Hormuz. Reports also suggested President Trump had been briefed on new military options in Iran, having reinforced that the US would not lift its naval blockade without a nuclear deal.

Elsewhere, an acceleration in US GDP growth to 2% annualised in Q1 supported US equities, while the Bank of England and European Central Bank both left policy rates unchanged, delivering no major surprises but continuing to highlight upside risks to inflation.

- Equity markets showed clear regional divergence. In the US, solid GDP growth and strong corporate earnings lifted markets, with the S&P 500 posting its strongest monthly performance in more than five years and rising 1.0% on the day. The Dow Jones gained 1.6%, while the NASDAQ 100 lagged slightly, up 0.9%.
- European equities also advanced, supported by steady central bank policy, with the Euro Stoxx 50 rising 1.1% and the FTSE 100 gaining 1.6%. In contrast, Asian markets closed lower, with the Nikkei 225 down -1.1% and the Hang Seng falling -1.3%. Locally, the ASX 200 extended its losing streak, ending -0.2% lower, its longest run of daily declines since September 2018.
- US bond markets rallied as the recent surge in oil prices stalled - the 2 year yield falling 8bps and the 10 year down 6bps. Futures pricing again reversed course, implying an 11% probability of a rate cut by year end. Elsewhere, the 10 year Bund yield fell 7bps and the 10 year Gilt declined 6bps.
- Australian government bonds moved higher, tracking the previous night's rally in US Treasuries. The 3-year yield rose 8bps and the 10-year increased 7bps. Swaps price a 76% probability of a rate hike at next week's meeting, with the implied terminal cash rate for year-end at 4.85%.
- In FX markets, the USD weakened, with the DXY down 0.9%. The Australian dollar rose 1.2% to 0.7201 against the USD and also strengthened against other major currencies. The Yen saw a sharp move, with USD/JPY falling -2.4% following Japanese intervention in FX markets.
- The expiry of the June Brent contract helped soften the recent surge in oil prices. Brent fell -3.4% to US$114/bbl, while WTI declined -1.3% to US$106/bbl, though Dated Brent remained elevated at US$123/bbl. Gold rebounded, rising 1.5% as the USD fell, while iron ore gained 0.7%, with higher Middle East related costs offsetting the resolution of the BHP-CMRG dispute.

International Data

With Governor Bailey pushing back against expectations for more aggressive tightening, the BoE left policy unchanged at 3.75% by an 8-1 vote, with Chief Economist Huw Pill the sole dissenter, favouring a modest hike to curb second-round inflation risks. The policy statement retained a hawkish bias, although policymakers appeared increasingly concerned about growth and loosening labour market conditions, which could see underlying inflation pressures ease over time.

The ECB Governing Council opted to maintain its policy stance, delivering no significant surprises. The statement seemed to place greater emphasis on the risks of second-round effects, which the ECB is monitoring particularly closely. The ECB acknowledged that "upside risks to inflation and downside risks to growth have intensified". Nevertheless, this was not sufficient to convince any policy makers to take action at this policy meeting - the decision to hold was unanimous.

US GDP gained 2% on an annualised basis in Q1 according to the first estimate. Personal consumption weakened further to 1.6% annualised. However, business investment surged almost 9% on the AI infrastructure build out, and government spending experienced a partial reversal of Q4's shutdown induced weakness. Net exports subtracted 1.3ppts from growth in Q1. In March, personal spending gained 0.9%. Personal income growth was robust, however, gaining 0.6%. The US employment cost index was largely as expected in Q1, total compensation rising 0.9%.

Euro Area GDP rose 0.1% in Q1. The unemployment rate meanwhile edged down to 6.2%. In April, consumer inflation jumped 1.0% as the Middle East conflict impacted energy prices. Annual growth remained near target, at 2.2%yr.

Local Data

In Australia, March private credit rose a stronger than expected 0.7%mt, suggesting continued resilience despite tighter monetary policy and a more uncertain economic backdrop (see here).

March CPI – all about fuel, too early for pass through Headline March Quarter CPI 1.4%qtr/4.1%yr; Trimmed Mean 0.8%qtr/3.5%yr. Monthly March CPI 1.1%moth/4.6%yr, Trimmed Mean 0.3%moth/3.3%yr.

- Headline inflation being boosted by surging fuel prices.
- Core inflation was moderating before the Gulf Crisis and, at this stage, there is very limited sign of any passthrough to from higher fuel costs to broader price pressures.

- Today's inflation update locks in a May rate increase and while we expect to see two more after this, a lot will depend on just how much demand destruction we see because of higher prices.

The CPI gained 1.4% in the March quarter, on par with market consensus and close to Westpac's expectation of 1.46%. The annual pace of headline inflation, at 4.1%yr, is accelerating again; it was 2.1%yr in mid-2025 lifting to 3.6%yr in December. The acceleration through 2025 was mainly the unwinding of energy rebates but in early 2026 it is the crisis in the Gulf, and resulting surge in auto fuel prices, that is driving the acceleration. However, the cost-of-living assistance and surge in auto fuel has a limited impact on core inflation and so these measures take on more critical role in assessing the current pace of inflation.

The Trimmed Mean (TM) lifted 0.8% in the March quarter. Westpac and the market expected 0.9% (Westpac 0.93%). However, in our preview we highlighted that calculating the quarterly TM based on historical survey timing, which the ABS is doing given the short history for a number of series, pointed to a small downside risk to our estimate. The annual pace lifted very modestly from 3.4%yr to 3.5%yr.

The monthly trimmed mean increased 0.3%moth, which held the annual pace flat at 3.3%yr for the fourth consecutive month; the six-month annualised pace eased back a touch to 3.5%yr from 3.9%yr in December. It is worth noting that at this point in time the annual pace of the monthly CPI is tracking under that of the quarterly CPI.

Prior to the Gulf Crisis, the momentum in core inflation had been moderating.

Headline Inflation

The headline Monthly CPI lifted 1.1% in March to be up 4.6% in the year. This was quite a bit softer than our estimate of 1.3%_{mt}/4.7%_{yr}. Worthy of note was that auto fuel was softer than expected, lifting 32.8% vs. 36.4% expected. More concerning to the outlook for core inflation was that dwelling prices lifted 0.5% in the month compared to our expectation for a more modest 0.2% increase. The ABS did note this increase in the annual pace was due to project home builders raising base prices to pass through higher labour and materials costs over the year but made no comment on the monthly increase.

Trimmed Mean Inflation

For the RBA, as noted by Westpac's Chief Economist Luci Ellis in "RBA May hike locked in", there was some scattered signs of pass-through to other prices, even though March was very early days for this to be evident and most likely it is business taking the opportunity to raise prices in front of looming cost increases. However, it was not widespread and as we covered before, electricity prices have benefited from Australian local gas prices separating themselves from global LNG prices (the local price is currently around $10/GJ so under the government's proposed $12/GJ cap) and the rising share of renewables supported by storage which has seen lower than average summer electricity prices.

Source: , Macrobond, Westpac Economics

Nevertheless, we still expect the RBA to raise the cash rate at their May meeting. Given recent communication from the Bank has characterised the supply shock as 'further exacerbating existing capacity pressures' with future demand destruction just a possibility, we see two further interest rate hikes after May. It is true that the Trimmed Mean for the March quarter was on the RBA forecast of 3.5%yr but to achieve their estimate of 3.7%yr for the June quarter we will have to see a step down in the quarterly pace of 0.8%, a bridge too far we think given the current shock we are experiencing. Our current forecast for the June quarter Trimmed Mean is 1.0%qtr.

We are preparing a more detailed bulletin outlining any revisions to our inflation profile once we have processed all the quarterly and monthly data. But we can note that for the March quarter market services ex volatile inflation surprised with a flat print in the quarter with only a very modest lift in the annual pace to 3.4%yr from 3.3%yr. We are expecting it to pick up from here but due to modest wage outcomes, and better productivity in the market sector, we see this acceleration being capped around 4%yr in the second half of 2026, tracking the lift in Trimmed Mean inflation.

Below is the table comparing the quarterly details with our published estimates. We will cover the reasons for the small variations in our review of the monthly CPI as that is where the differences lie.

Monthly March CPI in more detail.

The Israel/US assault on Iran began in the morning of the 28th of February with most of the price and the resulting jump in auto fuel prices above $2/l occurred in the week ending the 8th of March. As such the March CPI would have been very early days for much pass-through to be evident. As noted in earlier bulletins we have recorded price increases for building products, but these did not take effect until 1st April.

Nevertheless, the March CPI did show some scattered signs of pass-through to other prices. Home building and vehicle repair costs, along with downstream insurance inflation, all picked up in the month. Services related to audio-visual, computing and telecommunications also increased in the month, which for telecommunications went against the run we have seen in recent months. There were some promising signs in softer monthly prices of appliances and some other household goods which we will be closely watching to see if they are reversed in the months ahead.

In terms of downside surprises in March, the largest was for auto fuel at 32.8% vs 36.4% expected. We expect fuel to be flat in April with prices falling through May due to the delayed impact of the excise cut and lower crude oil prices in monthly averages. If the excise cut is reversed on July 1, as currently planned, then auto fuel is set to surge 17% through the month of July.

Also, holiday travel was softer, -1.4% vs. 0.7% expected, on the back of a -2.2% decline in domestic travel.

Most other item outcomes were either close to our estimates or stronger. Housing overall was on par with our 0.2% estimate with a more modest than expected 0.2% increase in rents being offset by a 0.5% increase in dwelling costs. With rising inputs cost for construction this may be an earlier sign we should be expecting a stronger lift in dwelling prices in the months ahead.

Clothing & footwear (−1.9%) did not fall as much as expected (−4.2%) with garments having a smaller than expected seasonal fall (−2.5%) while footwear fell −1.9% and accessories & clothing services fell −0.6%. It does appear that the gold boost to accessories through jewellery may have come to an end with a reported −0.6% in March.

We also did not see the usual seasonal fall in alcohol (0.7% vs. −0.2% expected) which offset a softer than expected rise in tobacco (1.1% vs. 1.4%).

Communication prices lifted 0.5% in the month when we expected a small fall (−0.1%) due to an outsized 3.6% increase in postal services, the largest monthly increase since the 4.2% increase in July 2024.

With the rise in construction costs we will be keeping a close eye on insurance premiums. Insurance surprised us with a 0.7% increase in March following hot on the heels of a 1.4% increase in January and a 0.4% increase in February. Combined with a 0.9% increase in deposit & loan facilities and a 0.8% increase in other financial services, insurance & other financial services lifted 0.8% vs. 0.4% expected.

These small but reasonably broad upside surprises is something we will be watching closely in the months ahead to see if they are early signs of pass-through from higher fuel costs as well as opportunistic price increases give the current backdrop.

ECONOMIC BULLETIN

Preview of Q1 labour market surveys:
6 May, 10:45am.

29 Apr 2026 | Michael Gordon, Senior Economist | +64 9 336 5670 | michael.gordon@westpac.co.nz

Steady for now

- We expect the unemployment rate to hold steady at 5.4% for the March quarter.
- Higher-frequency indicators have pointed to a modest lift in jobs in recent months, though not outpacing the growth in the working-age population.
- While we expect to see a small downward correction in the HLFS employment measure, this doesn't alter the general picture.
- Wage growth is likely to have remained subdued, given the existing slack in the labour market.
- Our forecasts are a little softer than what the RBNZ expected in its February statement. However, the fast-moving developments in the Middle East mean that the RBNZ's forward view on the labour market will likely have shifted since then.

	Q4 actual	Q1 forecast
	Quarter	Westpac	RBNZ
Household Labour Force Survey
Unemployment rate	5.4	5.4	5.3
Employment growth	0.5	-0.1	0.4
Participation rate	70.5	70.3	70.5
Labour Cost Index
All sectors, ordinary time	0.4	0.5	-
Private sector, ordinary time	0.5	0.4	0.4

We expect next Wednesday's labour market surveys to show a steady in the jobs market over the March quarter. There's a growing range of evidence that the economy was starting to find its footing again in the early part of this year, at least up until the Iran conflict. But with the labour market tending to lag the broader economic cycle, we should expect jobs growth and wage demands to remain muted at this stage.

We're forecasting the unemployment rate to hold steady at 5.4% for the March quarter. We do expect a small drop in employment and participation this time, reversing a surprising jump in the previous quarter, but we're less wedded to that part of the forecast; the unemployment rate is the key variable to watch. We expect wage growth to continue running at about 2% annualised, reflecting the degree of slack in the jobs market and the moderation in inflation in recent years.

Our picks are a little softer than the Reserve Bank's February Monetary Policy Statement forecasts, which assumed faster jobs growth and a decline in the unemployment rate by this point. At the margin, a result in line with our forecasts would strengthen the case for caution before lifting the OCR. But the bigger issue for the RBNZ will be what has happened since the MPS: the Middle East oil shock will hinder the economic recovery, potentially leading to delays in hiring, layoffs and business failures. We've moved away from our pre-conflict view that 5.4% would mark the peak in the unemployment rate for this cycle.

Employment growth and unemployment rate

Details.

A range of indicators have pointed to the labour market stabilising in recent months:

- The Westpac-McDermott Miller Employment Confidence Index improved in the March quarter.
- Jobseeker benefit recipients were broadly stable in seasonally adjusted terms.
- Job advertisements have been ticking up and are around 10% higher than a year ago, although they remain well below their pre-Covid levels.

The best evidence comes from the Monthly Employment Indicator (MEI), which is drawn from income tax data and provides a comprehensive record of the number of jobs. There are some conceptual differences between the MEI and the quarterly HLFS, but in most cases any gap between the two is likely to reflect sampling error.

The MEI on its own suggests around a 0.2% rise in employment over the March quarter, which would be about in line with the growth in the working-age population. However, we're expecting to see a small dip in employment in the HLFS, accompanied by a drop in the participation rate. The reason is that the December quarter HLFS showed a surprisingly strong 0.5% rise in employment and a lift in participation, even as the unemployment rate also rose. Looking closer, most of the surprise was driven by a sharp rise in employment among the under-25s, which wasn't apparent in the MEI. We suspect that the HLFS captured an unusually large number of students who were working during the summer holidays, which should then return to normal as the new academic year begins. We generally recommend focusing on the unemployment rate as the key metric from the HLFS, as it's less vulnerable to sampling errors.

Quarterly employment change

While cost-of-living pressures are rearing up again as a concern for households, the existing degree of slack in the labour market means there's little room to negotiate larger pay increases. Business surveys have suggested that skilled workers are getting harder to find again, which may reflect the more subdued net migration trends in recent times. But unlike in the post-Covid boom, there's little evidence that employers have been willing to bid up to attract or retain workers.

We expect a 0.5% rise in the Labour Cost Index (LCI) for the March quarter, leaving annual growth at around 2%. Our forecast for private sector wage growth is slightly more subdued at 0.4%, in line with the RBNZ's forecast. The public sector tends to see larger pay increases in March quarters – we've pencilled in a 0.8% rise, though this would still see it slowing from 2.2% to 2.0% on an annual basis.

Labour Cost Index wage growth forecasts

The fast-moving developments in the Middle East mean that the labour market surveys will already be somewhat dated on their release. We'll be looking to higher-frequency data in the coming months, such as the MEI (and the weekly snapshots provided by Stats NZ) to gauge whether the conflict is affecting firms' hiring decisions. Unfortunately there's no equivalent high-frequency data on wages; while workers would no doubt like to see cost-of-living adjustments, it may be difficult to secure them in the current environment.

Federal Budget: On the upside of the revenue cycle, the challenge is policy timing

With only a modest budget windfall, changes in the Budget bottom line will hinge on discretionary decisions, which history shows are triggered once labour-market risks become material.

