Japan: BoJ expected to hold rates at 1.25%

We expect the Bank of Japan to keep its policy rate unchanged at 1.25% on Friday as it assesses the impact of last month's 25bp hike. Our base case assumes two additional 25bp hikes in January and April 2027, taking the policy rate to 1.75%. While inflation remains elevated, policymakers may prefer more time to monitor the economy, particularly as the government continues to support domestic demand.

Japan will release its October Tokyo inflation data and September retail sales and industrial production on Friday. Market consensus is for headline inflation to remain unchanged at 2.7% year-on-year, while core inflation eases slightly to 2.6%. Retail sales growth is expected to accelerate to 3.3% YoY, while industrial production rebounds by 1.3% month-on-month following August's sharp decline.

China: Fifth Plenum takes centre stage

The key event for China is the Fifth Plenary Session of the 20th Chinese Communist Party Central Committee, taking place in B

South Korea releases third-quarter GDP data on Tuesday. Market consensus expects growth to moderate to 3.2% YoY from 3.7% in the second quarter, while sequential growth edges up to 0.8% quarter-on-quarter. Continued strength in semiconductor demand should support underlying momentum. A solid reading would reinforce the Bank of Korea's view that economic growth remains resilient.
