Navigating component headwinds better than expected

Q226 margin surprisingly held up amid component cost pressure

MSI reported Q2 sales NT$49.9bn, -11.3% QoQ/-18.6% YoY and below consensus expectation of 5% sequential decline, due to softer demand as consumers awaits for better entry point on intensive price hikes. This was in line with our view on slower pull-ins from higher component costs. That being said, margins held up better than expected. Gross margin improved 1ppt QoQ to 16.0%, ahead of UBSe/Street's forecasts of 12.2%/12.8%; while OpM declined slightly from 6.9% in Q1 to 6.6% in Q2. We have underestimated its flexibility on material procurement, inventory management, and pricing adjustments, which had led to sustainable margins. Q2 EPS was NT$3.55, 42%/49% higher than UBSe/Street thanks to better margins. July sales were reported at NT$19.3bn, +8.9% MoM & flat YoY, suggesting some shipment recovery.

Favourable pricing uplifts from graphic card price hikes and better product mix

Our studies suggest more hefty graphic card price hikes are likely to hit the market in H226 as major chipset suppliers seek to pass on higher component cost increases. Mid to high-end graphic cards, such as Nvidia RTX 50-series retail pricing are looking to surge by 20-40% as strong AI server demand are taking up most GDDR memory supplies, leading to intensive price increases for consumer graphic cards. While we anticipate memory price hikes to somewhat weighing on consumer demand, MB/VGA suppliers have been showing optimism on MB/VGA shipments into H226E as AI applications drive device/equipment upgrades with potential demand uptick for holiday seasons. The industry is taking on rising risks of component price hikes, notably for memory and SSD, where MB/VGA has been more proactively adjusting selling prices to secure reasonable profitability. Meanwhile, Micro-Star has noted its first batch of Nvidia N1X chipset shipment is seeing strong demand with increasing orders from US/China customers. MSI's RTX Spark PC is scheduled to launch by end of Q3 and early Q426; and AI server products are also going through customer qualifications. We project sales to grow 10% and 4% in Q326E and Q426E, respectively, mainly driven by better graphic card pricing and better product mix for higher value added products including AI PCs and AI servers.

Valuation: Refresh PT to NT$155 and maintain Neutral

We lift 2027/2028E sales growth from 7%/9% YoY to 11%/10% YoY mainly to reflect higher pricing (despite slower volumes) as AI demand will likely continue to drive GPU price hikes, especially for high-end graphic cards. We raise 2026/2027/2028E EPS by 15%/17%/17%, and lift PT from NT$108 to NT$155, based on 13x 2028E P/E (rolled over from 12x 2027 P/E), in line with global hardware peers and implies 0.8x PEG. While we are seeing improving product mix, MSI stock has gone up 58% since end of Apr, outperforming its Taiwanese MB/VGA peers Asustek/Gigabyte +44%/+28%. We see balanced risk-reward and fairly priced with limited AI exposure, especially for servers.

UBS Research THESIS MAP a guide to our thinking and what’s where in this report

PIVOTAL QUESTIONS

Q: Will graphics cards sales resume growth?

Likely. Previous UBS Evidence Lab studies showed pricing for NVDA RTX 50 series plateaued in 2025 after its launch, yet we recently has started to see retail market data suggesting pricing is picking up again for consumer graphic cards. Mid to high-end graphic cards are looking to surge by 20-40% in H226 and potentially up further into 2027/2028E as strong AI server demand are taking up most GDDR memory supplies, leading to intensive price hikes for consumer graphic cards. While we anticipate memory price hikes to somewhat weighing on consumer demand/volumes, we are seeing a wider price hikes in major markets including US and China, which could lead to graphic card market value growth in 2026E.

Q: Will MSI benefit from the rise of AI servers?

Unlikely at the moment. Although we think Taiwan is the foundation of the computing industry and Taiwan’s server system makers command roughly 90% global market share of server MBs, including AI servers, MSI has limited AI server exposure as a late comer. Notably, most of MSI’s business is driven by components, which we believe are still highly cyclical and impacted by consumer demand and the macro environment. We see the company making efforts to win server projects but its server revenue contribution remains small at below low single digits and will take time to meaningfully contribute.