- Higher commodity prices and inflation – among the so-called “parameter variations” that drive government budget outcomes – are expected to deliver a net fiscal windfall, despite higher costs driven by elevated inflation, slower growth, and rising unemployment. Treasury is likely to publish a net improvement of around $23bn across the forward estimates. This is less than the net improvement of $55bn we expect will eventually be published based on our less conservative commodity price (and thus revenue) forecasts.
- Given this relatively small upgrade, the change in the published budget bottom line will largely be determined by discretionary policy decisions. Surprisingly, discretionary fiscal policy has been pro-cyclical over the past 30 years: discretionary measures tending to expand when the nominal economy delivers windfalls and to tighten when there are shortfalls.
- Only during major crises (such as the GFC and COVID) has discretionary fiscal policy played a significant counter-cyclical role. However, fiscal measures have tended to be late and slow to unwind, with the maximum ‘policy impact’ occurring when the recovery was under way and improving economic conditions were delivering revenue windfalls – a lesson perhaps for the current conflict.
- Our analysis also shows that discretionary fiscal policy is highly responsive to labour market risks. Policy has historically become much more activist once employment growth forecasts are downgraded by at least 0.35ppts across the forward estimates. A change of this magnitude is consistent with the economic downgrades we expect this Budget.
- As a result, the scale of any discretionary fiscal response is likely to depend critically on Treasury’s assessment of the labour market fallout from the conflict in the Middle East. Given the nature of the current oil price shock, a response that is not targeted and temporary risks exacerbating the cycle.

The Middle East crisis and associated global energy shock will have a complex and varied impact on Federal government finances. Higher-than-assumed commodity prices and elevated inflation will continue to lift nominal incomes and tax receipts. But the Budget impact of the Middle East conflict does not stop there. In a shock like the current one, where economic and employment growth slow, unemployment ticks higher and inflation accelerates, welfare payments and the cost of government rise as well.

We expect economic growth to slow materially through 2026 to just 1%yr, down from 2.6%yr in calendar 2025. The unemployment rate is forecast to drift higher to almost 5% by year-end, around ½ppt above our pre-conflict profile, and remain elevated through 2027. Combined with accelerating inflation, now expected to peak at around 5.4%yr in Q2 2026 (up from around 3.8%yr expected prior to the conflict), this will push government payments onto a permanently higher path in nominal terms.

The Starting Position is Strong

On Friday 24 April the Department of Finance released the final set of monthly financial statements ahead of the May 12 Budget, and they did not disappoint. The underlying cash balance is currently running around $17bn ahead of the profile set out in the December MYEFO, published only a few months ago. This upside has been driven by the cyclical upswing which is boosting tax collections and making it harder for the Government to get capital out the door because of capacity constraints in certain industries (most notably construction). Looking at the rolling 12-month cash balance, the steady deterioration observed since March 2024 has now stabilised, and we expect an improvement from here.

Underlying Cash Balance

Cash tax collections are running around $7.2bn ahead of profile. This reflects stronger-than-expected personal income tax collections (around $5bn) and company tax receipts (around $2bn). We expect upside surprises to continue once miners make wash-up payments in May, reflecting higher commodity prices across the 2025 calendar year – particularly for gold.

The cyclical upswing is also making it harder for the government to get money out the door. Payments are running around $10bn below forecast, including $2bn in investment in non-financial assets (defence, IT and infrastructure) and $4bn in grants and subsidies to the states, reflecting slower progress payments. In addition, the headline deficit is ahead of profile with off-budget spending (including CEFC and Housing Australia) coming in around $3bn below profile.

Overall, this points to a meaningful improvement in the bottom line, with the deficit now tracking at close to half of what was previously expected.

Payments Pressures Rise in a Stagflationary Environment

But the outlook becomes more challenging from here. Parameter variations will push payments higher mechanically, with inflation lifting both service delivery costs and the indexation of programs such as pensions and income support. We estimate this will add roughly $11 billion to spending over the five years to FY2030.

In addition, slower activity and employment growth, alongside a higher unemployment rate, will raise social payments and reduce income-tax collections, at a cost of around $6bn over the same period. In total, these forces are likely to worsen the budget position by around $17bn.

Commodity Revenues More Than Offset Higher Costs

However, these costs are more than offset, at least initially, by higher tax collections. Higher gold prices, elevated inflation and direct spillovers from the Middle East conflict into global commodity markets are set to lift company tax receipts by around $60bn over the next five years, with roughly $20bn attributable to conflict-driven commodity price gains.

But much of that uplift is unlikely to appear in full in the 12 May Federal Budget. Treasury's standard approach assumes commodity export prices fall from current spot levels back toward long-run fundamentals, typically over four quarters (and eight quarters for gold). On those more conservative assumptions, the implied windfall is lower at around $29.5bn over five years, with the remainder only materialising in later budgets or final budget outcomes.

This familiar pattern, conservative commodity price assumptions up front followed by stronger-than-expected company tax receipts down the track, has become a defining feature of Australia's recent fiscal narrative. Over the four years to the end of FY2025, company tax receipts were a staggering $168bn higher than projected in the 2022 Pre-Election Fiscal Outlook (or an average of $42bn higher per year).

Delivering the Budget a Temporary Windfall

Under Treasury's standard assumptions, what will be published on 12 May, the net gain to the Budget is closer to $23bn over the next five years, with net gains frontloaded, shifting to negative over the final two years of the forward estimates. Under our less conservative commodity-price forecast, the windfall is materially larger, closer to $55bn over the same period.

Discretionary Policy: The Key Swing Factor

The big unknown at this stage is how the government chooses to respond to the economic and social fallout from the conflict in the Middle East and how this is balanced against other reforms, most notably those aimed at reining in spending on the NDIS and promoting intergenerational equity. Given relatively small upgrades, the Federal government will be navigating uncharted waters where policy decisions will determine whether the budget position ultimately improves or deteriorates.

This is different from the historic norm where the impact of variations driven by changes to the economic outlook (red bars in the chart below) have been significantly larger than the impact of policy changes (purple bars).

Economic variations and discretionary policy by round

Impact on the UCB over relevant forwards, $billions.

Source: PBO fiscal data, Macrobond, Westpac Economics

Looking at government behaviour over the past 30 years, several clear regularities emerge.

First, discretionary fiscal policy has generally been pro-cyclical. That is, discretionary government decisions add to the fiscal impulse when the nominal economy and commodity prices deliver a budget windfall and vice versa. This pattern was especially pronounced in the pre-pandemic decade and in the aftermath of COVID, with discretionary government policy adding materially to the overall fiscal impulse.

For example, immediately prior to the pandemic discretionary policy changes improved the budget while variations driven by the nominal economy were subtracting from the budget – in other words, the nominal economy was surprising on the downside. This combination of tighter policy when the economy and commodity prices underwhelm likely contributed to the period of sluggish growth and below RBA target underlying inflation recorded at the time.

On average across the budget rounds since the 1996 post-election budget, around 75% of the budget windfalls have been spent.

Note that there are instances when the nominal economy could be growing more strongly than the real economy, such as when commodity prices are rising and inflation is elevated. In this world, “pro-cyclical” policy could be more justifiable, only where the real economy is softening.

Secondly, fiscal policy becomes counter-cyclical during crises, such as the GFC and COVID. Importantly, these episodes are typically characterised by a fiscal overshoot, with fiscal expansion persisting even as the shock dissipates and economic conditions improve. For example, peak policy impact around COVID was in the 2023FY, when a recovery was gaining traction and economic variations and nominal income growth were surprising to the upside.

Economic variations and discretionary policy*

Impact on the UCB, Rolling 3 year sum, $billions.

Source: PBO fiscal data, Macrobond, Westpac Economics

*shaded periods denote counter-cyclical policy where variations and discretionary policy work in opposite direction.

Finally, discretionary spending has historically been highly responsive to labour market risks.

Our modelling of how fiscal policy responds to changes in economic conditions and forecasts shows that policy is particularly sensitive to expectations for employment growth and unemployment, and that this response is non-linear.

Using historical budget data, we find statistically significant threshold effects. When employment growth is downgraded by at least 0.35ppts in a single budget round, governments have tended to shift into a more activist fiscal regime. A downgrade closer to ½ppt (which is consistent with Westpac Economics' recent downgrades) has, in the past, been associated with discretionary fiscal packages of at least $10bn over the forward estimates.

Taken together, this suggests that at least some of the windfall is likely to be spent, and possibly a large fraction of it. The scale of any discretionary response will depend critically on Treasury's assessment of the labour-market implications of the conflict in the Middle East. While there is no sense of panic within government, policymakers are clearly alert to the downside risks.

What next

Before the May 12 budget we will publish our final estimate of the bottom line including announced measures. As noted, unlike the most recent history, overall improvements will hinge on government policy rather than the economy. In addition, we will publish what this means for the national (federal and state) fiscal impulse going forward.

MORNING REPORT

Today's economic developments and market movements.

Key themes

Market sentiment diverged across regions as Iran's new supreme leader reaffirmed control over the Strait of Hormuz and President Trump maintained the US naval blockade in the absence of a nuclear deal. Elsewhere, stronger US GDP growth supported sentiment, while the BoE and ECB held rates steady.

US and European stocks rose on strong data and earnings, while the ASX 200 extended its longest run of daily declines since 2018.

Overseas bond markets rallied as oil prices eased, with US and European yields falling.

The USD weakened as the Yen strengthened sharply following Japanese FX market intervention.

Oil prices eased amid the expiry of the June Brent contract, while gold rebounded on USD weakness.

Financial Markets

Market sentiment diverged across regions overnight. In the Middle East, Iran's new supreme leader Khamenei vowed not to give up the country's nuclear or missile technologies and reiterated that Iran would retain control of the Strait of Hormuz. Reports also suggested President Trump had been briefed on new military options in Iran, having reinforced that the US would not lift its naval blockade without a nuclear deal.

Elsewhere, an acceleration in US GDP growth to 2% annualised in Q1 supported US equities, while the Bank of England and European Central Bank both left policy rates unchanged, delivering no major surprises but continuing to highlight upside risks to inflation.

- Equity markets showed clear regional divergence. In the US, solid GDP growth and strong corporate earnings lifted markets, with the S&P 500 posting its strongest monthly performance in more than five years and rising 1.0% on the day. The Dow Jones gained 1.6%, while the NASDAQ 100 lagged slightly, up 0.9%.
- European equities also advanced, supported by steady central bank policy, with the Euro Stoxx 50 rising 1.1% and the FTSE 100 gaining 1.6%. In contrast, Asian markets closed lower, with the Nikkei 225 down -1.1% and the Hang Seng falling -1.3%. Locally, the ASX 200 extended its losing streak, ending -0.2% lower, its longest run of daily declines since September 2018.
- US bond markets rallied as the recent surge in oil prices stalled - the 2 year yield falling 8bps and the 10 year down 6bps. Futures pricing again reversed course, implying an 11% probability of a rate cut by year end. Elsewhere, the 10 year Bund yield fell 7bps and the 10 year Gilt declined 6bps.
- Australian government bonds moved higher, tracking the previous night's rally in US Treasuries. The 3-year yield rose 8bps and the 10-year increased 7bps. Swaps price a 76% probability of a rate hike at next week's meeting, with the implied terminal cash rate for year-end at 4.85%.
- In FX markets, the USD weakened, with the DXY down 0.9%. The Australian dollar rose 1.2% to 0.7201 against the USD and also strengthened against other major currencies. The Yen saw a sharp move, with USD/JPY falling -2.4% following Japanese intervention in FX markets.
- The expiry of the June Brent contract helped soften the recent surge in oil prices. Brent fell -3.4% to US$114/bbl, while WTI declined -1.3% to US$106/bbl, though Dated Brent remained elevated at US$123/bbl. Gold rebounded, rising 1.5% as the USD fell, while iron ore gained 0.7%, with higher Middle East related costs offsetting the resolution of the BHP-CMRG dispute.

International Data

With Governor Bailey pushing back against expectations for more aggressive tightening, the BoE left policy unchanged at 3.75% by an 8-1 vote, with Chief Economist Huw Pill the sole dissenter, favouring a modest hike to curb second-round inflation risks. The policy statement retained a hawkish bias, although policymakers appeared increasingly concerned about growth and loosening labour market conditions, which could see underlying inflation pressures ease over time.

The ECB Governing Council opted to maintain its policy stance, delivering no significant surprises. The statement seemed to place greater emphasis on the risks of second-round effects, which the ECB is monitoring particularly closely. The ECB acknowledged that "upside risks to inflation and downside risks to growth have intensified". Nevertheless, this was not sufficient to convince any policy makers to take action at this policy meeting - the decision to hold was unanimous.

US GDP gained 2% on an annualised basis in Q1 according to the first estimate. Personal consumption weakened further to 1.6% annualised. However, business investment surged almost 9% on the AI infrastructure build out, and government spending experienced a partial reversal of Q4's shutdown induced weakness. Net exports subtracted 1.3ppts from growth in Q1. In March, personal spending gained 0.9%. Personal income growth was robust, however, gaining 0.6%. The US employment cost index was largely as expected in Q1, total compensation rising 0.9%.

Euro Area GDP rose 0.1% in Q1. The unemployment rate meanwhile edged down to 6.2%. In April, consumer inflation jumped 1.0% as the Middle East conflict impacted energy prices. Annual growth remained near target, at 2.2%yr.

Local Data

In Australia, March private credit rose a stronger than expected 0.7%mt, suggesting continued resilience despite tighter monetary policy and a more uncertain economic backdrop (see here).

The prolonged Middle East conflict has heightened risks to Fiji's economy via surging fuel prices, rising inflation and pressures on tourism, growth and foreign reserves. While growth forecasts have been downgraded, upside risks remain if fuel prices ease, supply disruptions are limited, and tourism activity proves more resilient than expected.

Fiji will get through this crisis

The prolonged Middle East conflict has weakened Fiji's economic outlook, largely through its impact on global energy markets and the economy's high fuel and import dependence. The continued closure of the Strait of Hormuz has driven a sharp surge in refined fuel prices, shipping costs and insurance premia, creating what is effectively the largest external energy shock since the 1970s oil crisis. For Fiji, the shock is entirely imported, but the transmission to domestic prices, costs and activity is already evident.

Domestic fuel prices rose sharply in April, with further increases likely in the coming months as global price pressures filter through Fiji's regulated fuel pricing framework. While price controls have initially dampened pass-through, underlying pressures are building and headline inflation is now expected to peak around 6.4% by September 2026. Higher fuel costs are feeding into transport, electricity generation, food prices and broader business operating costs, squeezing household budgets.

Growth risks have risen. We have downgraded Fiji's 2026 growth forecast to 2.0%, from 3.3% previously, reflecting potentially weaker activity across the industrial, agricultural and services sectors. Tourism remains a key risk channel. While visitor arrivals grew strongly in Q1 2026, elevated jet fuel prices and the national airline's capacity adjustments point to a flatter tourism profile for the remainder of the year. Fiji Airways has already begun consolidating routes, citing fuel costs as a key constraint.

Fuel supply volumes remain adequate for now, with recent and scheduled shipments supporting near-term energy security. However, higher import costs threaten foreign reserves and place additional strain on public finances. In response, the Government has activated the Fiji National Fuel Emergency Action Plan and is considering targeted cost-of-living measures ahead of the June Budget, though fiscal space remains limited.

Upside risks remain if fuel prices ease more quickly, supply disruptions are avoided, and tourism demand proves resilient. Over the medium term, the crisis reinforces the urgency of strengthening energy security. Accelerating renewable investment and reducing reliance on imported fossil fuels will be critical to improving Fiji's resilience to future global shocks.

MORNING REPORT

Today's economic developments and market movements.

Key themes

Market sentiment diverged across regions as Iran's new supreme leader reaffirmed control over the Strait of Hormuz and President Trump maintained the US naval blockade in the absence of a nuclear deal. Elsewhere, stronger US GDP growth supported sentiment, while the BoE and ECB held rates steady.

US and European stocks rose on strong data and earnings, while the ASX 200 extended its longest run of daily declines since 2018.

Overseas bond markets rallied as oil prices eased, with US and European yields falling.

The USD weakened as the Yen strengthened sharply following Japanese FX market intervention.

Oil prices eased amid the expiry of the June Brent contract, while gold rebounded on USD weakness.

Financial Markets

Market sentiment diverged across regions overnight. In the Middle East, Iran's new supreme leader Khamenei vowed not to give up the country's nuclear or missile technologies and reiterated that Iran would retain control of the Strait of Hormuz. Reports also suggested President Trump had been briefed on new military options in Iran, having reinforced that the US would not lift its naval blockade without a nuclear deal.

Elsewhere, an acceleration in US GDP growth to 2% annualised in Q1 supported US equities, while the Bank of England and European Central Bank both left policy rates unchanged, delivering no major surprises but continuing to highlight upside risks to inflation.

