On hoping you'll be wrong

Luci Ellis
Chief Economist, Westpac Group

- The economy does not care about your feelings, so forecasts must reflect what you think is the most likely outcome, not necessarily what you wish would happen. This distinction is especially salient now. The outright fall in global fuel supply has different implications than other recent supply shocks, and the outlook for Australia and the world is rough.
- The ceasefire announced this week was obviously welcome, but the question is whether the Strait of Hormuz opens properly. The first 24 hours after the announcement were not promising. But if it does, that would be a better outcome than the baseline forecast update we released last week. We would be happy if our baseline forecast was wrong for this reason.
- The key issue for Australia, and for the domestic interest rate outlook, is how much of the energy price shock is already being passed through to prices of other goods and services. The RBA will be watching for this kind of behaviour, including through its liaison program, and will see it as a further leg up in underlying inflation from a rate that was already higher than desired.

The thing about forecasting is that your preferences do not matter. A baseline scenario is simply what you think is most likely. It is not necessarily what you wish would happen. And of course things could play out differently. It is the role of scenario and risk-sensitivity analysis to articulate these other possible future states of the world.

The disconnect between what you hope will happen and what you think will actually happen is especially salient now. The near-term outlook for Australia is tough: higher inflation, with consumers again squeezed by some combination of higher interest rates, lower income growth and higher unemployment. Things are even worse for many other countries. Australia has been able to leverage its LNG exports to ensure we have – so far – not been left short of other fuels. Many lower-income countries do not have this advantage and have been facing the prospect of shortages and rationing; some of our neighbours in the Pacific are particularly hard-hit.

The economic shock from the Gulf conflict centres on global oil and gas supply. It is different from COVID, when the disruptions were all the way down supply chains. It also differs from the energy shock following Russia's invasion of Ukraine, where the Russian oil and gas supply did not disappear, it just needed time to be redistributed to non-European nations willing to buy it despite the sanctions; the peak decline in its oil output was estimated to be around 3 million barrels per day, but the disruption faded quickly. This time around, the oil and gas are not getting out of the Persian Gulf. Some production has been redirected through Saudi pipelines to other ports, but not all of it. Current estimates are that the net reduction of global production has been 8–9 million barrels per day for oil and one-fifth of pre-war global supply for gas. And at the same time, Russia's output capacity has been reduced by successful Ukrainian attacks on Russian oil infrastructure; news reports suggest this has cut global output by a further 0.7–1 million barrels per day.

The effect on prices from such a cut to capacity was always going to be severe.

“Forecasts are an assessment of the most likely outcome, not the preferred one.”

News this week that a two-week ceasefire had been agreed was obviously welcome. Assuming it holds well enough to reopen the Strait of Hormuz properly – a big if given the attacks in the 24 hours following its announcement – it would be a better outcome than the baseline update we released last week, and one of the “risks on both sides” we contemplated when we released it. A lasting ceasefire and faster opening up of the Strait would put energy prices on a trajectory between the one we contemplated in last week's baseline, and the one underpinning the forecasts in the March Market Outlook. A return to pre-war prices is unlikely in the short term, though, given the damage to oil and gas infrastructure in the Gulf states and in Russia.

Even if the ceasefire holds well enough that the Strait stays open, a key watchpoint is whether ships enter the Gulf during the next two weeks, not just whether those previously stuck there leave. If ships do not enter, the next wave of production will not be able to be shipped. Supply will sag again a few weeks later and prices will rebound, especially for refined product.

If the ceasefire does not hold, the reprieve on fuel supply will be brief. Trust between the parties is low and Iranian control of the Strait – even jointly with Oman – is an unstable equilibrium that is unacceptable to much of the rest of the world. Even if the ceasefire gets back on track after its rocky start, flare-ups later in the year cannot be ruled out.

The real question for Australia, and for the domestic interest rate outlook, is how much of the energy price shock is already being passed through to prices of other goods and services. On this there is less cause for optimism. While 'temporary fuel levies' are easier to unwind as fuel prices decline, for many products, list prices have been lifted significantly and a reversal seems less likely. Building materials are a particular issue, with the cost of building a detached home increasing as much as 10%, on our preliminary estimates. The lift in pricing has been widespread across industries and in some cases quite large relative to overall inflation trends. The RBA will be watching for this kind of behaviour, including through its liaison program, and will see it as a further leg up in underlying inflation from a rate that was already higher than desired.