UBSVIEW

We still anticipate relatively slow MB/VGA volumes as component price hikes continue to weigh on consumer demand. UBS forecasts 2026 PC shipment at +1% YoY, holding up on the back of ASPs +13.5% YoY as OEMs pass on higher memory and CPU costs; and project PC units +2% YoY in 2027E (LINK). We anticipate AI demand will likely continue to drive GPU price hikes, especially for high-end graphic cards; where better graphic card pricing and better product mix toward higher value added products including AI PCs and AI servers will be the major revenue driver while margin sustainability remains to be proven.

EVIDENCE

Retail website (link) has shown Nvidia’s RTX 50 series of Blackwell graphic cards has seen significant price increase over the past few months, up c.40% already in August, while GeForce RTX 5060/5070/5080 are also seeing modest price increase, mainly driven by memory pricing adjustments. Asustek and Gigabyte have yet reported Q2 results, but MSI inventories have gone up by 25%QoQ/30% YoY with DOI up from 90 days in Q126 to 115 days in Q226, suggesting pull-ins ahead of component price hikes and preparation for new product launches.

WHAT’S PRICED IN?

The stock is trading at 14x/13x 2027/2028E P/E, vs. its historical range of 6-16x. We believe its recent performance (MSI stock up 58% since end of Apr, outperforming its Taiwanese MB/VGA peers Asustek/Gigabyte +44%/+28%) has factored in the expectations on stronger consumer graphic card pricing, but we see balanced risk-reward considering limited AI exposure, especially for servers.

Micro-Star International is trading at NT$154.00 (as of 11 Aug 2026)

UPSIDE (NT$215.00): In our upside scenario, we factor in 1) AI upcycle driving component shortages leading to price hikes for PC and consumer graphic cards; 2) stronger-than-expected PC and gaming demand; 3) development into new server business momentum exceeding expectations; and 4) stronger margins from a favourable product mix and better operating leverage. We assume 2028E total revenue of NT $293.0bn, with components and systems to grow at 18% and 14% YoY in 2028E, respectively, and we assume net margin of 4.1% to arrive at 2028E EPS of $14.10. We then apply ~15x multiple to 2028 EPS to arrive at $215 upside valuation.

BASE (NT$155.00): We assume 2028E total revenue of NT$266.3bn with components and systems to grow at 10% and 10% YoY in 2028E, respectively, and we assume net margin of 3.8% to arrive at 2028E EPS of $12.03. We then apply ~13x multiple to 2028E EPS to arrive at $155 price target.

DOWNSIDE (NT$90.00): In our downside scenario, we factor in worse-than-expected PC and gaming demand, a lack of new server business development and weaker margins from less operating leverage and intensified competition. We assume 2028E total revenue of NT$233.4bn with components and systems to grow at 2% and 5% YoY in 2028E, respectively, and we assume net margin of 3.3% to arrive at 2028E EPS of $9.16. We then apply ~10x multiple to 2028E EPS to arrive at $90 downside valuation.

Company Description

Established in 1986, Micro-Star International (MSI) leads in graphics card and motherboard manufacturing, as well as gaming PCs. In 2024, components (including graphics, motherboards and monitors) accounted for 48% of MSI's total revenue, followed by system products (including notebooks and desktops), at 45%, and other products (such as enterprise platform solutions, automotive and commercial solutions), at 7%.

Valuation Method and Risk Statement

Our price target for Micro-Star International (MSI) is based on P/E ratio.

Company-specific downside risks include: 1) weak demand for graphic processors (GPUs) and gaming PC leading to softer graphic card sales; 2) a weak PC market leading to a slow motherboard replacement cycle; and 3) intensified margin pressure on pricing competition or an inventory correction.