- Equity markets showed clear regional divergence. In the US, solid GDP growth and strong corporate earnings lifted markets, with the S&P 500 posting its strongest monthly performance in more than five years and rising 1.0% on the day. The Dow Jones gained 1.6%, while the NASDAQ 100 lagged slightly, up 0.9%.
- European equities also advanced, supported by steady central bank policy, with the Euro Stoxx 50 rising 1.1% and the FTSE 100 gaining 1.6%. In contrast, Asian markets closed lower, with the Nikkei 225 down -1.1% and the Hang Seng falling -1.3%. Locally, the ASX 200 extended its losing streak, ending -0.2% lower, its longest run of daily declines since September 2018.
- US bond markets rallied as the recent surge in oil prices stalled - the 2 year yield falling 8bps and the 10 year down 6bps. Futures pricing again reversed course, implying an 11% probability of a rate cut by year end. Elsewhere, the 10 year Bund yield fell 7bps and the 10 year Gilt declined 6bps.
- Australian government bonds moved higher, tracking the previous night's rally in US Treasuries. The 3-year yield rose 8bps and the 10-year increased 7bps. Swaps price a 76% probability of a rate hike at next week's meeting, with the implied terminal cash rate for year-end at 4.85%.
- In FX markets, the USD weakened, with the DXY down 0.9%. The Australian dollar rose 1.2% to 0.7201 against the USD and also strengthened against other major currencies. The Yen saw a sharp move, with USD/JPY falling -2.4% following Japanese intervention in FX markets.
- The expiry of the June Brent contract helped soften the recent surge in oil prices. Brent fell -3.4% to US$114/bbl, while WTI declined -1.3% to US$106/bbl, though Dated Brent remained elevated at US$123/bbl. Gold rebounded, rising 1.5% as the USD fell, while iron ore gained 0.7%, with higher Middle East related costs offsetting the resolution of the BHP-CMRG dispute.

International Data

With Governor Bailey pushing back against expectations for more aggressive tightening, the BoE left policy unchanged at 3.75% by an 8-1 vote, with Chief Economist Huw Pill the sole dissenter, favouring a modest hike to curb second-round inflation risks. The policy statement retained a hawkish bias, although policymakers appeared increasingly concerned about growth and loosening labour market conditions, which could see underlying inflation pressures ease over time.

The ECB Governing Council opted to maintain its policy stance, delivering no significant surprises. The statement seemed to place greater emphasis on the risks of second-round effects, which the ECB is monitoring particularly closely. The ECB acknowledged that "upside risks to inflation and downside risks to growth have intensified". Nevertheless, this was not sufficient to convince any policy makers to take action at this policy meeting - the decision to hold was unanimous.

US GDP gained 2% on an annualised basis in Q1 according to the first estimate. Personal consumption weakened further to 1.6% annualised. However, business investment surged almost 9% on the AI infrastructure build out, and government spending experienced a partial reversal of Q4's shutdown induced weakness. Net exports subtracted 1.3ppts from growth in Q1. In March, personal spending gained 0.9%. Personal income growth was robust, however, gaining 0.6%. The US employment cost index was largely as expected in Q1, total compensation rising 0.9%.

Euro Area GDP rose 0.1% in Q1. The unemployment rate meanwhile edged down to 6.2%. In April, consumer inflation jumped 1.0% as the Middle East conflict impacted energy prices. Annual growth remained near target, at 2.2%yr.

Local Data

In Australia, March private credit rose a stronger than expected 0.7%mt, suggesting continued resilience despite tighter monetary policy and a more uncertain economic backdrop (see here).

Conflicts of Interest: In the normal course of offering banking products and services to its clients, the Westpac Group may act in several capacities (including issuer, market maker, underwriter, distributor, swap counterparty and calculation agent) simultaneously with respect to a financial instrument, giving rise to potential conflicts of interest which may impact the performance of a financial instrument. The Westpac Group may at any time transact or hold a position (including hedging and trading positions) for its own account or the account of a client in any financial instrument which may impact the performance of that financial instrument.

Author(s) disclaimer and declaration: The author(s) confirms that (a) no part of his/her compensation was, is, or will be, directly or indirectly, related to any views or (if applicable) recommendations expressed in this material; (b) this material accurately reflects his/her personal views about the financial products, companies or issuers (if applicable) and is based on sources reasonably believed to be reliable and accurate; (c) to the best of the author’s knowledge, they are not in receipt of inside information and this material does not contain inside information; and (d) no other part of the Westpac Group has made any attempt to influence this material.

Further important information regarding sustainability related content: This material may contain statements relating to environmental, social and governance (ESG) topics. These are subject to known and unknown risks, and there are significant uncertainties, limitations, risks and assumptions in the metrics, modelling, data, scenarios, reporting and analysis on which the statements rely. In particular, these areas are rapidly evolving and maturing, and there are variations in approaches and common standards and practice, as well as uncertainty around future related policy and legislation. Some material may include information derived from publicly available sources that have not been independently verified. No representation or warranty is made as to the accuracy, completeness or reliability of the information. There is a risk that the analysis, estimates, judgements, assumptions, views, models, scenarios or projections used may turn out to be incorrect. These risks may cause actual outcomes to differ materially from those expressed or implied. The ESG-related statements in this material do not constitute advice, nor are they guarantees or predictions of future performance, and Westpac gives no representation, warranty or assurance (including as to the quality, accuracy or completeness of the statements). You should seek your own independent advice.

States to diverge as the household squeeze returns

- After a relatively strong finish to 2025, our updated outlook points to an abrupt slowdown in the Australian economy through 2026 and into 2027 (see here). Here, we flow these aggregate changes through to the state level forecasts published in our March quarter Coast-to-Coast (see here), ahead of our June quarter Coast-to-Coast (due in late June).

- State performances are set to diverge again as national growth slows. Mining based states of Queensland and WA are expected to once again lead the pack, supported by elevated energy prices delivering sizeable income windfalls. SA is also relatively well positioned, underpinned by strength across both public and private activity.
- Consumption-led states set to slow sharply. NSW and Victoria are expected to underperform, with Victoria standing out as the only state where consumption per capita is expected to fall below FY2019 levels by FY2028.
- On our forecasts, consumption per capita in Victoria declines by around 3.5% cumulatively over the five years to FY2028, one of the largest and longest lasting contractions on record. However, Tasmania is expected to remain the laggard overall reflecting the state's much weaker population growth.

Information contained in this report current as at 1 May 2026.

Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance. The forecasts given above are predictive in character. Whilst every effort has been taken to ensure that the assumptions on which the forecasts are based are reasonable, the forecasts may be affected by incorrect assumptions or by known or unknown risks and uncertainties. The results ultimately achieved may differ substantially from these forecasts.

RBA May hike locked in

Luci Ellis
Chief Economist, Westpac Group

We reaffirm our expectation that the RBA Monetary Policy Board (MPB) will raise the cash rate a further 25bps at its May meeting, to 4.35%. Inflation was higher than the MPB was comfortable with prior to the Middle East conflict, spurring it to lift the cash rate in both February and March. The RBA doubled down on its views that the economy was tighter than full employment and needed to be restrained to get inflation back under control.

Those rate hikes were based on data relating to the period before the war. While petrol prices have since reversed much of the 32.8% increase recorded in March, part of this was driven by the cut to excise, due to expire in a few months. Diesel prices – and thus freight costs – remain very elevated. The RBA could look through higher fuel prices if that was all that was happening, but it is not. Pass-through to other (non-fuel) prices is clearly starting, touching everything from building products to takeaway food if the reports we are receiving are any guide. The RBA will be hearing similar stories from firms in its liaison program.

March would have been very early days for much pass-through to be evident in the CPI. For example, many of the price increases for building products we are aware of did not take effect until 1 April. Today's CPI data nonetheless show scattered signs of pass-through to other prices. There were some promising signs in softer monthly prices of appliances and some other household goods. However, home-building and vehicle repair costs, along with downstream insurance inflation, all picked up in the month and quarter. Services related to audio-visual, computing and telecommunications also increased in the month, which for telecommunications went against the run of recent months' results.

This is occurring in the context of a starting point where non-tradables and services inflation are already too high. At 0.8%qtr, the RBA's preferred quarterly trimmed mean measure of inflation is still too high for the RBA to walk past, even though it was a touch lower than our pre-release expectation, a downside risk we had flagged.

Together with the spike in both consumer inflation expectations and business survey measures of costs and prices, the March inflation data will have the RBA's inflation warning lights flashing bright red. The MPB will see an imperative to address high inflation despite the caution expressed by the minority voters in March.

Some observers point to the demand-destruction higher fuel prices can unleash via the hit to real incomes, which will dampen inflation on its own eventually. This is plausible, but it will take too long to assuage an RBA facing an extended period of above-target inflation.

Indeed, based on its communication so far, especially the March minutes, the MPB puts little weight on that argument. The minutes characterised the supply shock as 'further exacerbating existing capacity pressures', and the future demand destruction as just a possibility. This view flows from the RBA's analysis that the economy is already too tight, as inferred from inflation already being above target. It is also taking signal from the income boost from higher LNG prices, but no disinflationary signal from exchange rate appreciation beyond what is already implied by the RBA's own actions on rates.

“We reaffirm our view that the RBA will raise the cash rate 25bps to 4.35% next week.”

We also consider significant what the RBA has not communicated in recent weeks. When markets began pricing in multiple policy rate hikes by the ECB, Bank of England and Bank of Canada, senior officials at those central banks pushed back. Indeed, BoE Governor Bailey stated in an interview with Reuters that “markets had gotten ahead of themselves”. ECB President Lagarde used a speech on 25 March to highlight that the current shock was likely to be less inflationary than the energy shock in 2022 when Russia invaded Ukraine at a time that other supply chains were still recovering from pandemic disruption. The RBA has not pushed back in the same way. In addition to the higher starting point for inflation here, part of the reason seems to be that Australia is already seeing the pass-through to other prices that other central banks are still at the stage of watching for.

All this adds up to the MPB wanting to tighten policy further. The refreshed forecast in the Statement on Monetary Policy will allow the RBA to set out its views of the inflation impulse from the war, making May a good opportunity to take, and explain, the next step.

The outlook for the cash rate beyond May is necessarily less certain. We hold to our base case that there will be two further rate hikes after May, in June and August. The RBA's experience last year, when underlying inflation popped back up almost immediately after it cut rates, will have nudged some within the RBA to the idea that the cash rate needs to be higher than its previous peak to really get inflation under control (for the technically-minded, their individual estimates of the neutral rate got revised up). While outwardly the RBA continues to characterise its strategy as being willing to be a bit less activist to hold onto the post-pandemic employment gains, most of the original architects of that strategy have left the building and those inclined to be more activist will have more influence.

There is a chance that the RBA ends up doing less than our base case, if the voices on the MPB that counselled caution in March can sway other members, or if pass-through to non-fuel prices turns out to be less than current information suggests. However, we put less weight on this scenario given the starting point for domestically driven inflation.

Cliff Notes: policy perspectives from across the globe

Elliot Clarke, Head of International Economics
Illiana Jain, Economist

In Australia, the Q1 CPI report provided the first official estimate of the impact on local prices of the Middle East conflict. Headline inflation accelerated sharply to 1.4% (4.1%yr) in Q1 on the back of a 33% surge in auto fuel prices in March alone. Fortunately, a large portion of this spike has since unwound following the fuel excise cut, although fuel prices remain materially above the pre-conflict level.

While there were some signs of price pressures across home-building, vehicle repair and insurance, it is too early to detect, let alone accurately assess, evidence of pass-through. That said, underlying trimmed mean inflation still rose 0.8% in Q1, with annual growth at 3.5%yr, a full percentage point above the mid-point of the target. Notably, March's data pre-dates the wide range of price increases reported anecdotally for building products and other items which came into effect in April.

Following the CPI release, Chief Economist Luci Ellis reaffirmed our call for the RBA to increase the cash rate by 25bps to 4.35% at the May policy meeting. The combination of an elevated starting point for inflation and imminent risk of pass-through will compel the RBA to act pre-emptively to contain inflation expectations. Next week's voting split, updated staff forecasts and the tone of communications will be informative on the baseline policy outlook and risks. For now, we retain our base case of another two hikes beyond May, in June and August, taking the cash rate to a peak of 4.85%.

The combination of higher inflation, slower growth and rising unemployment is also fostering a complex macroeconomic backdrop for the 2026/27 Federal Budget, due May 12. A full preview will be published next week, but our preliminary note sets out our central expectation that commodity price windfalls are likely to more than offset spending pressures and result in a net improvement in the budget's bottom line over the forward estimates.

Offshore, at the beginning of the week the Bank of Japan held its policy rate at 0.75% in a 6-3 vote. Updated forecasts highlight the risk of stagflation, with FY26 growth revised sharply lower to 0.5% (from 1.5%) and core inflation now expected to remain above 2% through to FY28. With Japanese firms increasingly willing to pass on costs, the Middle East conflict risks amplifying domestic inflationary pressures.

The BoJ remains focused on restoring the policy rate as an effective policy lever. Further hikes were signalled, but the timing left open. With policy settings still considered accommodative and a weak yen threatening import inflation, we anticipate the next hike to occur in June, though there is a risk it is delayed to July. The Financial Statements Statistics update due on 1 June will be an important release to gauge firms' response to the crisis and the implications for both inflation and activity.

In the US, the FOMC then kept the stance of policy unchanged at its April meeting. The tone of the statement was balanced, with a sanguine view on GDP growth and the labour market and inflation simply characterised as "elevated". The statement also noted that "the Committee is attentive to the risks to both sides of its dual mandate", while Chair Powell remarked in the press conference that, in his view, policy is in a good place to take time to monitor conditions, being at the "high end of neutral, perhaps mildly restrictive". Governors Hammack, Kashkari and Logan also showed greater concern over inflation than the labour market at this meeting, wanting to maintain the target range for the federal funds rate and signal that a hike was as likely as a cut on current information.

The Bank of Canada also kept its policy stance unchanged. The conflict in the Middle East and US trade policy were called out as sources of uncertainty for the global economy. But overall, the outlook for Canada's economy was viewed as little changed from January. Assuming a protracted resolution to the Middle East conflict into 2027, GDP growth is expected to strengthen through 2027-2028 and inflation to turn back towards the 2%yr target from 3%yr in the near term, allowing the Bank of Canada to remain on hold.

"The initial consequences of the Middle East conflict for Australian consumer inflation were seen."

Thereafter in Europe, the ECB Governing Council opted to maintain its current policy stance. The ECB acknowledged that "upside risks to inflation and downside risks to growth have intensified" and the merits of a rate hike were discussed, but developments to date were not sufficient to convince the Governing Council to take immediate action – the decision to hold was unanimous. At its previous meeting in March, the ECB presented two downside scenarios alongside its baseline. In the April press conference, President Lagarde was reluctant to discuss the details of those scenarios, noting simply that conditions are diverging from March's baseline and the upcoming six weeks "will be the right time" to assess the economy "in order to make an informed decision". Her comments appeared carefully chosen to signal openness to a rate increase in June. Therefore, barring any major changes in the dynamics of the Middle East conflict, we continue to believe that a 25bp policy rate hike is the most probable outcome at the next meeting.

The Bank of England's April meeting also unfolded broadly as expected, the MPC voting 8-1 to keep the policy rate at 3.75%. Chief Economist Hew Pill was the sole dissenter, preferring "a prompt but modest hike in Bank Rate" to contain the risk of second-round inflationary effects. The policy statement maintained a hawkish bias, however, emphasising the potential impact of the energy price shock – its scale and duration – on UK inflation and the committee's readiness to act to ensure inflation returns to the 2% target. Policy makers also showed concern over economic growth and the labour market, with slack increasing prior to the conflict.