Our next forecast round, scheduled for release next week, will contemplate both the case where traffic through the Strait remains disrupted and one where the ceasefire holds.

If the ceasefire does hold, downside risks to growth diminish and inflation risks ease. Because of the downstream pass-through to other prices we are already seeing, though, the inflation risks do not disappear and the RBA is still likely to raise the cash rate further. Still, it would be a better outcome than our current published baseline. This would be one of the instances where we would be quite happy to be wrong.

Cliff Notes: ceasefire optimism to be tested

Ahead of the worst of the current conflict, the ABS' household spending indicator gained 0.3% in February, in line with January's result and the trend pace of the past two years. Services continued to drive growth overall, aided in particular by holiday-related spending. Goods spending only managed a 0.1% gain, however, remaining weak.

Our Westpac-DataX Card Tracker suggests spending growth is likely to moderate in coming months as higher energy prices and weaker sentiment are felt, though a lasting end to hostilities could ease concern and see households look through some of the cost shock already in train. Geopolitical considerations are challenging for market participants to digest, let alone households and small business. For these individuals, in the fulness of time, pricing responses and time delays up and down the supply chain could prove as, or more, significant than the energy market dynamics currently being witnessed. Risks for the Australian consumer are therefore likely to linger.

In New Zealand, the RBNZ maintained the stance of policy as expected. However, our New Zealand team took the commentary to be hawkish, with a particular focus on second-round inflation pressures. The RBNZ's short-term inflation forecast is now 4.2%yr at June 2026, in line with Westpac NZ Economics' 4.1%yr projection. As a result, Westpac's expected timing for the first hike for the coming cycle has been brought forward from December to September 2026, with the risk of a further acceleration if evidence of second-round inflation impacts accumulates.

Further afield, the data flow was concentrated in the US and mixed in tone. Over the Easter long weekend, nonfarm payrolls rebounded 178k in March, bringing the three-month average back up to 68k compared to an average monthly outcome of -8k in the second half of 2025 and 10k over the full year. The unemployment rate was also consistent with labour supply and demand being in balance in March, edging back down to 4.3%. Note though, this outcome was due to a further decline in the participation rate (now down 0.7ppts since April 2025) rather than an increase in household survey employment.

The weak outcomes for employment through late-2025 look to increasingly be affecting household demand – indeed, the downward revision to Q4 GDP to just 0.5% annualised was in part due to sub-par consumption growth (1.9% annualised).

Since the turn of the year, momentum looks to have slowed further, with real personal consumption expenditure up just 0.1% in February after a flat January. With business investment soft and susceptible to downside risks (core goods order growth in Q1-to-date is less than a third of the pace registered in Q4), US Q1 GDP growth looks likely to maintain a pace well below trend, closer to Q4's third estimate than the 1.3% annualised pace currently projected by the Atlanta Fed's GDPNow nowcast. This is before the sentiment and cost of living shock emanating from the Middle East is felt.

“pricing responses and time delays... could prove as, or more, significant than the energy market dynamics”

The above outcomes are unlikely to materially alter FOMC member's baseline view and overall risk assessment. While the latest meeting minutes indicate “a vast majority of participants” see “risks to the employment side of the mandate... [as] skewed to the downside”, the labour market is considered to be in good health overall. Active risk assessment is therefore likely to focus more on price uncertainty, both with respect to the initial jump in energy prices and second-round effects which, over time, could build greater persistence into the core inflation pulse. This is not to say that the FOMC will vote on hiking interest rates anytime soon, in contrast to the RBA and RBNZ, but it likely means debate over a need to cut further will be deferred for the foreseeable future.

A hawkish RBNZ is prepared to act decisively

Kelly Eckhold
Chief Economist NZ

Views on the likely duration and the severity of the war waxed and waned over the week as markets wavered between the prospect of an end to a civilization (as mooted by President Trump) and the alternative of world peace in our time. The reality remains cloudy and the prospects of a long bumpy road ahead remain the base case. This week the RBNZ channelled these themes of uncertainty and the prospect of potentially longer-lived inflationary impacts, by delivering a hawkish hold. We brought forward our view of when the OCR will begin to normalise and have further fine-tuned how the overall tightening cycle may evolve.

The Iran war and its impacts on New Zealand remained front and centre this week. It's very well understood that the impact will critically depend on the size and duration of the disruption to global energy supply. And this week we saw the full gamut of possibilities on how the war could impact on New Zealand. Businesses and consumers have taken an initial pessimistic view of how the war will impact the operating environment. The questions now are whether those views will be borne out and just how far off course will inflation be knocked and for how long.