Upside risks include: 1) stronger-than-expected demand for GPUs and gaming PCs leading to substantial growth in graphic card sales; 2) a strong PC market leading to an accelerated motherboard replacement cycle; and 3) clearer evidence of a structurally sustainable AI server business supporting a valuation re-rating.

Sector risks: Investing in the technology sector involves a high degree of risk. Rapid technological changes, increasing competition and exposure to macroeconomic cycles are among the many risks faced by investors in technology stocks. Moreover, it is extremely difficult to project the financial results of tech companies, since their operating models are highly volatile and unpredictable. Finally, valuing technology stocks can prove challenging, as neither traditional nor non-traditional valuation measures provide much insight into how these stocks trade.

None of UBS or its representatives is suggesting that the recipient or any other person take a specific course of action or any action at all. The recipient should carefully read this document in its entirety and not draw inferences or conclusions from the rating alone. By receiving this document, the recipient acknowledges and agrees with the intended purpose described above and further disclaims any expectation or belief that the information constitutes investment advice to the recipient or otherwise purports to meet the investment objectives of the recipient. The financial instruments described in the document may not be eligible for sale in all jurisdictions or to certain categories of investors.

Options, structured derivative products and futures (including OTC derivatives) are not suitable for all investors. Trading in these instruments is considered risky and may be appropriate only for sophisticated investors. Prior to buying or selling an option, and for the complete risks relating to options, you must receive a copy of "The Characteristics and Risks of Standardized Options." You may read the document at <https://www.theocc.com/publications/risks/riskchap1.jsp> or ask your salesperson for a copy. Various theoretical explanations of the risks associated with these instruments have been published. Supporting documentation for any claims, comparisons, recommendations, statistics or other technical data will be supplied upon request. Past performance is not necessarily indicative of future results. Transaction costs may be significant in option strategies calling for multiple purchases and sales of options, such as spreads and straddles. Because of the importance of tax considerations to many options transactions, the investor considering options should consult with his/her tax advisor as to how taxes affect the outcome of contemplated options transactions.

Mortgage and asset-backed securities may involve a high degree of risk and may be highly volatile in response to fluctuations in interest rates or other market conditions. Foreign currency rates of exchange may adversely affect the value, price or income of any security or related instrument referred to in the document. For investment advice, trade execution or other enquiries, clients should contact their local sales representative.

Investing in structured investments involves significant risks. For a detailed discussion of the risks involved in investing in any particular structured investment, you must read the relevant offering materials for that investment. Structured investments are unsecured obligations of a particular issuer with returns linked to the performance of an underlying asset. Depending on the terms of the investment, investors could lose all or a substantial portion of their investment based on the performance of the underlying asset. Investors could also lose their entire investment if the issuer becomes insolvent. UBS does not guarantee in any way the obligations or the financial condition of any issuer or the accuracy of any financial information provided by any issuer. Structured investments are not traditional investments and investing in a structured investment is not equivalent to investing directly in the underlying asset. Structured investments may have limited or no liquidity, and investors should be prepared to hold their investment to maturity. The return of structured investments may be limited by a maximum gain, participation rate or other feature. Structured investments may include call features and, if a structured investment is called early, investors would not earn any further return and may not be able to reinvest in similar investments with similar terms. Structured investments include costs and fees which are generally embedded in the price of the investment. The tax treatment of a structured investment may be complex and may differ from a direct investment in the underlying asset. UBS and its employees do not provide tax advice. Investors should consult their own tax advisor about their own tax situation before investing in any securities.

Important Information About Sustainable Investing Strategies: Sustainable investing strategies aim to consider and incorporate environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into investment process and portfolio construction. Strategies across geographies approach ESG analysis and incorporate the findings in a variety of ways. Incorporating ESG factors or sustainable investing considerations may inhibit the portfolio manager's ability to participate in certain investment opportunities that otherwise would be consistent with its investment objective and other principal investment strategies. The returns on a portfolio incorporating ESG factors or sustainable investing considerations may be lower or higher than portfolios where ESG factors, exclusions, or other sustainability issues are not considered by the portfolio manager, and the investment opportunities available to such portfolios may differ.