Risks to the economic outlook were illustrated using three alternative scenarios, differentiated by oil and gas price assumptions and the persistence of second-round inflation effects. In the first two scenarios, the Brent oil price averages $108 in Q2 2026 then decreases at different speeds. Both scenarios showed headline inflation peaking above 3.5%yr this year before easing in 2027. Importantly, the Governor emphasised that, if the economy evolves in line with these scenarios, further policy tightening may not be required – the removal of the circa 50bp of easing priced before the conflict potentially sufficient to bring inflation back to the 2% target. The committee judged that the most severe scenario – where Brent averages $127 this quarter and remains above $100 well into 2028 – would likely require "a forceful tightening in monetary policy", however. The Governor declined to specify what interest rate changes this would entail, but noted the need to act quickly to minimise second-round effects. Bank Rate hikes this year are therefore not guaranteed, but with Brent Oil surging as much as 20% this week to a peak around USD126 (now USD114) as the US and Iran remained at an impasse, conditions may eventually become too close to the BoE's most severe scenario for the MPC to ignore. We continue to expect a Bank Rate hike at the next policy meeting in June, with further tightening possible, but dependent on evolving circumstances.

RBNZ's Breman says core inflation stable

Darren Gibbs
Senior Economist

The domestic focus during this past holiday-shortened week has remained on gathering up-to-date information on how the New Zealand economy is being impacted by the ongoing Middle East conflict and assessing the RBNZ's likely response.

Early in the week, RBNZ Governor Breman participated in an event in Hamilton as part of her regional engagement programme. While there were no formal speech notes, the RBNZ issued a press statement outlining the points that she planned to make during a panel discussion, while audio from the session was also made available. In our view, Breman's comments were consistent with those made at the 8 April OCR review. Specifically, Breman stated that "...the Reserve Bank remains focused on balancing inflation control with supporting economic recovery." And she reiterated that "...monetary policy can and should ensure that a temporary increase in inflation does not turn into enduring inflationary pressures."

Perhaps the main news was Breman's reflection on last week's Q1 CPI report. She noted that annual inflation of 3.1% was slightly higher than expected at the time of the April OCR Review. But importantly, she added that "...measures of core inflation, which look through this volatility, have remained stable within the target band." She also emphasised that the Bank was focused on the prospect of second-round inflation effects, specifically transmitted through the labour market, rather than the first-round impact of higher fuel prices. These comments suggest that the RBNZ will take the time necessary to fully understand the nature and implications of the conflict before deciding how it should respond. Breman's comments were the initial catalyst for the repricing of prospects of a rate hike at the RBNZ's 27 May meeting, which the market now views as around 25% (down from 60% at the beginning of the week). Confidence reports released later in the week – discussed below – have contributed to that repricing. For the record, Westpac continues to forecast a first lift in the OCR in September.

Staying with the RBNZ, it was announced this week that the Minister of Finance and the Bank's Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) have agreed changes to the MPC Charter. These changes will provide more transparency and accountability to MPC decision-making. They also are a subset of the reforms we recommended in a note published last year before the new Governor took up her role. While the new Charter continues to encourage the formation of a consensus decision, it requires that the votes of individual members be attributed when a vote takes place. As well as attributing votes, material differences of view or judgement within the Committee will also be attributed in the published Record of Meeting, even when no vote is taken. This will make it easier for MPC members to publicly express differing views on the economic outlook and monetary policy strategy (indeed, it makes clear that members are encouraged to communicate those views externally). The new Charter will be in place for the RBNZ's 27 May meeting so will help elucidate any differences in view amongst the MPC. These reforms are a welcome step in the right direction in our view. Although just how effective the changes will be is still to be assessed in light of just how frequent votes are and the threshold applied when determining if an alternative view is specifically recorded.

Activity past year vs expected year ahead

On the data front, the focus was the ANZ's Business Outlook Survey for April. Overall, the broad theme of the survey was much as should have been expected based on the late responses to last month's survey and the results of last week's QSBO business survey. Headline business confidence has taken a significant knock, with net optimism declining to -10.6 from 32.5 in April – the first negative reading since 2023. Encouragingly, firms remain more optimistic about their own situation, although the proportion of firms expecting their own trading activity to increase over the next year has halved to 19.6. A similar proportion continue to report an increase in activity levels over the past year, suggesting that demand is holding up for many firms. Uncertainty is curbing firms' willingness to invest in expanding their businesses, however, with net hiring intentions turning modestly negative in April and net investment intentions sliding to barely positive levels. Overall, this survey portrays the picture we expected to see a few weeks ago when we significantly downgraded our view on growth through mid-2026.

Predictably, firms' year-ahead inflation expectation increased to 3.81% from 3.08% previously, even as the net proportion of firms reporting an intention to raise prices fell modestly from March. Firms reported a sharply higher expected increase in their costs over the next three months, whereas expected price increases were little changed from last month's survey. This points to significant pressure on firms' profit margins. Perhaps as a response, firms forecast for year-ahead wage growth fell to just 2.5% - now close to last year's low. The latter is likely to be viewed somewhat encouragingly by the RBNZ given its concern that high near-term headline CPI inflation rate could morph into second-round inflation by driving a wage-price spiral (albeit the current slack in the economy).

Consumer confidence and inflation expectations

Turning to the rest of this week's data, the ANZ's consumer confidence index slumped a further 12% to a three-year low of 80.3 in April. This reading is in line with the responses that had been collected in the final week of the March survey, suggesting that confidence may have been broadly stable over the past month. The net proportion of households thinking it's a good time to buy a major household item (the best retail indicator) fell 11ppts to -25, which is the lowest level since September 2024. This appears consistent with some recent anecdotes from the retail sector. Household's two-year ahead inflation jumped 0.9ppts to 6.6%, thus exceeding the levels reached even during the Covid spike.

The final piece of data this week was the building consents report for March. The number of dwelling consents fell a modest 1.3% during the month but were still 8.2% higher than a year earlier. Given that most of the consents issued in March were likely filed in February, it will be another month or two before any impact from the Middle East conflict becomes evident in the building consents figures.

One piece of good news this week was the Government's announcement that it had reached an agreement with one of the largest fuel companies to supply 90m litres of diesel – equivalent to nine days of regular demand – to fill the additional storage space that will become available towards the end of June. This will increase the average level of diesel in the country at any given time by about a third, adding a small but welcome degree of resilience.

Looking ahead to next week, the focus domestically will be on the March quarter labour market surveys. While these surveys will give no insight about the emerging impact of the Middle East conflict, they will still provide important information on the degree of spare capacity and labour cost pressure prior to the oil price shock.

As my colleague Michael Gordon wrote in his preview, we expect that the unemployment rate likely remained stable at 5.4% during the March quarter. While the tax-based Monthly Employment Indicator (MEI) points to a modest lift in employment in the quarter – broadly in line with growth in the working age population – we expect the Household Labour Force Survey (HLFS) of measure of employment will post a 0.1%q/q decline. This simply reflects our sense that the 0.5%q/q increase in the HLFS measure in the December quarter was likely overstated, with the MEI failing to validate the HLFS's indication of a sharp rise in employment among the under-25s during that quarter. With the labour force participation rate in the December quarter likely similarly overstated, we expect a modest decline in participation to be recorded in the March quarter.

Turning to labour costs, given the usual lags, spare capacity in the labour market will likely continue to have restrained wage growth in the March quarter. We expect a 0.5%q/q rise in the Labour Cost Index (LCI) for the March quarter, leaving annual growth at around 2%. Our forecast for private sector wage growth is slightly more subdued at 0.4%q/q. The public sector tends to see larger pay increases in March quarters – we've pencilled in a 0.8%q/q rise, though this would still see annual growth slow from 2.2% to 2.0%.

Our picks are a little softer than the RBNZ's February Monetary Policy Statement forecasts, which assumed faster jobs growth and a decline in the unemployment rate by this point. At the margin, a result in line with our forecasts would strengthen the case for caution before lifting the OCR. But the bigger issue for the RBNZ will be what has happened since the MPS: the Middle East oil shock will hinder the economic recovery, potentially leading to delays in hiring, layoffs and business failures. The RBNZ will need to balance what this might mean for medium-term inflation against the risk that high near-term inflation could nonetheless raise medium-term inflation expectations.

AUS: Mar Dwelling Approvals (%mth)

May 4, Last: 29.7, Westpac f/c: -5.0
Market f/c: -10.0, Range: -29.0 to -4.0

Dwelling approvals rebounded sharply in Feb, up 29.7%mth and 14%yr. The bounce more than retraced a 20% drop through Dec-Jan that followed a choppy run over the previous four months. The volatility has centred on private unit approvals. Private detached house approvals were broadly flat in Feb but have shown positive underlying momentum since the start of the year.

March is likely to show a move lower, the Feb jump taking high rise approvals to an elevated high level that is unlikely to sustain. Detached house and medium density unit approvals should retain some positive momentum. While the mix is uncertain, a 5% decline in total approvals is plausible. Note that it will take a several months for interest rate rises and other developments to impact dwelling approvals.

AUS: Mar Household Spending Indicator (%mth)

May 5, Last: 0.3, Westpac f/c: 2.0
Mkt f/c: 1.5, Range: -0.5 to 2.4

The Household Spending Indicator rose 0.3%mth in Feb, matching Jan's outcome and in line with its average monthly pace over the past two years. Annual growth edged up to 4.6%yr.

March is expected to show a big jump led by a sharp rise in fuel prices and a pull-forward in fuel purchases. Our Westpac-DataX Card Tracker suggests the ABS spending indicator is likely to be up around 2% for the month. That would mark the strongest monthly increase since July 2022 and take annual growth to just above 6.5%yr. Note that the March report will also include estimates for Q1 household spending in real, inflation-adjusted terms. With nominal spend tracking a 1.1% rise in the quarter and the CPI posting a 1.4% rise, real spending may record a small decline for the quarter.

AUS: RBA Policy Decision (%)

May 5, Last: 4.10, Westpac f/c: 4.35
Market f/c: 4.35, Range: 4.10 to 4.35

Westpac expects the RBA Monetary Policy Board (MPB) will deliver its third consecutive 25bp rate hike at the May meeting, raising the cash rate back to its previous peak of 4.35%.

The Q1 CPI report demonstrated that inflation was higher than the MPB was comfortable with prior to the Middle East conflict. Pass-through of higher fuel costs to other prices throughout the economy is clearly starting. Given the higher starting point and faster pass-through, communications from RBA officials have not pushed back on market's pricing in rate hikes over recent weeks, unlike other central banks.

This round will include a refresh of the staff forecasts which will allow the RBA to set out its views of the inflation impulse from the war. For more detail, see Page 2.

RBA to hike in May

AUS: Mar Goods Trade Balance ($bn)

May 7, Last: 5.7, Westpac f/c: 3.9

Mkt f/c: 4.4, Range: 2.0 to 7.5

A combination of an increase in gold exports, along with a rebound in rural goods outflows, led to an almost 5%^{mt} rise in export values in February. Imports fell by more than 3%^{mt}, primarily due to ongoing volatility in key capital goods imports, leaving the goods trade balance at a seven-month high of $5.7bn.

March is typically a strong month for key commodity exports, but seasonally adjusted data may show lower shipments of the Big 3 commodities. This is despite a significant rise in coal exports, driven by increased demand from Asia. Disruptions from the Middle East conflict could affect Australian imports – although data from ports does not currently indicate a significant impact on oil imports, so we have pencilled in a modest recovery in imports. Overall, we think the headline goods surplus will ease back below $4bn, a level in line with last year's average.

More volatility in goods trade to be expected

NZ: Q1 Labour Market Surveys (%)

May 6, Unemployment Rate, Last: 5.4, Westpac f/c: 5.4

May 6, LCI Private Sector, Last: 0.5, Westpac f/c: 0.4

We expect the unemployment rate to hold steady at 5.4% for the March quarter. High-frequency indicators have pointed to a modest lift in jobs in recent months, though not outpacing the growth in the working-age population. We do expect to see a small downward correction in the HLFS employment measure, after an overstated 0.5% rise in the December quarter, but this doesn't alter the general picture – we recommend focusing on the unemployment rate, as this is less vulnerable to sampling errors. Given the existing slack in the labour market, wage growth is likely to have remained subdued.

US: April employment report

May 8, payrolls, Last: 178k, Mkt f/c: 60k, WBC f/c: 90k

May 8, U/E rate, Last: 4.3%, Mkt f/c: 4.3%, WBC f/c: 4.3%

Nonfarm payrolls rebounded 178k in March, taking the 3-month average to 68k, a material step up from the month-average through the second half of 2025, -8k.

While the unemployment rate is essentially unchanged at 4.3% over the past year, household employment growth has been materially weaker than payrolls. Had the participation rate not declined by around 0.7ppts, the unemployment rate would instead be close to 5.0%.

In April, a robust gain in employment, circa 90k for payrolls, is likely to keep the unemployment rate unchanged, though risks for employment remain skewed to the downside after a weak period for activity growth.

Key insights from the week that was.

In Australia, the Q1 CPI report provided the first official estimate of the impact on local prices of the Middle East conflict. Headline inflation accelerated sharply to 1.4% (4.1%yr) in Q1 on the back of a 33% surge in auto fuel prices in March alone. Fortunately, a large portion of this spike has since unwound following the fuel excise cut, although fuel prices remain materially above the pre-conflict level.

While there were some signs of price pressures across home-building, vehicle repair and insurance, it is too early to detect, let alone accurately assess, evidence of pass-through. That said, underlying trimmed mean inflation still rose 0.8% in Q1, with annual growth at 3.5%yr, a full percentage point above the mid-point of the target. Notably, March's data pre-dates the wide range of price increases reported anecdotally for building products and other items which came into effect in April.

Following the CPI release, Chief Economist Luci Ellis reaffirmed our call for the RBA to increase the cash rate by 25bps to 4.35% at the May policy meeting. The combination of an elevated starting point for inflation and imminent risk of pass-through will compel the RBA to act pre-emptively to contain inflation expectations. Next week's voting split, updated staff forecasts and the tone of communications will be informative on the baseline policy outlook and risks. For now, we retain our base case of another two hikes beyond May, in June and August, taking the cash rate to a peak of 4.85%.

The combination of higher inflation, slower growth and rising unemployment is also fostering a complex macroeconomic backdrop for the 2026/27 Federal Budget, due May 12. A full preview will be published next week, but our preliminary note sets out our central expectation that commodity price windfalls are likely to more than offset spending pressures and result in a net improvement in the budget's bottom line over the forward estimates.

Offshore, at the beginning of the week the Bank of Japan held its policy rate at 0.75% in a 6-3 vote. Updated forecasts highlight the risk of stagflation, with FY26 growth revised sharply lower to 0.5% (from 1.5%) and core inflation now expected to remain above 2% through to FY28. With Japanese firms increasingly willing to pass on costs, the Middle East conflict risks amplifying domestic inflationary pressures.

The BoJ remains focused on restoring the policy rate as an effective policy lever. Further hikes were signalled, but the timing left open. With policy settings still considered accommodative and a weak yen threatening import inflation, we anticipate the next hike to occur in June, though there is a risk it is delayed to July. The Financial Statements Statistics update due on 1 June will be an important release to gauge firms' response to the crisis and the implications for both inflation and activity.

In the US, the FOMC then kept the stance of policy unchanged at its April meeting. The tone of the statement was balanced, with a sanguine view on GDP growth and the labour market and inflation simply characterised as "elevated". The statement also noted that "the Committee is attentive to the risks to both sides of its dual mandate", while Chair Powell remarked in the press conference that, in his view, policy is in a good place to take time to monitor conditions, being at the "high end of neutral, perhaps mildly restrictive". Governors Hammack, Kashkari and Logan also showed greater concern over inflation than the labour market at this meeting, wanting to maintain the target range for the federal funds rate and signal that a hike was as likely as a cut on current information.

The Bank of Canada also kept its policy stance unchanged. The conflict in the Middle East and US trade policy were called out as sources of uncertainty for the global economy. But overall, the outlook for Canada's economy was viewed as little changed from January. Assuming a protracted resolution to the Middle East conflict into 2027, GDP growth is expected to strengthen through 2027-2028 and inflation to turn back towards the 2%yr target from 3%yr in the near term, allowing the Bank of Canada to remain on hold.

Thereafter in Europe, the ECB Governing Council opted to maintain its current policy stance. The ECB acknowledged that “upside risks to inflation and downside risks to growth have intensified” and the merits of a rate hike were discussed, but developments to date were not sufficient to convince the Governing Council to take immediate action – the decision to hold was unanimous. At its previous meeting in March, the ECB presented two downside scenarios alongside its baseline. In the April press conference, President Lagarde was reluctant to discuss the details of those scenarios, noting simply that conditions are diverging from March’s baseline and the upcoming six weeks “will be the right time” to assess the economy “in order to make an informed decision”. Her comments appeared carefully chosen to signal openness to a rate increase in June. Therefore, barring any major changes in the dynamics of the Middle East conflict, we continue to believe that a 25bp policy rate hike is the most probable outcome at the next meeting.