The early part of the week was dominated by Trump's Tuesday deadline to Iran to reopen the Straits of Hormuz to traffic or suffer devastating attacks on civilian infrastructure. Fortunately (and as frankly had seemed most likely) cooler heads prevailed, with a hastily arranged cease-fire "deal" announced that at the least allows for a couple of weeks of breathing space for further negotiations towards a permanent truce to occur. That at least is an advance on where we have been in the last six weeks, which had seen little evidence that discussions were even occurring between key players in Iran, Israel and the US. Initial negotiations will take place this weekend and reports concerning these will help determine the tone when markets reopen on Monday.

News of the ceasefire has seen a marked reduction in the risk premia evident in oil and refined products markets, resulting in a fall in prices. However, we think that the reality around the opposing parties' views on the "deal" means the prospect for a quick resolution of the situation looks low. As we stand today nothing has really changed in terms of New Zealand's medium-term fuel security situation as no meaningful increase in tanker flows out the Persian Gulf is occurring. That said, news that Asian refineries are securing crude feedstock from elsewhere – notably the US – was welcome. This would appear to lower the near-term risk of interruption to fuel inflows into New Zealand. This provides breathing space for the government to work on additional storage options and to fine-tune plans for the hopefully unlikely situation where interventions to allocate scarce fuel stocks become necessary.

This week the RBNZ channelled the themes of uncertainty about the outlook, but also realism on just how long-lasting the impact of the war might have on the economy and inflation outlook. The tone of the RBNZ's commentary shifted from the relatively sanguine approach that Governor Breman had communicated a couple of weeks ago. We signalled in our OCR preview that such a shift could be in the offing as the broader MPC had a greater opportunity to weigh in. And it seems the MPC was presented some initial forecasts which showed a markedly higher inflation profile was in the offing.

The MPC seems to have separated into a couple of camps: a more hawkish group that sees an argument for a proactive approach to lean against potentially persistent inflation pressures with a higher OCR from perhaps in May or July; and a more dovish camp that's happier to take more time to assess given the possibility that the activity implications of the oil shock could dampen inflation over the medium term. That latter group might perhaps be happier to wait until later in the year before beginning to raise rates, but even among this group there seems no appetite for OCR cuts. Hence, as it was before the Iran war, the issue for the MPC is when, not if, to tighten.

One interesting tidbit from the RBNZ's communications was the sense that coming into the war the economy was gathering momentum following a slightly disappointing December quarter. The RBNZ retains optimism that economic momentum won't be unduly undermined by the war given the assumption that it will be over relatively soon. Certainly, some of the data seemed to support that optimism given that the Business NZ PMI for March showed resilience by falling only modestly, although understandably respondents expressed more concerns in the comments submitted with their responses. The ANZ's Heavy Traffic Index – a measure of commercial traffic flows – was also resilient in March, although light traffic volumes declined, likely reflecting higher fuel prices. We also notice that weekly filled jobs trends continued to track in line with year earlier levels through March, suggesting that any job shedding due to the war has not started.

This more hawkish take from the MPC prompted us to bring forward when we expect OCR increases to begin, from December to September 2026. We expect 25bp interest rate hikes at each meeting from then until the OCR reaches 3.5% – at which point the OCR will be firmly in the neutral zone from the RBNZ's perspective. After then, the outlook is cloudier and we expect a slower approach where the OCR increases at Monetary Policy Statements only and the pace of tightening accordingly slows. We continue to believe that the same shape of the latter part of the interest rate cycle where the OCR rises above our assessment of neutral (which remains at 3.75%), peaking at 4.25% in December 2027 and remaining at 4.25% through 2028 before returning to 3.75% in 2029. Hence, we have brought forward our OCR profile by two meetings.

RBNZ Official Cash Rate

There is a lot of uncertainty about how the economic outlook will play out for obvious reasons. Hence, we think that it's easier to break down the entire interest rate cycle into two components: the initial move of the OCR from stimulatory levels to the neutral zone; and then what happens from there. For now, we suspect it will be easier to get a handle on the first part of the cycle. And indeed, the bar to starting the lift-off of the OCR towards neutral levels is likely a lot lower than moving the OCR above neutral and beyond.