The Bank of England’s April meeting also unfolded broadly as expected, the MPC voting 8-1 to keep the policy rate at 3.75%. Chief Economist Hew Pill was the sole dissenter, preferring “a prompt but modest hike in Bank Rate” to contain the risk of second-round inflationary effects. The policy statement maintained a hawkish bias, however, emphasising the potential impact of the energy price shock – its scale and duration – on UK inflation and the committee’s readiness to act to ensure inflation returns to the 2% target. Policy makers also showed concern over economic growth and the labour market, with slack increasing prior to the conflict.

Risks to the economic outlook were illustrated using three alternative scenarios, differentiated by oil and gas price assumptions and the persistence of second-round inflation effects. In the first two scenarios, the Brent oil price averages $108 in Q2 2026 then decreases at different speeds. Both scenarios showed headline inflation peaking above 3.5%yr this year before easing in 2027. Importantly, the Governor emphasised that, if the economy evolves in line with these scenarios, further policy tightening may not be required – the removal of the circa 50bp of easing priced before the conflict potentially sufficient to bring inflation back to the 2% target. The committee judged that the most severe scenario – where Brent averages $127 this quarter and remains above $100 well into 2028 – would likely require “a forceful tightening in monetary policy”, however. The Governor declined to specify what interest rate changes this would entail, but noted the need to act quickly to minimise second-round effects. Bank Rate hikes this year are therefore not guaranteed, but with Brent Oil surging as much as 20% this week to a peak around USD126 (now USD114) as the US and Iran remained at an impasse, conditions may eventually become too close to the BoE’s most severe scenario for the MPC to ignore. We continue to expect a Bank Rate hike at the next policy meeting in June, with further tightening possible, but dependent on evolving circumstances.

Author(s) disclaimer and declaration: The author(s) confirms that (a) no part of his/her compensation was, is, or will be, directly or indirectly, related to any views or (if applicable) recommendations expressed in this material; (b) this material accurately reflects his/her personal views about the financial products, companies or issuers (if applicable) and is based on sources reasonably believed to be reliable and accurate; (c) to the best of the author's knowledge, they are not in receipt of inside information and this material does not contain inside information; and (d) no other part of the Westpac Group has made any attempt to influence this material.

Further important information regarding sustainability-related content: This material may contain statements relating to environmental, social and governance (ESG) topics. These are subject to known and unknown risks, and there are significant uncertainties, limitations, risks and assumptions in the metrics, modelling, data, scenarios, reporting and analysis on which the statements rely. In particular, these areas are rapidly evolving and maturing, and there are variations in approaches and common standards and practice, as well as uncertainty around future related policy and legislation. Some material may include information derived from publicly available sources that have not been independently verified. No representation or warranty is made as to the accuracy, completeness or reliability of the information. There is a risk that the analysis, estimates, judgements, assumptions, views, models, scenarios or projections used may turn out to be incorrect. These risks may cause actual outcomes to differ materially from those expressed or implied. The ESG-related statements in this material do not constitute advice, nor are they guarantees or predictions of future performance, and Westpac gives no representation, warranty or assurance (including as to the quality, accuracy or completeness of the statements). You should seek your own independent advice.

The FOMC favours a steady hand

The FOMC kept the stance of policy and their outlook unchanged in April as expected, at Powell's last meeting as FOMC Chair.

As expected, the FOMC kept the stance of policy unchanged at its April meeting and, broadly speaking, portrayed a balanced baseline and risk outlook. This is despite not explicitly stating a hike is as likely as a cut – language the dissenters Hammack, Kashkari, and Logan arguably would have preferred. This outcome is consistent with our and the market's expectations as well as the degree of uncertainty evident in financial markets – the price of Brent crude rising circa 7% today to USD120 per barrel while US equities held near record highs.

The Committee's take on economic activity was sanguine, with GDP characterised as "expanding at a solid pace" and the unemployment rate "little changed in recent months" even as job gains "remained low". Members' views on the price outlook showed caution but not overt concern, with inflation simply characterised as "elevated". "The Committee is [also] attentive to the risks to both sides of its dual mandate", and Chair Powell noted in the press conference that, in his view, policy is in a good place to take time to monitor conditions, being at the "high end of neutral", "perhaps mildly restrictive".

We have been more concerned than the FOMC over domestic inflation stemming from capacity constraints and, in such an economic state, believe outsized and/or persistent second-round effects of energy and tariff inflation are meaningful risks. Still, with growth below trend in Q4 2025 and Q1 2026, and likely through mid-2027, there is no urgency to take a hawkish stance, let alone hike. Per Chair Powell's remarks and current market pricing, the best course is to hold and continue assessing current conditions and uncertainties.

Like all other major central banks, the road ahead for the Federal Reserve is challenging. The domestic and international risks the economy and Committee face are disparate and could persist for some time. The FOMC will also have to navigate considerable US fiscal uncertainty over the year(s) ahead. A continued uptrend in the US 10-year yield, and consequently the 30-year mortgage rate, will limit the breadth of growth across the economy and weigh on household and financial market confidence. In time, it will also restrict the Government's capacity to act against a meaningful deterioration in economic momentum as the interest burden grows. As such, we cannot discount policy rate cuts entirely, though they are more likely to be a topic of conversation in 2027 or 2028 than 2026.

Finally, with Kevin Warsh's nomination for FOMC Chair advancing from the Committee stage to a full vote in the Senate, it is important to recognise this meeting was Powell's last meeting as Chair. In the press conference though, Powell made clear he still intends to stay on as a Federal Reserve Governor, and consequently a member of the FOMC, until the investigations into the Federal Reserve are "well and truly over with finality and transparency". The Department of Justice dropping their criminal investigation into the organisation and Chair Powell are a decisive step in that direction, but the Supreme Court decision in Lisa Cook's case is still to come, and the Federal Reserve's own investigation into construction costs has to be completed to rule out the Department of Justice re-opening its investigation. Powell remaining in place as a Governor over the period will provide continuity while these uncertainties are resolved.

A crude shock, surcharges may change expectations

Justin Smirk
Senior Economist

A materially bigger and more persistent shock ...

As noted in our Middle East Crisis Update, a prolonged disruption in the Gulf is sustaining higher energy prices. We now have Brent averaging around US$120/bbl in the June quarter. This is based on our assessment of unfolding infrastructure damage and a slow recovery in shipping traffic through the Strait of Hormuz.

So despite the announced cut in fuel excise, we expect CPI inflation to peak at 5.4%yr in the June quarter, while the monthly measure, which the ABS highlights as the main indicator and can be significantly more volatile than the quarterly series, may peak close to 6%yr in May.

Westpac expects core inflation, as measured by the quarterly Trimmed Mean, peaking around 4% in the second half of year; food, household services and even new dwelling prices, alongside broader non-energy pass-through, are key risks to our estimates. We also note that the monthly TM spikes a bit faster hitting a 4.0%yr pace by June.

In response, the RBA is now expected to deliver three rate hikes (May, June, August), taking the cash rate to a peak of 4.85%. As the combined supply shock and tighter policy weigh on demand, GDP growth is expected to trough at 1%yr in 2027 while unemployment peaks around 5% at end 2026. A deeper dive into these issues are summarised in the video by the Westpac Economics Team led by Luci Ellis "Longer conflict, higher inflation and cash rate"

This was, of course, before the announcement of a two-week ceasefire on the 8th of April (Asian time). This is obviously welcome and a positive risk scenario relative to the baseline we outlined last week and underpins our current inflation forecasts. Should the ceasefire hold – and that is a big if – a faster opening up of the Strait of Hormuz would result in energy prices tracking between the profile we currently have and the one underpinning the forecasts in the March.

Market Outlook (which was based on a one-month closure of the Strait with little infrastructure damage). For further background on the unfolding risks to our current scenario see Luci Ellis's note "On hoping you are wrong".

In this bulletin we also release a forward profile of the Monthly CPI. This process is still at a preliminary stage but given the extreme surge we expect to see in the Monthly CPI, we thought it would be timely to provide some guidance out to December 2026.

March and April headline CPI set to surge

The Israel/US assault on Iran began in the morning of the 28th of February. We expect the resulting surge in oil prices to have the largest hit to the CPI in the months of March and April before flattening out in May and June. Auto fuel is set to increase again in July but this is due to the expiration of the recent temporary reduction in fuel excise.

Westpac is forecasting a 1.3% increase in March on the back of a 35% increase in auto fuel. At two decimal points the increase is 1.26% but we warn that given the current volatility in prices, there is a greater than usual degree of uncertainty so these finer estimates should be used with even more caution than usual.

The annual pace lifts from 3.7%yr to 4.7%yr in March.

Our current scenario has auto fuel lifting a further 2% and 6% respectively in April and May. The April CPI will also be boosted by a seasonal bounce in clothing & footwear and holiday travel & accommodation plus the annual increase in health insurance premiums. The annual pace of CPI inflation is expected to peak at 5.8%yr in May (so there is a risk it could peak as high as 6%yr) and then slowly moderate to 4.7%yr by December 2026.

Core inflation is higher for longer

We estimate a 0.23%mth rise in the Monthly Trimmed Mean (TM) in March holding the annual pace steady at 3.3%yr. The six-month annualised pace is also steady at 3.3%yr which down from a 3.7%yr pace in December. We were expecting the pace of core inflation to moderate from here but with the conflict in Iran disrupting shipping out of the Gulf, and the resulting surge in fuel prices, we now see fuel prices remaining higher for longer resulting in a greater degree of pass-through to core inflation.

The TM is set to lift 0.5%mth/3.6%yr in April, 0.4%mth/3.8%yr in May and 0.3%mth/4.0%yr in June. The forecast peak in the annual TM inflation is 4.0%yr in June then holding between 3.9%yr and 4.0%yr to year end; in six-month annualised terms the peak pace is 4.6%yr in September.

Quarterly inflation less volatile

The Monthly CPI is the focus of the ABS CPI release, and as such, it gains the most media attention. However, at least for now given the short history of the complete Monthly CPI, the quarterly measures of inflation will remain the focus of both the RBA and the Australian government when setting both monetary and fiscal policy, particularly when it comes to core inflation as measured by the Trimmed Mean.

Middle East conflict forecast revisions

Oil price scenarios

Auto fuel prices

Pump price average for unleaded and diesel

As the current conflict started in the last week of February, we have only see one month of higher fuel prices so the auto fuel is expected to rise just 5.9% in the March quarter. However, starting from a high base in the June quarter means fuel prices to continue to rise solidly and we estimate a 24% surge in the fuel prices component in the June quarter.

Overall, we estimate a 1.5% increase in the March quarter taking the annual pace from 3.6%yr to 4.7%yr. As noted earlier, we expect this momentum to continue into the June quarter with a further 1.9% surge in the CPI taking the annual pace to 5.4%yr. While we think this should be the peak in the annual pace, it is nevertheless the fastest pace since June 2023 when it was reported to be 6.0%.

Core inflation is not immune to this boost as we are forecasting a 0.93% increase in the March quarter, matching the 0.9% increase in the December quarter and it is a prelude to the step up to a 1.0% increase in both the June and September quarters. This will see the annual pace peak at 4.0%yr in the second half of the year.

The Trimmed Mean estimate starts from a low of 0.2% to a high of 2.2%. Significant expenditure items trimmed off the bottom includes vegetables (–1.2%), international travel & accommodation (–0.7%) and other non-durable household products (–0.7%). Trimmed off the top are secondary education (2.3%), tobacco (2.4%), furniture (3.3%), women's garments (3.5%), auto fuel (5.9%), electricity (118.3%).

As we have noted in earlier bulletins, until the ABS has a better understanding of the seasonality of the new monthly CPI, they will continue publishing quarterly underlying inflation measures in a manner consistent with the history of price collection frequency. We have replicated this process and found it represents a small downside risk to our March quarter estimate but it still rounds to 0.9%qtr. As such we just note the risk and do not adjust our overall forecast.

Signs of faster pass-through

We have received many anecdotal reports of increases in input costs, often as a fuel surcharge or levy. Some of these were adjusted downwards when the Australian government cut the fuel excise but remain significant. We have also heard of restaurants, cafés and even hairdressers adding a fuel levy to prices but these are yet to be confirmed.

It has also been reported that rising input costs could add as much as 10%, or $50,000, to the cost of building an average detached home. Using input price increases as reported by Tradelink this estimate seems fair. Tradelink data suggests an average increase of 16% in April, the largest increase in the data we have back to January 2020; not all products will see price increases in any given month, but the number of notifications of price increases on the Tradelink website has also risen. The proposed average increase for May increases to 17% before easing back to around 7% in June and July so it will be interesting to see how these estimates are adjusted as actual prices are posted.

MORNING REPORT

Today's economic developments and market movements.

Key themes

Market sentiment diverged across regions as Iran's new supreme leader reaffirmed control over the Strait of Hormuz and President Trump maintained the US naval blockade in the absence of a nuclear deal. Elsewhere, stronger US GDP growth supported sentiment, while the BoE and ECB held rates steady.

US and European stocks rose on strong data and earnings, while the ASX 200 extended its longest run of daily declines since 2018.

Overseas bond markets rallied as oil prices eased, with US and European yields falling.

The USD weakened as the Yen strengthened sharply following Japanese FX market intervention.

Oil prices eased amid the expiry of the June Brent contract, while gold rebounded on USD weakness.

Financial Markets

Market sentiment diverged across regions overnight. In the Middle East, Iran's new supreme leader Khamenei vowed not to give up the country's nuclear or missile technologies and reiterated that Iran would retain control of the Strait of Hormuz. Reports also suggested President Trump had been briefed on new military options in Iran, having reinforced that the US would not lift its naval blockade without a nuclear deal.

Elsewhere, an acceleration in US GDP growth to 2% annualised in Q1 supported US equities, while the Bank of England and European Central Bank both left policy rates unchanged, delivering no major surprises but continuing to highlight upside risks to inflation.

- Equity markets showed clear regional divergence. In the US, solid GDP growth and strong corporate earnings lifted markets, with the S&P 500 posting its strongest monthly performance in more than five years and rising 1.0% on the day. The Dow Jones gained 1.6%, while the NASDAQ 100 lagged slightly, up 0.9%.
- European equities also advanced, supported by steady central bank policy, with the Euro Stoxx 50 rising 1.1% and the FTSE 100 gaining 1.6%. In contrast, Asian markets closed lower, with the Nikkei 225 down -1.1% and the Hang Seng falling -1.3%. Locally, the ASX 200 extended its losing streak, ending -0.2% lower, its longest run of daily declines since September 2018.
- US bond markets rallied as the recent surge in oil prices stalled - the 2 year yield falling 8bps and the 10 year down 6bps. Futures pricing again reversed course, implying an 11% probability of a rate cut by year end. Elsewhere, the 10 year Bund yield fell 7bps and the 10 year Gilt declined 6bps.
- Australian government bonds moved higher, tracking the previous night's rally in US Treasuries. The 3-year yield rose 8bps and the 10-year increased 7bps. Swaps price a 76% probability of a rate hike at next week's meeting, with the implied terminal cash rate for year-end at 4.85%.
- In FX markets, the USD weakened, with the DXY down 0.9%. The Australian dollar rose 1.2% to 0.7201 against the USD and also strengthened against other major currencies. The Yen saw a sharp move, with USD/JPY falling -2.4% following Japanese intervention in FX markets.
- The expiry of the June Brent contract helped soften the recent surge in oil prices. Brent fell -3.4% to US$114/bbl, while WTI declined -1.3% to US$106/bbl, though Dated Brent remained elevated at US$123/bbl. Gold rebounded, rising 1.5% as the USD fell, while iron ore gained 0.7%, with higher Middle East related costs offsetting the resolution of the BHP-CMRG dispute.

International Data

With Governor Bailey pushing back against expectations for more aggressive tightening, the BoE left policy unchanged at 3.75% by an 8-1 vote, with Chief Economist Huw Pill the sole dissenter, favouring a modest hike to curb second-round inflation risks. The policy statement retained a hawkish bias, although policymakers appeared increasingly concerned about growth and loosening labour market conditions, which could see underlying inflation pressures ease over time.

The ECB Governing Council opted to maintain its policy stance, delivering no significant surprises. The statement seemed to place greater emphasis on the risks of second-round effects, which the ECB is monitoring particularly closely. The ECB acknowledged that "upside risks to inflation and downside risks to growth have intensified". Nevertheless, this was not sufficient to convince any policy makers to take action at this policy meeting - the decision to hold was unanimous.

US GDP gained 2% on an annualised basis in Q1 according to the first estimate. Personal consumption weakened further to 1.6% annualised. However, business investment surged almost 9% on the AI infrastructure build out, and government spending experienced a partial reversal of Q4's shutdown induced weakness. Net exports subtracted 1.3ppts from growth in Q1. In March, personal spending gained 0.9%. Personal income growth was robust, however, gaining 0.6%. The US employment cost index was largely as expected in Q1, total compensation rising 0.9%.

Euro Area GDP rose 0.1% in Q1. The unemployment rate meanwhile edged down to 6.2%. In April, consumer inflation jumped 1.0% as the Middle East conflict impacted energy prices. Annual growth remained near target, at 2.2%yr.

Local Data

In Australia, March private credit rose a stronger than expected 0.7%mt, suggesting continued resilience despite tighter monetary policy and a more uncertain economic backdrop (see here).

Cliff Notes: Middle East conflict seemingly at an impasse

Key insights from the week that was.

Regarding the Middle East conflict, the week began with the expectation of a second round of in-person talks between the US and Iran. The start of the negotiations was initially pushed from Tuesday to Wednesday; but President Trump then announced on Truth Social that the meeting had been postponed at the request of Pakistani and Iranian officials to allow time for a "unified proposal" to be developed to be put to the US. Thankfully, having been stretched by both sides at the weekend, the expiring two-week ceasefire was extended indefinitely.

Since Wednesday, there has been no concrete evidence of progress towards a deal, the Iranians seemingly refusing to come to the table while the US' blockade remains in place, and the US refusing to end the blockade until a deal is agreed. Both sides have halted and seized ships within their area of operations, but this has not triggered a ceasefire breach – although it must be noted that President Trump overnight ordered the US Navy to strike any vessel laying mines in the Strait of Hormuz, making clear the risk of further military conflict.

With no clear way out of the stalemate, or timeline for formal talks, the price of Brent oil has rebounded back to around USD106 having (very briefly) fallen as low as USD86 late last week. The longer the impasse persists, the greater the chance of a sustained period of high oil prices and refinery margins, with all costs eventually met by businesses and households across the world.

Central banks remain focused on the degree and persistence of price passthrough to domestic consumer inflation, the risk being that inflation persists well above target into 2027 on second-round effects and an uplift in inflation expectations. ECB President Lagarde this week noted that the staff currently view conditions in the Euro Area as between their baseline and adverse projections from the last meeting, and will act “as the situation demands” ahead. Next week’s run of central bank meetings across the northern hemisphere will provide a more detailed view on the balance of risks and the implications for monetary policy across the developed world.

In the US meanwhile, President Trump’s pick for the next FOMC Chair, Kevin Warsh, appeared before the Senate Banking Committee as part of the confirmation process. Warsh again made clear he believes several aspects of the FOMC’s communications and processes should change, but also showed a clear commitment to central bank independence. The next steps in Warsh’s confirmation remains highly uncertain, with Republican Senator Tillis refusing to approve the appointment at the Committee stage until the Department of Justice close their investigation into the Federal Reserve and Chair Powell. If Senator Tillis holds out until year end, the Administration may face an additional challenge in 2027 as their Senate majority is at risk in the mid-term election. Chair Powell will remain in place in the interim, giving the FOMC continuity and capacity to manage the US economy.

On data front this week, US retail sales rose 1.7% in March, beating expectations. The control group, which feeds into GDP, also surprised to the upside, 0.7%. For the quarter overall, however, the consumer pulse has been weak, and record-low confidence points to downside risks for Q2. The outlook for US business investment is also increasingly uncertain. Across the pond, the UK unemployment rate fell from 5.2% in January to 4.9% in February, though this reflected a decline in participation. Despite the softer labour market print, wages still rose 3.8%yr in February. A spike in energy prices also saw inflation rise 0.7% in March and 3.3% over the year. While the headlines focus on energy prices, sticky services inflation also remains an issue for the UK, 4.5%yr.

Author(s) disclaimer and declaration: The author(s) confirms that (a) no part of his/her compensation was, is, or will be, directly or indirectly, related to any views or (if applicable) recommendations expressed in this material; (b) this material accurately reflects his/her personal views about the financial products, companies or issuers (if applicable) and is based on sources reasonably believed to be reliable and accurate; (c) to the best of the author's knowledge, they are not in receipt of inside information and this material does not contain inside information; and (d) no other part of the Westpac Group has made any attempt to influence this material.

Further important information regarding sustainability-related content: This material may contain statements relating to environmental, social and governance (ESG) topics. These are subject to known and unknown risks, and there are significant uncertainties, limitations, risks and assumptions in the metrics, modelling, data, scenarios, reporting and analysis on which the statements rely. In particular, these areas are rapidly evolving and maturing, and there are variations in approaches and common standards and practice, as well as uncertainty around future related policy and legislation. Some material may include information derived from publicly available sources that have not been independently verified. No representation or warranty is made as to the accuracy, completeness or reliability of the information. There is a risk that the analysis, estimates, judgements, assumptions, views, models, scenarios or projections used may turn out to be incorrect. These risks may cause actual outcomes to differ materially from those expressed or implied. The ESG-related statements in this material do not constitute advice, nor are they guarantees or predictions of future performance, and Westpac gives no representation, warranty or assurance (including as to the quality, accuracy or completeness of the statements). You should seek your own independent advice.

- Interest rates and global energy shock clearly impacting.

The six-month annualised growth rate in the Westpac–Melbourne Institute Leading Index, which indicates the likely pace of economic activity relative to trend three to nine months into the future, declined to -0.13% in March from $+0.05\%$ in February.

The Australian economy has lost momentum over the first few months of the year with more weakness likely to emerge in the months ahead. The March Index already points to a period of below-trend growth over the remainder of 2026. While the growth pulse is not overly weak, it is the first below-trend read since August last year and, prior to that, since the extended period of weakness during the ‘cost-of-living’ crisis of 2022–2024.

The Leading Index growth rate has now swung from $+0.31\%$ in October last year to -0.15% currently, a 0.44ppt deterioration. The detail shows clear drags from the shifting interest rate backdrop and the global energy shock associated with the conflict in the Middle East.

Westpac forecast: +0.2%

Annual change: +2.5% (prev: +2.6%)

Consumer prices rose 0.9% in the March quarter. That saw the annual inflation rate remaining unchanged at 3.1%.

The March quarter inflation result was above the 0.7% rise we were expecting, with surprises spread across tradable and non-tradable categories.

The result was also above the RBNZ's updated forecast from their April policy update for 3% annual inflation.

Importantly, many measures of core inflation have continued to run at levels close to or above the top of the target band. For the RBNZ, that highlights the firm starting point for inflation even before the recent oil price shock.

What contributed to inflation in the March quarter?

Underpinning the March quarter rise in consumer prices were large increases in some specific areas.

- Food prices were up 1.5% over the quarter, underpinned by the usual seasonal increases in the price of fruit, as well as higher prices for confectionary (especially chocolates).
- Unsurprisingly, the other big category that has boosted inflation this quarter were transport costs. The sharp rise in oil prices over the past few weeks has left petrol prices up 3.5% over the quarter, with diesel prices up 11%. Notably, we also saw the early stages of spillovers from high fuel prices into other costs, with domestic airfares up 9% over the quarter.
- In addition to those factors, the March quarter also saw continued increases in electricity charges and the annual increase in the tobacco excise tax. There has also been a big rise in vehicle registration costs and health care costs (the latter related to the annual roll-over in the subscription subsidy).

On the downside, we saw a fall in overseas holiday accommodation costs (-4%) and international airfares (-7%). Both of those declines are seasonal, and in the case of international airfares, we are likely to see large increases over the coming months.

On the housing front, rents were flat over the quarter. That was the weakest result since 2001. It's particularly notable as the start of the year typically sees many rental agreements rolling over and larger increases in rents. This softness comes against a backdrop of low population growth and increases in housing supply, with particularly weak growth in areas like Wellington. We expect housing rental growth will remain muted for some time.

The March quarter also saw a modest 0.5% rise in the cost of a newly built home. Construction cost inflation has been muted for some time. However, there is growing pressure on materials costs, and that's likely to flow through to larger increases in building costs later in the year.

Annual and core inflation

The annual inflation rate was unchanged at 3.1% in the year to March.

Looking under the surface, prices in the domestically oriented non-tradables group rose 1.1% over the quarter (above expectations). That saw annual non-tradables inflation remaining unchanged at 3.5%.

Non-tradables inflation has been lingering above historic averages. In part, that's due to the continued large increases in administered prices, like electricity charges which rose 12.5% over the past year. However, prices in other areas have also been firm. Non-tradables excluding housing and utilities costs (which also omits rates) was 3.5% for the year (up from 3.4% at the end of last year). In seasonally adjusted terms, quarterly non-tradables inflation has been running at a rate 0.9% for most of the past year.

Tradables inflation was also hotter than expected in the March quarter (+0.7 qtr, +2.5% yr), with increases seen across a range of discretionary spending categories. That saw annual tradables inflation excluding food and fuel rising to 1.8% (up from 1.7% at the end of last year and the highest it's been since September 2023).

And over the coming quarters, tradable price inflation is set to accelerate sharply. As well as increase global fuel and transport charges, supply chain disruptions are already pushing up the prices for many imported goods.

While the past quarter did see large moves in a few specific areas like food and fuel prices, these aren't the only areas where we've seen firmness in inflation. Despite dropping back over the past year, key measures of core inflation remain in the upper part of the RBNZ's target band, and several have taken a step higher. (Note: core inflation measures smooth through the quarter-to-quarter swings in inflation and track the underlying trend in prices).

In terms of specifics:

- CPI ex-fuel inflation: +3.2% yr (vs +3.2% previously)
- CPI ex-fuel and food: +3.0% yr (vs +2.9% previously)
- 30% trimmed mean: +2.3%yr (vs +2.5% previously)
- Weighted median +1.6%yr (vs 1.7% previously)

That resilience in core inflation will be important for the RBNZ, highlighting the firm starting point for inflation even before the recent oil price shock

Outlook

This quarter's result was really just the curtain raiser. Both we and the RBNZ now expect inflation will rise to over 4% in the June quarter. We've recently updated our forecasts and had assumed annual inflation would peak at 4.3% in the June quarter, before dropping back to 3.9% by the end of this year. Today's result suggests upside risk to those forecasts

The middle part of the year will see the full brunt of the recent rise in oil prices, as well as related increases in transport and other costs. There will also be a big focus the various survey gauges of forward cost and pricing pressures over the next few months, which will be closely watch for signs of a more enduring lift in inflation.

For the US, an adverse turn is in the making

The US economy is facing a very uncertain future with inflation up and consumer sentiment at record lows.

Headlines tied to the US economy continue to focus on President Trump's Middle East actions and the consequences for global energy prices. Abstracting from this news storm, however, the message from available economic data is the US economy slowed below trend ahead of the conflict, leaving the economy at risk of stalling, at least briefly.

In understanding the US' current state and outlook, it is best to assess recent data chronologically. First estimated at 1.4% annualised, Q4 GDP growth has since been revised to just 0.5%. Underlying the headline revisions, personal consumption growth throttled back from a near-trend 2.4% to a sub-par 1.9%, and business investment from an already-weak 3.7% annualised to 2.4%, as residential investment contracted 1.7% annualised.

Come January and February 2026, personal consumption expenditure was essentially flat and core goods order growth slowed to less than a third of Q4's pace. We do not have reliable data to back the assertion, but it is hard to believe the recent rise in the US 10-year yield and pass-through to the 30-year mortgage rate won't put additional pressure on residential construction. The current Atlanta Fed GDPNow estimate of 1.3% annualised therefore seems likely to slip through April before the formal Q1 GDP result is released by the BEA.

Another step down in momentum, perhaps into outright contraction, come Q2 is clearly a risk. The only data to hand for April is the University of Michigan's consumer sentiment survey. Worryingly, the headline index fell to its weakest read on record at 47.6 – an impressive feat considering the survey dates back to 1978 and has averaged 83.8 since, 43% above April's read. Notably, both current conditions and expectations are at all-time lows, and this is despite nonfarm payrolls having bounced back in March and equity markets, in aggregate, showing resilience.

While nonfarm payrolls have averaged a gain of 68k the past three months, this follows the average loss of 8k jobs per month through the second half of 2025 and material downward revisions to historical estimates prior to that. Household employment outcomes have also been materially weaker over the period. The unemployment rate is essentially unchanged since Q2 2025, but the participation rate has fallen almost 0.7ppts over the period, implying an unemployment rate of 5.0% on a constant participation basis. While not an alarming level historically, relative to the average of the past five years, it implies a marked turn in job creation and building downside risks for activity. This is corroborated by the 1.5ppt decline in the household savings rate since April 2025.

Providing a potential offset is record household wealth. Still, with sentiment as it is, and wealth needing to be liquidated or leveraged to be spent, any wealth effect for consumption is likely to take considerable time to materialise. Furthermore, whereas in the past, the use of wealth by higher-income households could have been complemented by tax breaks and/or cash support for those on lower-incomes, US fiscal authorities no longer have capacity outside of recession.

Taken together, current income and wealth dynamics in the US not only suggest growth is at risk of stalling out mid-year, but also that it could remain weak for an extended period. Thankfully, the FOMC remains equipped with the capacity to support the economy should risks to activity become dominant.

As such, it will be important to assess how the FOMC incorporates upcoming inflation detail into their risk calculations. We expect they will be heartened that the Middle East conflict only impacted headline inflation in March, a 10.9% increase in energy prices tripling the total monthly CPI gain to 0.9%, while core inflation printed at a benign 0.2% (core goods prices up 0.1%, and services 0.2%). Although we still believe capacity constraints across the US economy are likely to hold annual core inflation around the 2.6%yr registered in March throughout 2026, this deviation from target is not material enough to preclude further easing if downside risks for the labour market crystallise come Q2 or Q3.

In contrast to the UK and Europe (and Australia and New Zealand), the chance of a policy rate increase is also slim to non-existent in the US. The outlook for short-end rates should therefore limit gains in term yields to a modest upward drift, a function of gradual portfolio reallocation away from US dollar assets and the edging higher of the US fiscal deficit and government debt.

This analysis was initially released in the April edition of Westpac Market Outlook.

This communication is not being made to or distributed to, and must not be passed on to, the general public in the United Kingdom. Rather, this communication is being made only to and is directed at (a) those persons falling within the definition of Investment Professionals (set out in Article 19(5) of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Financial Promotion) Order 2005 (the "Order")); (b) those persons falling within the definition of high net worth companies, unincorporated associations etc. (set out in Article 49(2) of the Order; (c) other persons to whom it may lawfully be communicated in accordance with the Order or (d) any persons to whom it may otherwise lawfully be made (all such persons together being referred to as "relevant persons"). Any person who is not a relevant person should not act or rely on this communication or any of its contents. In the same way, the information contained in this communication is intended for "eligible counterparties" and “professional clients” as defined by the rules of the Financial Conduct Authority and is not intended for “retail clients”. Westpac expressly prohibits you from passing on the information in this communication to any third party.

European Economic Area (“EEA”): This material may be distributed to you by either: (i) Westpac directly, or (ii) Westpac Europe GmbH (“WEG”) under a sub-licensing arrangement. WEG has not edited or otherwise modified the content of this material. WEG is authorised in Germany by the Federal Financial Supervision Authority (‘BaFin’) and subject to its regulation. WEG’s supervisory authorities are BaFin and the German Federal Bank (‘Deutsche Bundesbank’). WEG is registered with the commercial register (‘Handelsregister’) of the local court of Frankfurt am Main under registration number HRB 118483. In accordance with APRA’s Prudential Standard 222 ‘Association with Related Entities’, Westpac does not stand behind WEG other than as provided for in certain legal agreements (a risk transfer, sub-participation and collateral agreement) between Westpac and WEG and obligations of WEG do not represent liabilities of Westpac. Any product or service made available by WEG does not represent an offer from Westpac or any of its subsidiaries (other than WEG). All disclaimers set out with respect to Westpac apply equally to WEG.