The key focus for the MPC seems to be what the high-frequency data can tell them about the peak in inflation, but especially how persistent inflation pressures are likely to be. Top of mind are indicators of inflation expectations (especially medium-term expectations), firm pricing behaviour and wage growth trends. The reality is that little will be learned about wage setting trends for some time – and indeed stronger wage growth if in the offing is more likely a 2027 than a 2026 story. So, the focus should be on what we can learn from the monthly inflation expectations surveys, the Quarterly Survey of Business Opinion and monthly Selected Price Indices to see if there are signs of broad and potentially persistent inflation pressures.

Looking to the week ahead, there are several data releases to watch. On Monday, we'll get the March Business NZ PSI which will provide a snapshot of how the service sector has been tracking coming into the current period. Later in the week, we'll get updates on migration and house sales. The latter is likely to show that house price growth has remained muted, with abundant supply and upward pressure on borrowing costs keeping a lid on prices.

On Friday we'll get updates on both selected consumer prices and retail spending for March. Those releases will warrant close attention, with the impacts of the Middle East conflict likely to be evident. On retail spending, we're expecting a fuel-related rise in spending as prices rocketed higher over the month and many people rushed to fill their tanks ahead of further price increases. However, increased spending on essentials like fuel and groceries is weighing on spending in other areas such as hospitality. As a result, core (ex-fuel) spending is likely to be down. On the price front, March's Selected Prices update will show a sharp rise in fuel costs. The big question is how those costs are rippling through the economy more broadly. The full impact of those indirect fuel price rises won't be evident until later this year. However, we will see some early impacts, with airlines announcing large increases in domestic and international airfares during the month.

AUS: Apr Westpac-MI Consumer Sentiment (index)

Apr 14, Last: 91.6

Consumer sentiment edged 1.2% higher to 91.6 in March from 90.5 in February. The survey was conducted in the first week of the month, during the initial outbreak of conflict in the Middle East but prior to the RBA's 25bp rate hike in the third week of the month. While the survey as a whole showed a slight improvement, daily responses showed a material weakening over the course of the survey week with responses captured in the last three days of the week consistent with an index read of just 84.

The April survey is in the field over the week ending April 11. It will almost certainly show a decline with the Middle East conflict escalating (albeit with a ceasefire announced on April 8) and big spike in fuel prices (up +44c a litre vs last month). With last month's RBA rate hike and wider inflation fears also in the mix, sentiment looks primed for a sizeable fall.

AUS: Mar Labour Force – Employment Change (000s)

Apr 16, Last: 48.9, Westpac f/c: 25
Market f/c: 20.0, Range: 5.0 to 35.0

Feb's gain in employment was firmer than expected, but it was partly a result of a shift in seasonal patterns around marginally attached workers, resulting in softer Jan reads and stronger Feb reads for employment.

Having now moved past this seasonal dynamic, we have pencilled in a lift in employment of +25k for March – slightly firmer than the average gain over the preceding twelve months, reflecting the pre-conflict trend of firming employment growth.

The March survey was in the field from March 1 to 14. This will garner significant interest given it is the first official economic data release that overlaps the Middle East conflict. However, it is far too early to detect any meaningful shift in broad labour market conditions in response. See our preview here.

Employment growth moving past its trough

AUS: Mar Labour Force – Unemployment Rate (%)

Apr 16, Last: 4.3, Westpac f/c: 4.2
Market f/c: 4.3, Range: 4.2 to 4.4

The unemployment rate lifted from 4.1% over Dec/Jan to 4.3% in Feb, taking it back to the levels seen through most of the second half of last year. The increase was mainly due to a lift in the participation rate, from 66.7% to 66.9%.

Lower prints for unemployment around in Dec/Jan came from lower labour force participation – while employment growth was weak, growth in the size of the labour force was even weaker, resulting in apparent 're-tightening'.

For March, we have pencilled in a slight dip in the participation rate to 66.8%, seeing the unemployment rate tick down to 4.2%. Looking further ahead, we think the unemployment rate will rise to 5% by year-end. See our preview here.

NZ: Mar REINZ House Sales and Prices (%yr)

Apr 15, Sales last: 0.3, Prices last: 0.0

February was a perkier month for the housing market, with a lift in the number of sales and a 0.6% seasonally adjusted rise in prices. However, neither measure has escaped from the generally sideways trend of the last year or so. Low mortgage rates are supporting demand, but the ample supply of homes on the market, low population growth and falling rents mean that there is a lack of pressure on house prices. The move higher in fixed-term mortgage rates in recent months has likely weighed on investor sentiment as well.

REINZ house sales and prices

NZ: Mar Selected Prices (%mth)

Apr 17

The SPI covers around 50% of the full CPI (out 21 April) and will provide an early read on how the Middle East conflict has affected inflation pressures. Petrol prices are estimated to be up 20% over the past month with diesel prices up 50%. Importantly, those higher fuel prices have been flowing through to other prices. While the full impact of those indirect price rises won't be evident until later this year, March did see large increases in domestic and international airfares. There could be some related softness in other prices, like holiday accommodation, but that would only offset a small proportion of the other cost increases were seeing. On the housing front, we're expecting to see continued softness in rents.

NZ selected consumer prices

NZ: Mar Retail Card Spending (%mth)

Apr 17, Last: 1.4, Westpac: 0.5

We're expecting a 0.5% rise in retail card spending in March. But underlying that is an ugly breakdown of spending across categories. Underpinning the expected rise in spending is the large increases in petrol and diesel prices over the past month as a result of the Middle East war. We also saw households rushing to fill tanks and keep them full. We're also expecting a pick-up in grocery food spending, in part due to concerns about shortages which saw some households stocking up. However, core spending (ex fuel) is likely to be down over the month, with higher fuel prices and increased spending on essentials likely to see households reining in their spending in discretionary areas. In particular, we expect a sharp fall in hospitality spending.

China: Q1 GDP

Apr 16, %y/y, Last: 4.5%, Mkt f/c: 4.8%, WBC f/c: 4.8%

China’s authorities achieved their 5.0% growth ambition in 2025, albeit with an abnormally large contribution from net exports and despite persistent weakness in household demand. Given the scale of their trade surplus and China’s dominant position in global manufacturing, such a feat will be very difficult to repeat in 2026 and beyond.

This year, growth is likely to be softer, closer to 4.5% than 5.0%, and will increasingly rely on the consumer and domestically-focused investment (housing and infrastructure) as trade provides support only at the margin.

In getting a read on growth opportunities in 2026, the monthly activity data to March will be as important as the GDP detail. This is true both for the baseline view and the risks.

2025 target achieved; 2026 at risk

Key insights from the week that was.

At the turn of the week, Chief Economist Luci Ellis and Westpac Economics highlighted how severe the inflationary impact is expected to be for Australia. Recognising the extreme uncertainty surrounding the conflict and the passage of time, we extended our baseline supply assumption from a one to two-month complete shutdown of the Strait of Hormuz followed by a protracted recovery in transit from 20% of pre-conflict supply in May to normal supply at year end. Also, a consequence of elevated refining margins globally, annual Australian consumer inflation is now expected to peak around 6%yr in mid-Q2. While headline inflation will fall back to target over the following year, trimmed mean inflation is forecast to remain above 3.0%yr until end-2027 and only settle in the middle of the target range in late-2028, having peaked at 4.0%yr at end-2026.

With Australia already experiencing tight capacity and elevated domestic inflation pressures, attested to again by the RBA in the March Monetary Policy Board meeting minutes, the Middle East conflict warrants pre-emptive action by the RBA through three 25bp cash rate hikes in May, June and August 2026 to 4.85%. Policy is then seen on hold until 2028, when success with inflation should allow the cash rate to be reduced by 100bps steadily through the year. The consequence for GDP is likely to be a deceleration to just 1.0%yr in 2026, followed by a sub-par 1.6%yr gain in 2027, then an above-trend 2.8%yr recovery in 2028. The unemployment rate is forecast to rise to 5.0% at end-2026, and to take until end-2028 to return to its full employment level, circa 4.5%.

To the above forecasts, time matters a great deal. If, as has been mooted in recent days (and may be confirmed in a Presidential address later today), the Trump administration calls a quick end to the US' strikes against Iran, Australian GDP and the labour market may receive a reprieve. That said, heightened inflation will remain an acute risk while transit and supply-chain disruptions persist, and businesses may also take the opportunity to re-set margins. The balance between inflation and activity risks will therefore remain in focus for the RBA over the coming year. Ahead of the Federal Budget, the Government's financial position is also in flux, although current conditions look more likely to prove a positive than negative at this stage.