This communication is not intended for distribution to, or use by any person or entity in any jurisdiction or country where such distribution or use would be contrary to local law or regulation.

This communication contains general commentary, research, and market colour. The communication does not constitute investment advice. The material may contain an ‘investment recommendation’ and/or ‘information recommending or suggesting an investment’, both as defined in Regulation (EU) No 596/2014 (including as applicable in the United Kingdom) (“MAR”). In accordance with the relevant provisions of MAR, reasonable care has been taken to ensure that the material has been objectively presented and that interests or conflicts of interest of the sender concerning the financial instruments to which that information relates have been disclosed.

Investment recommendations must be read alongside the specific disclosure which accompanies them and the general disclosure which can be found here. Such disclosure fulfils certain additional information requirements of MAR and associated delegated legislation and by accepting this communication you acknowledge that you are aware of the existence of such additional disclosure and its contents.

To the extent this communication comprises an investment recommendation it is classified as non-independent research. It has not been prepared in accordance with legal requirements designed to promote the independence of investment research and therefore constitutes a marketing communication. Further, this communication is not subject to any prohibition on dealing ahead of the dissemination of investment research.

Things you should know

We respect your privacy: You can view the New Zealand Privacy Policy here, or the Australian Group Privacy Statement here. Each time someone visits our site, data is captured so that we can accurately evaluate the quality of our content and make improvements for you. We may at times use technology to capture data about you to help us to better understand you and your needs, including potentially for the purposes of assessing your individual reading habits and interests to allow us to provide suggestions regarding other reading material which may be suitable for you.

This information, unless specifically indicated otherwise, is under copyright of the Westpac Group. None of the material, nor its contents, nor any copy of it, may be altered in any way, transmitted to, copied or distributed to any other party without the prior written permission of the Westpac Group.

Disclaimer

This information has been prepared by Westpac and is intended for information purposes only. It is not intended to reflect any recommendation or financial advice and investment decisions should not be based on it. This information does not constitute an offer, a solicitation of an offer, or an inducement to subscribe for, purchase or sell any financial instrument or to enter into a legally binding contract. To the extent that this information contains any general advice, it has been prepared without taking into account your objectives, financial situation or needs and before acting on it you should consider the appropriateness of the advice. Certain types of transactions, including those involving futures, options and high yield securities give rise to substantial risk and are not suitable for all investors. We recommend that you seek your own independent legal or financial advice before proceeding with any investment decision.

This information may contain material provided by third parties. While such material is published with the necessary permission none of Westpac or its related entities accepts any responsibility for the accuracy or completeness of any such material. Although we have made every effort to ensure this information is free from error, none of Westpac or its related entities warrants the accuracy, adequacy or completeness of this information, or otherwise endorses it in any way. Except where contrary to law,

Westpac Group intend by this notice to exclude liability for this information. This information is subject to change without notice and none of Westpac or its related entities is under any obligation to update this information or correct any inaccuracy which may become apparent at a later date. This information may contain or incorporate by reference forward looking statements. The words “believe”, “anticipate”, “expect”, “intend”, “plan”, “predict”, “continue”, “assume”, “positioned”, “may”, “will”, “should”, “shall”, “risk” and other similar expressions that are predictions of or indicate future events and future trends identify forward-looking statements. These forward-looking statements include all matters that are not historical facts. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance, nor are forecasts of future performance. Whilst every effort has been taken to ensure that the assumptions on which any forecasts are based are reasonable, the forecasts may be affected by incorrect assumptions or by known or unknown risks and uncertainties. The ultimate outcomes may differ substantially from any forecasts.

Conflicts of Interest: In the normal course of offering banking products and services to its clients, the Westpac Group may act in several capacities (including issuer, market maker, underwriter, distributor, swap counterparty and calculation agent) simultaneously with respect to a financial instrument, giving rise to potential conflicts of interest which may impact the performance of a financial instrument. The Westpac Group may at any time transact or hold a position (including hedging and trading positions) for its own account or the account of a client in any financial instrument which may impact the performance of that financial instrument.

Author(s) disclaimer and declaration: The author(s) confirms that (a) no part of his/her compensation was, is, or will be, directly or indirectly, related to any views or (if applicable) recommendations expressed in this material; (b) this material accurately reflects his/her personal views about the financial products, companies or issuers (if applicable) and is based on sources reasonably believed to be reliable and accurate; (c) to the best of the author’s knowledge, they are not in receipt of inside information and this material does not contain inside information; and (d) no other part of the Westpac Group has made any attempt to influence this material.

Further important information regarding sustainability related content: This material may contain statements relating to environmental, social and governance (ESG) topics. These are subject to known and unknown risks, and there are significant uncertainties, limitations, risks and assumptions in the metrics, modelling, data, scenarios, reporting and analysis on which the statements rely. In particular, these areas are rapidly evolving and maturing, and there are variations in approaches and common standards and practice, as well as uncertainty around future related policy and legislation. Some material may include information derived from publicly available sources that have not been independently verified. No representation or warranty is made as to the accuracy, completeness or reliability of the information. There is a risk that the analysis, estimates, judgements, assumptions, views, models, scenarios or projections used may turn out to be incorrect. These risks may cause actual outcomes to differ materially from those expressed or implied. The ESG-related statements in this material do not constitute advice, nor are they guarantees or predictions of future performance, and Westpac gives no representation, warranty or assurance (including as to the quality, accuracy or completeness of the statements). You should seek your own independent advice.

Additional country disclosures:

Australia: Westpac holds an Australian Financial Services Licence (No. 233714). You can access Westpac's Financial Services Guide here or request a copy from your Westpac point of contact. U.S: Westpac operates in the United States of America as a federally licensed branch, regulated by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency. Westpac is also registered with the US Commodity Futures Trading Commission ("CFTC") as a Swap Dealer, but is neither registered as, or affiliated with, a Futures Commission Merchant registered with the US CFTC. The services and products referenced above are not insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC"). Westpac Capital Markets, LLC ("WCM"), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Westpac, is a broker-dealer registered under the U.S. Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ('the Exchange Act') and member of the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority ('FINRA'). In accordance with APRA's Prudential Standard 222 'Association with Related Entities', Westpac does not stand behind WCM other than as provided for in certain legal agreements between Westpac and WCM and obligations of WCM do not represent liabilities of Westpac.

This communication is provided for distribution to U.S. institutional investors in reliance on the exemption from registration provided by Rule 15a-6 under the Exchange Act and is not subject to all of the independence and disclosure standards applicable to debt research reports prepared for retail investors in the United States. WCM is the U.S. distributor of this communication and accepts responsibility for the contents of this communication. Transactions by U.S. customers of any securities referenced herein should be effected through WCM. All disclaimers set out with respect to Westpac apply equally to WCM. If you would like to speak to someone regarding any security mentioned herein, please contact WCM on +1 212 389 1269. Investing in any non-U.S. securities or related financial instruments mentioned in this communication may present certain risks. The securities of non-U.S. issuers may not be registered with, or be subject to the regulations of, the SEC in the United States. Information on such non-U.S. securities or related financial instruments may be limited. Non-U.S. companies may not be subject to audit and reporting standards and regulatory requirements comparable to those in effect in the United States. The value of any investment or income from any securities or related derivative instruments denominated in a currency other than U.S. dollars is subject to exchange rate fluctuations that may have a positive or adverse effect on the value of or income from such securities or related derivative instruments.

The author of this communication is employed by Westpac and is not registered or qualified as a research analyst, representative, or associated person of WCM or any other U.S. broker-dealer under the rules of FINRA, any other U.S. self-regulatory organisation, or the laws, rules or regulations of any State. Unless otherwise specifically stated, the views expressed herein are solely those of the author and may differ from the information, views or analysis expressed by Westpac and/or its affiliates.

UK: The London branch of Westpac is authorised in the United Kingdom by the Prudential Regulation Authority (PRA) and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA) and limited regulation by the PRA (Financial Services Register number: 124586). The London branch of Westpac is registered at Companies House as a branch established in the United Kingdom (Branch No. BR000106). Details about the extent of the regulation of Westpac's London branch by the PRA are available from us on request.

This communication is not being made to or distributed to, and must not be passed on to, the general public in the United Kingdom. Rather, this communication is being made only to and is directed at (a) those persons falling within the definition of Investment Professionals (set out in Article 19(5) of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Financial Promotion) Order 2005 (the "Order")); (b) those persons falling within the definition of high net worth companies, unincorporated associations etc. (set out in Article 49(2) of the Order; (c) other persons to whom it may lawfully be communicated in accordance with the Order or (d) any persons to whom it may otherwise lawfully be made (all such persons together being referred to as "relevant persons"). Any person who is not a relevant person should not act or rely on this communication or any of its contents. In the same way, the information contained in this communication is intended for "eligible counterparties" and "professional clients" as defined by the rules of the Financial Conduct Authority and is not intended for "retail clients". Westpac expressly prohibits you from passing on the information in this communication to any third party.

European Economic Area ("EEA"): This material may be distributed to you by either: (i) Westpac directly, or (ii) Westpac Europe GmbH ("WEG") under a sub-licensing arrangement.

WEG has not edited or otherwise modified the content of this material. WEG is authorised in Germany by the Federal Financial Supervision Authority ('BaFin') and subject to its regulation. WEG's supervisory authorities are BaFin and the German Federal Bank ('Deutsche Bundesbank'). WEG is registered with the commercial register ('Handelsregister') of the local court of Frankfurt am Main under registration number HRB 118483. In accordance with APRA's Prudential Standard 222 'Association with Related Entities', Westpac does not stand behind WEG other than as provided for in certain legal agreements (a risk transfer, sub-participation and collateral agreement) between Westpac and WEG and obligations of WEG do not represent liabilities of Westpac. Any product or service made available by WEG does not represent an offer from Westpac or any of its subsidiaries (other than WEG). All disclaimers set out with respect to Westpac apply equally to WEG.

This communication is not intended for distribution to, or use by any person or entity in any jurisdiction or country where such distribution or use would be contrary to local law or regulation.

This communication contains general commentary, research, and market colour. The communication does not constitute investment advice. The material may contain an 'investment recommendation' and/or 'information recommending or suggesting an investment', both as defined in Regulation (EU) No 596/2014 (including as applicable in the United Kingdom) ("MAR"). In accordance with the relevant provisions of MAR, reasonable care has been taken to ensure that the material has been objectively presented and that interests or conflicts of interest of the sender concerning the financial instruments to which that information relates have been disclosed.

Investment recommendations must be read alongside the specific disclosure which accompanies them and the general disclosure which can be found here. Such disclosure fulfils certain additional information requirements of MAR and associated delegated legislation and by accepting this communication you acknowledge that you are aware of the existence of such additional disclosure and its contents.

To the extent this communication comprises an investment recommendation it is classified as non-independent research. It has not been prepared in accordance with legal requirements designed to promote the independence of investment research and therefore constitutes a marketing communication. Further, this communication is not subject to any prohibition on dealing ahead of the dissemination of investment research.

Things you should know

We respect your privacy: You can view the New Zealand Privacy Policy here, or the Australian Group Privacy Statement here. Each time someone visits our site, data is captured so that we can accurately evaluate the quality of our content and make improvements for you. We may at times use technology to capture data about you to help us to better understand you and your needs, including potentially for the purposes of assessing your individual reading habits and interests to allow us to provide suggestions regarding other reading material which may be suitable for you.

This information, unless specifically indicated otherwise, is under copyright of the Westpac Group. None of the material, nor its contents, nor any copy of it, may be altered in any way, transmitted to, copied or distributed to any other party without the prior written permission of the Westpac Group.

Disclaimer

This information has been prepared by Westpac and is intended for information purposes only. It is not intended to reflect any recommendation or financial advice and investment decisions should not be based on it. This information does not constitute an offer, a solicitation of an offer, or an inducement to subscribe for, purchase or sell any financial instrument or to enter into a legally binding contract. To the extent that this information contains any general advice, it has been prepared without taking into account your objectives, financial situation or needs and before acting on it you should consider the appropriateness of the advice. Certain types of transactions, including those involving futures, options and high yield securities give rise to substantial risk and are not suitable for all investors. We recommend that you seek your own independent legal or financial advice before proceeding with any investment decision.

This information may contain material provided by third parties. While such material is published with the necessary permission none of Westpac or its related entities accepts any responsibility for the accuracy or completeness of any such material. Although we have made every effort to ensure this information is free from error, none of Westpac or its related entities warrants the accuracy, adequacy or completeness of this information, or otherwise endorses it in any way. Except where contrary to law, Westpac Group intend by this notice to exclude liability for this information. This information is subject to change without notice and none of Westpac or its related entities is under any obligation to update this information or correct any inaccuracy which may become apparent at a later date. This information may contain or incorporate by reference forward-looking statements. The words “believe”, “anticipate”, “expect”, “intend”, “plan”, “predict”, “continue”, “assume”, “positioned”, “may”, “will”, “should”, “shall”, “risk” and other similar expressions that are predictions of or indicate future events and future trends identify forward-looking statements. These forward-looking statements include all matters that are not historical facts. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance, nor are forecasts of future performance. Whilst every effort has been taken to ensure that the assumptions on which any forecasts are based are reasonable, the forecasts may be affected by incorrect assumptions or by known or unknown risks and uncertainties. The ultimate outcomes may differ substantially from any forecasts.

Conflicts of Interest: In the normal course of offering banking products and services to its clients, the Westpac Group may act in several capacities (including issuer, market maker, underwriter, distributor, swap counterparty and calculation agent) simultaneously with respect to a financial instrument, giving rise to potential conflicts of interest which may impact the performance of a financial instrument. The Westpac Group may at any time transact or hold a position (including hedging and trading positions) for its own account or the account of a client in any financial instrument which may impact the performance of that financial instrument.

Author(s) disclaimer and declaration: The author(s) confirms that (a) no part of his/her compensation was, is, or will be, directly or indirectly, related to any views or (if applicable) recommendations expressed in this material; (b) this material accurately reflects his/her personal views about the financial products, companies or issuers (if applicable) and is based on sources reasonably believed to be reliable and accurate; (c) to the best of the author's knowledge, they are not in receipt of inside information and this material does not contain inside information; and (d) no other part of the Westpac Group has made any attempt to influence this material.

Further important information regarding sustainability-related content: This material may contain statements relating to environmental, social and governance (ESG) topics. These are subject to known and unknown risks, and there are significant uncertainties, limitations, risks and assumptions in the metrics, modelling, data, scenarios, reporting and analysis on which the statements rely. In particular, these areas are rapidly evolving and maturing, and there are variations in approaches and common standards and practice, as well as uncertainty around future related policy and legislation. Some material may include information derived from publicly available sources that have not been independently verified. No representation or warranty is made as to the accuracy, completeness or reliability of the information. There is a risk that the analysis, estimates, judgements, assumptions, views, models, scenarios or projections used may turn out to be incorrect. These risks may cause actual outcomes to differ materially from those expressed or implied. The ESG-related statements in this material do not constitute advice, nor are they guarantees or predictions of future performance, and Westpac gives no representation, warranty or assurance (including as to the quality, accuracy or completeness of the statements). You should seek your own independent advice.

Additional country disclosures:

Australia: Westpac holds an Australian Financial Services Licence (No. 233714). You can access Westpac's Financial Services Guide here or request a copy from your Westpac point of contact. To the extent that this information contains any general advice, it has been prepared without taking into account your objectives, financial situation or needs and before acting on it you should consider the appropriateness of the advice.

New Zealand: In New Zealand, Westpac Institutional Bank refers to the brand under which products and services are provided by either Westpac (NZ division) or Westpac New Zealand Limited (company number 1763882), the New Zealand incorporated subsidiary of Westpac ("WNZL"). Any product or service made available by WNZL does not represent an offer from Westpac or any of its subsidiaries (other than WNZL). Neither Westpac nor its other subsidiaries guarantee or otherwise support the performance of WNZL in respect of any such product. WNZL is not an authorised deposit-taking institution for the purposes of Australian prudential standards. The current disclosure statements for the New Zealand branch of Westpac and WNZL can be obtained at the internet address www.westpac.co.nz.