Local data out this week meanwhile focused on housing. Cotality home values increased a solid 0.6% in March. Although affordability saw a divergence in conditions city by city, with prices down a touch in Sydney and Melbourne as strong growth continued in Brisbane, Adelaide and Perth. Where conditions are weakest, reduced turnover is holding prices up. Dwelling approvals remained volatile in February, a 29.7% monthly gain lifting the annual growth rate to 14%yr. Australia clearly has need for significant, sustained additions to housing supply across our major cities, but affordability and the cost of construction are material risks which are likely to persist into the medium term.

Offshore, the list of data worthy of mention was short this week. University of Michigan consumer sentiment was, unsurprisingly, weak in March, 19% below the 5-year average and 37% under the full-history benchmark. The Conference Board's measure showed greater resilience but was still weak versus history. That said, ADP private payrolls continued to grow in March, and the retail sales control group recorded a solid gain of 0.5%mt. The ISM manufacturing index for March was also favourable, although the survey only caught the beginning of disruptions related to the Middle East conflict and the detail was also mixed, with production up, new orders down and employment contracting. China's official PMIs emphasised the nation's ability to weather uncertainty, with both the manufacturing and services indexes higher in March.

The key international data release for the week is still to come on Friday night. The US March employment report will be closely scrutinised after February's weak detail reset participants current understanding and expectations for the labour market. US policy makers have been more focused on inflation risks in recent weeks, but another poor employment result could see them reconsider this view. In contrast, a rebound in job creation will likely see market pricing for near-term policy decisions shift materially in favour of a hike, or two, as has been the case elsewhere across the developed world.

Stronger commodity prices and elevated inflation are boosting nominal incomes and tax collections, driving a net budget improvement.

- Higher-than-assumed commodity prices are expected to deliver the Federal budget a windfall of almost $60bn over the five years to FY30.

- Around $20bn of this uplift reflects the impact of the Middle East conflict, particularly via higher coal and LNG export prices. This more than offsets the $2.6bn cost of halving the fuel excise for three months.
- The run-up in gold prices since FY24 is estimated to add around $19bn to Treasury revenues over the next five years. This broadly aligns with Department of Industry forecasts showing gold export receipts rising by around $40bn in FY26 relative to FY24.
- Higher inflation and the cyclical upswing are boosting nominal incomes, consistent with the March monthly statements showing income and indirect tax revenue were around $7.0bn and $2.5bn ahead of MYEFO estimates, respectively. The inflationary impulse from the conflict is expected to provide further near-term support to revenues.
- We will provide a full update of revenue and expenses before the May Budget.

The Federal Treasurer has warned that the economic fallout from the Middle East conflict could be “just as serious” as the GFC, the COVID-19 pandemic and Russia’s invasion of Ukraine. But there is a countervailing force: higher commodity prices and elevated inflation are lifting Treasury tax collections. Because the tax system operates in the nominal world, tax receipts can continue to rise even as real economic activity slows over the coming years, as we expect.

Using actual spot prices and Westpac commodity price forecasts, we estimate that higher-than-assumed commodity prices will deliver the Federal budget a windfall of almost $60bn over the five years to FY30.

Relaxing some of the conservatism in budget forecasts

It is well known that Treasury's revenue forecasts remain highly conservative, anchored on commodity prices reverting to long-run assumptions. In practice, elevated prices had already proven more persistent before the conflict (see iron ore chart below), and the conflict itself has delivered a further lift.

The Middle East conflict also is pushing energy export prices higher, most notably for coal and LNG export prices. The longer the conflict persists, the greater the upside risk to commodity price forecasts.

At this stage, we estimate that around $20bn of the total budget windfall can be attributed directly to the Middle East conflict, with the gains front-loaded over the next few years. This additional revenue more than offsets the estimated $2.6bn fiscal cost of halving the fuel excise for three months, leaving a substantial net improvement in the budget position.

Gold is also delivering an underappreciated windfall. Following the recent surge in prices, gold is expected to become Australia's second-largest export by value in FY26, overtaking LNG and coal. The run-up in gold prices since FY24 is estimated to add around $19bn to Treasury revenues over the next five years. Despite recent volatility, the gold spot price is currently around US$4,500 an ounce. That's almost double its level at the end of FY24. We expect some of this revenue uplift to materialise as early as May 2026, when miners make large wash-up tax payments for the completed 2025 tax year.

As Treasury marks commodity prices to market when updating its forecasts, we estimate that around half of this windfall has already been incorporated into the tax base and revenue forecasts. This is evident in the step-up from the FY2024 prices to those underpinning the 2026 MYEFO (see chart below). The remainder of the windfall is yet to be recognised and is expected to flow through in future budget updates, starting with the May 2026 Budget.

While the gold driven windfalls may seem modest in the context of the overall budget, this represents a genuinely unexpected positive surprise, one that is three times as large as the PRRT and almost as large as the fringe benefits tax base.

What about the other tax bases?

As we have previously noted, Australia's cyclical economic upswing coupled with elevated inflation are boosting nominal incomes and tax bases. This is consistent with the March monthly statements showing income and indirect tax revenue were around $7.0bn and $2.5bn ahead of MYEFO estimates, respectively. More broadly, the underlying balance was $8bn ahead of MYEFO estimates, just a few months after the MYEFO document was published. Despite this, the budget remains deeply in deficit, with the FY2026 year to date position worse than the 90th-percentile outcome recorded over the FY1998–FY2025 period.

Bottom line

While there will be some offsetting pressures on the payments side of the budget, we expect the revenue uplift to dominate, resulting in a net improvement in the budget position. We will provide a full set of bottom-line estimates ahead of the Budget, incorporating revenue and payments variations, as well as expected policy changes.

31 March 2026

A materially bigger and more persistent shock

Westpac Economics

- Longer Middle East disruption lifts peak prices for oil and gas, lengthens recovery. Infrastructure damage exacerbates the shock. Brent oil now expected to peak at an average $120/bbl in Q2 and Japanese LNG prices at $26mmbtu.
- Australian CPI inflation now expected to peak at 5.4%yr in June quarter, and even higher on the monthly series, despite the announced cut to fuel excise. Trimmed mean inflation peaks around 4% in 2026 H2. Food prices a particular concern through to 2028, but broader pass-through to non-energy prices also an issue.
- RBA now expected to hike rates three times (May, June, August), revised up from one more (in May) previously. Peak cash rate now 4.85%, above previous peak.
- Supply shock and tight monetary policy drag on demand, especially consumption and other interest-sensitive sectors. GDP growth forecast to trough at 1%yr in 2027; unemployment rate peaks at 5% end-2026.

Energy situation

As previously highlighted, the key risk to our previous central case view (released on March 17) was that the Middle East conflict would prove to be more prolonged than assumed. With the conflict now entering its fifth week, it has become increasingly clear that the US/Israel–Iran confrontation is likely to result in a longer-lasting disruption to energy production in the Middle East and shipping through the Strait of Hormuz. We have therefore revised our baseline assumptions.

Specifically, we now assume the Strait of Hormuz remains effectively closed until the end of April, a total of eight weeks, and takes longer to reopen fully. This compares with our earlier assumption of a one-month disruption followed by a relatively rapid normalisation.

The slower recovery reflects several factors. Recent shipping traffic through the Strait has been limited to countries Iran deems friendly to it. Insurance premiums are expected to remain elevated given the risk of further attacks by regional factions. Shipping companies will also require time to re-establish vessel rotations and contractual delivery arrangements across energy and upstream industrial inputs.

As a result, we now assume traffic through the Strait reaches only around 20% of normal levels in May. Traffic is expected to continue to improve thereafter, although capacity is not expected to return to normal levels until end 2026.

Oil price scenarios

Japanese LNG price comparison

The extension of the conflict and slower normalisation will lead to more 'shut-ins' (temporary stops in production due to storage capacity limits) among smaller Gulf producers. Coupled with some oil infrastructure damage, we now project this to see a shortfall in global oil production of around 6mb/d on average in Q2. This assumes Saudi Arabia and the UAE continue to divert exports via operational pipelines to partially bypass the Strait, with an available capacity at around 1.6–5.5 mbpd, alongside the release of IEA emergency stockpiles.

Risks around this path remain clearly skewed to the downside, particularly if there is more damage to port and energy infrastructure and/or shipping via the Red Sea is also impacted now that Yemen's Houthi rebels have entered the conflict.

This would represent a sharp escalation, but it could also see a faster resolution as it would bring more Gulf state countries into the fray against Iran.

Overall, the changes to our baseline assumptions imply a materially bigger and more persistent energy price shock than previously assumed.

Consequently, we now expect Brent crude oil prices to average around US$120/bbl in Q2, compared with US$90 previously. Prices are expected to remain elevated for longer, reflecting both ongoing physical disruptions and a sustained risk premium linked to security and insurance costs. Under our revised base case, oil prices ease only to around US$75/bbl in Q4, still US$13 above our pre conflict baseline, and do not converge back to pre conflict levels of around US$60/bbl until Q2 2027.