Singapore: This material has been prepared and issued for distribution in Singapore to institutional investors, accredited investors and expert investors (as defined in the applicable Singapore laws and regulations) only. Recipients of this material in Singapore should contact Westpac Singapore Branch in respect of any matters arising from, or in connection with, this material. Westpac Singapore Branch holds a wholesale banking licence and is subject to supervision by the Monetary Authority of Singapore.

Fiji: Unless otherwise specified, the products and services for Westpac Fiji are available from www.westpac.com.fj © Westpac Banking Corporation ABN 33 007 457 141. This information does not take your personal circumstances into account and before acting on it you should consider the appropriateness of the information for your financial situation. Westpac Banking Corporation ABN 33 007 457 141 is incorporated in NSW Australia and registered as a branch in Fiji. The liability of its members is limited.

Papua New Guinea: Unless otherwise specified, the products and services for Westpac PNG are available from www.westpac.com.pg © Westpac Banking Corporation ABN 33 007 457 141. This information does not take your personal circumstances into account and before acting on it you should consider the appropriateness of the information for your financial situation. Westpac Banking Corporation ABN 33 007 457 141 is incorporated in NSW Australia. Westpac is represented in Papua New Guinea by Westpac Bank - PNG - Limited. The liability of its members is limited.

U.S.: Westpac operates in the United States of America as a federally licensed branch, regulated by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency. Westpac is also registered with the US Commodity Futures Trading Commission ("CFTC") as a Swap Dealer, but is neither registered as, or affiliated with, a Futures Commission Merchant registered with the US CFTC. The services and products referenced above are not insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC"). Westpac Capital Markets, LLC ('WCM'), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Westpac, is a broker-dealer registered under the U.S. Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ('the Exchange Act') and member of the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority ('FINRA'). In accordance with APRA's Prudential Standard 222 'Association with Related Entities', Westpac does not stand behind WCM other than as provided for in certain legal agreements between Westpac and WCM and obligations of WCM do not represent liabilities of Westpac.

This communication is provided for distribution to U.S. institutional investors in reliance on the exemption from registration provided by Rule 15a-6 under the Exchange Act and is not subject to all of the independence and disclosure standards applicable to debt research reports prepared for retail investors in the United States. WCM is the U.S. distributor of this communication and accepts responsibility for the contents of this communication. Transactions by U.S. customers of any securities referenced herein should be effected through WCM. All disclaimers set out with respect to Westpac apply equally to WCM. If you would like to speak to someone regarding any security mentioned herein, please contact WCM on +1 212 389 1269. Investing in any non-U.S. securities or related financial instruments mentioned in this communication may present certain risks. The securities of non-U.S. issuers may not be registered with, or be subject to the regulations of, the SEC in the United States. Information on such non-U.S. securities or related financial instruments may be limited. Non-U.S. companies may not be subject to audit and reporting standards and regulatory requirements comparable to those in effect in the United States. The value of any investment or income from any securities or related derivative instruments denominated in a currency other than U.S. dollars is subject to exchange rate fluctuations that may have a positive or adverse effect on the value of or income from such securities or related derivative instruments.

The author of this communication is employed by Westpac and is not registered or qualified as a research analyst, representative, or associated person of WCM or any other U.S. broker-dealer under the rules of FINRA, any other U.S. self-regulatory organisation, or the laws, rules or regulations of any State. Unless otherwise specifically stated, the views expressed herein are solely those of the author and may differ from the information, views or analysis expressed by Westpac and/or its affiliates.

UK: The London branch of Westpac is authorised in the United Kingdom by the Prudential Regulation Authority (PRA) and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA) and limited regulation by the PRA (Financial Services Register number: 124586). The London branch of Westpac is registered at Companies House as a branch established in the United Kingdom (Branch No. BR000106). Details about the extent of the regulation of Westpac's London branch by the PRA are available from us on request.

This communication is not being made to or distributed to, and must not be passed on to, the general public in the United Kingdom. Rather, this communication is being made only to and is directed at (a) those persons falling within the definition of Investment Professionals (set out in Article 19(5) of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Financial Promotion) Order 2005 (the "Order")); (b) those persons falling within the definition of high net worth companies, unincorporated associations etc. (set out in Article 49(2) of the Order; (c) other persons to whom it may lawfully be communicated in accordance with the Order or (d) any persons to whom it may otherwise lawfully be made (all such persons together being referred to as "relevant persons"). Any person who is not a relevant person should not act or rely on this communication or any of its contents. In the same way, the information contained in this communication is intended for "eligible counterparties" and “professional clients” as defined by the rules of the Financial Conduct Authority and is not intended for “retail clients”. Westpac expressly prohibits you from passing on the information in this communication to any third party.

European Economic Area (“EEA”): This material may be distributed to you by either: (i) Westpac directly, or (ii) Westpac Europe GmbH (“WEG”) under a sub-licensing arrangement. WEG has not edited or otherwise modified the content of this material. WEG is authorised in Germany by the Federal Financial Supervision Authority (‘BaFin’) and subject to its regulation. WEG’s supervisory authorities are BaFin and the German Federal Bank (‘Deutsche Bundesbank’). WEG is registered with the commercial register (‘Handelsregister’) of the local court of Frankfurt am Main under registration number HRB 118483. In accordance with APRA’s Prudential Standard 222 ‘Association with Related Entities’, Westpac does not stand behind WEG other than as provided for in certain legal agreements (a risk transfer, sub-participation and collateral agreement) between Westpac and WEG and obligations of WEG do not represent liabilities of Westpac. Any product or service made available by WEG does not represent an offer from Westpac or any of its subsidiaries (other than WEG). All disclaimers set out with respect to Westpac apply equally to WEG.

This communication is not intended for distribution to, or use by any person or entity in any jurisdiction or country where such distribution or use would be contrary to local law or regulation.

This communication contains general commentary, research, and market colour. The communication does not constitute investment advice. The material may contain an ‘investment recommendation’ and/or ‘information recommending or suggesting an investment’, both as defined in Regulation (EU) No 596/2014 (including as applicable in the United Kingdom) (“MAR”). In accordance with the relevant provisions of MAR, reasonable care has been taken to ensure that the material has been objectively presented and that interests or conflicts of interest of the sender concerning the financial instruments to which that information relates have been disclosed.

Investment recommendations must be read alongside the specific disclosure which accompanies them and the general disclosure which can be found here. Such disclosure fulfils certain additional information requirements of MAR and associated delegated legislation and by accepting this communication you acknowledge that you are aware of the existence of such additional disclosure and its contents.

To the extent this communication comprises an investment recommendation it is classified as non-independent research. It has not been prepared in accordance with legal requirements designed to promote the independence of investment research and therefore constitutes a marketing communication. Further, this communication is not subject to any prohibition on dealing ahead of the dissemination of investment research.

A two-minute video update on the New Zealand economy and markets from Chief Economist Kelly Eckhold.

High inflation, weak growth, OCR rising

This week we discuss the Iran war noting that little change implies building pressure. Domestic data confirms an outlook of weak growth, high inflation and higher interest rates. That's a tough combo.

None of the material, nor its contents, nor any copy of it, may be altered in any way, transmitted to, copied or distributed to any other party without the prior written permission of the Westpac Group.

Disclaimer

This information has been prepared by Westpac and is intended for information purposes only. It is not intended to reflect any recommendation or financial advice and investment decisions should not be based on it. This information does not constitute an offer, a solicitation of an offer, or an inducement to subscribe for, purchase or sell any financial instrument or to enter into a legally binding contract. To the extent that this information contains any general advice, it has been prepared without taking into account your objectives, financial situation or needs and before acting on it you should consider the appropriateness of the advice. Certain types of transactions, including those involving futures, options and high yield securities give rise to substantial risk and are not suitable for all investors. We recommend that you seek your own independent legal or financial advice before proceeding with any investment decision.

This information may contain material provided by third parties. While such material is published with the necessary permission none of Westpac or its related entities accepts any responsibility for the accuracy or completeness of any such material. Although we have made every effort to ensure this information is free from error, none of Westpac or its related entities warrants the accuracy, adequacy or completeness of this information, or otherwise endorses it in any way. Except where contrary to law, Westpac Group intend by this notice to exclude liability for this information. This information is subject to change without notice and none of Westpac or its related entities is under any obligation to update this information or correct any inaccuracy which may become apparent at a later date. This information may contain or incorporate by reference forward-looking statements. The words “believe”, “anticipate”, “expect”, “intend”, “plan”, “predict”, “continue”, “assume”, “positioned”, “may”, “will”, “should”, “shall”, “risk” and other similar expressions that are predictions of or indicate future events and future trends identify forward-looking statements. These forward-looking statements include all matters that are not historical facts. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance, nor are forecasts of future performance. Whilst every effort has been taken to ensure that the assumptions on which any forecasts are based are reasonable, the forecasts may be affected by incorrect assumptions or by known or unknown risks and uncertainties. The ultimate outcomes may differ substantially from any forecasts.

Conflicts of Interest: In the normal course of offering banking products and services to its clients, the Westpac Group may act in several capacities (including issuer, market maker, underwriter, distributor, swap counterparty and calculation agent) simultaneously with respect to a financial instrument, giving rise to potential conflicts of interest which may impact the performance of a financial instrument. The Westpac Group may at any time transact or hold a position (including hedging and trading positions) for its own account or the account of a client in any financial instrument which may impact the performance of that financial instrument.

Author(s) disclaimer and declaration: The author(s) confirms that (a) no part of his/her compensation was, is, or will be, directly or indirectly, related to any views or (if applicable) recommendations expressed in this material; (b) this material accurately reflects his/her personal views about the financial products, companies or issuers (if applicable) and is based on sources reasonably believed to be reliable and accurate; (c) to the best of the author's knowledge, they are not in receipt of inside information and this material does not contain inside information; and (d) no other part of the Westpac Group has made any attempt to influence this material.

Further important information regarding sustainability-related content: This material may contain statements relating to environmental, social and governance (ESG) topics. These are subject to known and unknown risks, and there are significant uncertainties, limitations, risks and assumptions in the metrics, modelling, data, scenarios, reporting and analysis on which the statements rely. In particular, these areas are rapidly evolving and maturing, and there are variations in approaches and common standards and practice, as well as uncertainty around future related policy and legislation. Some material may include information derived from publicly available sources that have not been independently verified. No representation or warranty is made as to the accuracy, completeness or reliability of the information. There is a risk that the analysis, estimates, judgements, assumptions, views, models, scenarios or projections used may turn out to be incorrect. These risks may cause actual outcomes to differ materially from those expressed or implied. The ESG-related statements in this material do not constitute advice, nor are they guarantees or predictions of future performance, and Westpac gives no representation, warranty or assurance (including as to the quality, accuracy or completeness of the statements). You should seek your own independent advice.

U.S.: Westpac operates in the United States of America as a federally licensed branch, regulated by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency. Westpac is also registered with the US Commodity Futures Trading Commission ("CFTC") as a Swap Dealer, but is neither registered as, or affiliated with, a Futures Commission Merchant registered with the US CFTC. The services and products referenced above are not insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC"). Westpac Capital Markets, LLC ('WCM'), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Westpac, is a broker-dealer registered under the U.S. Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ('the Exchange Act') and member of the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority ('FINRA'). In accordance with APRA's Prudential Standard 222 'Association with Related Entities', Westpac does not stand behind WCM other than as provided for in certain legal agreements between Westpac and WCM and obligations of WCM do not represent liabilities of Westpac.

This communication is provided for distribution to U.S. institutional investors in reliance on the exemption from registration provided by Rule 15a-6 under the Exchange Act and is not subject to all of the independence and disclosure standards applicable to debt research reports prepared for retail investors in the United States. WCM is the U.S. distributor of this communication and accepts responsibility for the contents of this communication. Transactions by U.S. customers of any securities referenced herein should be effected through WCM. All disclaimers set out with respect to Westpac apply equally to WCM. If you would like to speak to someone regarding any security mentioned herein, please contact WCM on +1 212 389 1269. Investing in any non-U.S. securities or related financial instruments mentioned in this communication may present certain risks. The securities of non-U.S. issuers may not be registered with, or be subject to the regulations of, the SEC in the United States. Information on such non-U.S. securities or related financial instruments may be limited. Non-U.S. companies may not be subject to audit and reporting standards and regulatory requirements comparable to those in effect in the United States. The value of any investment or income from any securities or related derivative instruments denominated in a currency other than U.S. dollars is subject to exchange rate fluctuations that may have a positive or adverse effect on the value of or income from such securities or related derivative instruments.

The author of this communication is employed by Westpac and is not registered or qualified as a research analyst, representative, or associated person of WCM or any other U.S. broker-dealer under the rules of FINRA, any other U.S. self-regulatory organisation, or the laws, rules or regulations of any State. Unless otherwise specifically stated, the views expressed herein are solely those of the author and may differ from the information, views or analysis expressed by Westpac and/or its affiliates.

UK: The London branch of Westpac is authorised in the United Kingdom by the Prudential Regulation Authority (PRA) and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA) and limited regulation by the PRA (Financial Services Register number: 124586). The London branch of Westpac is registered at Companies House as a branch established in the United Kingdom (Branch No. BR000106). Details about the extent of the regulation of Westpac's London branch by the PRA are available from us on request.

This communication is not being made to or distributed to, and must not be passed on to, the general public in the United Kingdom. Rather, this communication is being made only to and is directed at (a) those persons falling within the definition of Investment Professionals (set out in Article 19(5) of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Financial Promotion) Order 2005 (the "Order")); (b) those persons falling within the definition of high net worth companies, unincorporated associations etc. (set out in Article 49(2) of the Order; (c) other persons to whom it may lawfully be communicated in accordance with the Order or (d) any persons to whom it may otherwise lawfully be made (all such persons together being referred to as "relevant persons"). Any person who is not a relevant person should not act or rely on this communication or any of its contents. In the same way, the information contained in this communication is intended for "eligible counterparties" and “professional clients” as defined by the rules of the Financial Conduct Authority and is not intended for “retail clients”. Westpac expressly prohibits you from passing on the information in this communication to any third party.

European Economic Area (“EEA”): This material may be distributed to you by either: (i) Westpac directly, or (ii) Westpac Europe GmbH (“WEG”) under a sub-licensing arrangement. WEG has not edited or otherwise modified the content of this material. WEG is authorised in Germany by the Federal Financial Supervision Authority (‘BaFin’) and subject to its regulation. WEG’s supervisory authorities are BaFin and the German Federal Bank (‘Deutsche Bundesbank’). WEG is registered with the commercial register (‘Handelsregister’) of the local court of Frankfurt am Main under registration number HRB 118483. In accordance with APRA’s Prudential Standard 222 ‘Association with Related Entities’, Westpac does not stand behind WEG other than as provided for in certain legal agreements (a risk transfer, sub-participation and collateral agreement) between Westpac and WEG and obligations of WEG do not represent liabilities of Westpac. Any product or service made available by WEG does not represent an offer from Westpac or any of its subsidiaries (other than WEG). All disclaimers set out with respect to Westpac apply equally to WEG.

This communication is not intended for distribution to, or use by any person or entity in any jurisdiction or country where such distribution or use would be contrary to local law or regulation.

This communication contains general commentary, research, and market colour. The communication does not constitute investment advice. The material may contain an ‘investment recommendation’ and/or ‘information recommending or suggesting an investment’, both as defined in Regulation (EU) No 596/2014 (including as applicable in the United Kingdom) (“MAR”). In accordance with the relevant provisions of MAR, reasonable care has been taken to ensure that the material has been objectively presented and that interests or conflicts of interest of the sender concerning the financial instruments to which that information relates have been disclosed.

Investment recommendations must be read alongside the specific disclosure which accompanies them and the general disclosure which can be found here. Such disclosure fulfils certain additional information requirements of MAR and associated delegated legislation and by accepting this communication you acknowledge that you are aware of the existence of such additional disclosure and its contents.

To the extent this communication comprises an investment recommendation it is classified as non-independent research. It has not been prepared in accordance with legal requirements designed to promote the independence of investment research and therefore constitutes a marketing communication. Further, this communication is not subject to any prohibition on dealing ahead of the dissemination of investment research.