The impact on gas markets is even larger than for crude oil. LNG exports from the Middle East, particularly Qatar, have no viable alternative route that bypasses the Strait, leaving supply highly exposed to an extended disruption. Moreover, Qatar's Ras Laffan LNG plant has suffered extensive damage halting production, with reports that it will potentially take up to five years to fully repair. As a result, Japanese LNG prices have surged above US$20mmbtu in recent weeks and are currently trading US$10 above pre-conflict levels. We forecast further increases as supply tightens to a quarterly average price of around US$26mmbtu over the next few quarters. Prices are projected to remain elevated even after oil markets begin to stabilise.

We have also made greater allowance for wider refinery margins than our previous forecasts. Disruptions to crude supply, combined with tight refined product inventories in Asia, have driven a sharp widening in the spread between Brent crude and Singapore Gas10, the key benchmark for Australian petrol and diesel prices. The spread has recently surged to around US$70/bbl, exceeding levels seen following Russia's invasion of Ukraine. Given the importance of refined product availability and logistics, we expect margins to remain elevated even as the conflict eases, materially amplifying the pass through from higher crude prices to domestic fuel costs.

Brent Crude oil vs Singapore Gasoil 10

More acute pressures on supply chains

Given the prolonged closure, we now also assume supply chain pressures are more acute and persistent. Container freight rates have risen by 20% since the start of the conflict, reflecting longer shipping routes, higher fuel costs, insurance surcharges and booking constraints. While freight rates are still lower than the peaks in 2021–22, Iran is reportedly extracting additional charges from non-hostile vessels negotiating passage through the Strait, further increasing transit costs even where shipping through the Strait is allowed.

The Middle East is also a key upstream supplier of industrial inputs, including fertilisers, chemicals, polymers and metals. Around 33% of global fertiliser trade, particularly urea and ammonia, transits the Strait. Disruptions are already pushing up prices for these inputs, with Egyptian urea prices, a global indicator for fertiliser prices, particularly nitrogen fertilisers, reaching its highest level in more than three years. That said, at around US$475/t, it is still significantly below its record of $1050 following Russia's invasion of Ukraine.

Globally, manufacturing PMIs show a sharp re-acceleration in input cost growth, with energy, freight and intermediate goods cited as key drivers, alongside some lengthening in supplier delivery times. In Australia, the PMI manufacturing input price measure has risen to its highest level since August 2023.

However, while supply chain pressures are rising and are expected to remain elevated beyond the end of the conflict, they are expected to remain materially below the peak levels experienced in 2021–22. The port congestion, post-COVID reopening surge in demand and broad-based shortages that were features in this episode remain absent. The appreciation of the Australian dollar, both against the US dollar and on a trade weighted basis, will also provide a partial offset to imported cost pressures, reducing the local currency impact of higher global input prices. In contrast, the AUD/USD cross fell by 9% around during the 2022 episode, amplifying the rise in import costs.

Accordingly, while price pressures are rising, particularly for energy-intensive inputs such as fertilisers and aluminium, the impact on producer prices and the flow through to headline and core inflation is expected to be smaller than during the 2022 cost of living crisis.

Inflation impact

Both the Oxford Economics model and our bottom-up forecasts imply that higher energy, freight and upstream input costs are expected to lift headline inflation materially over 2026. The direct impact comes firstly through fuel and transport-related components before it broadens as higher distribution and input costs are passed on to a wider range of consumer prices.

Reacting to this, the Australian Government announced that from April 1, the fuel excise tax will be cut in half, reducing the pump price of petrol and diesel by 26¢/litre. We are now expecting headline CPI to peak at 5.4%yr in Q2 2026, up from 4.1% previously, with monthly inflation likely to be even higher breaking through 6%yr around April or May.

Fuel inflation is expected to contribute 1.1ppt to the headline figure by the June quarter with national weekly average petrol and diesel prices projected to peak at around $2.65/litre and $3.25/litre in early April – they would have both been much higher through April and into May were it not for the cut in the fuel excise. The excise only applies to fuels used on Australian roads and is not applied to fuel sold for farming, mining, other industrial purposes, including aviation and shipping.

Higher energy, freight and fertiliser costs are expected to flow through to agricultural prices and food prices with a lag. The pass-through is unlikely to be uniform across products; more energy-intensive production will see greater pass-through, along with products where production elsewhere in the world is constrained. At first glance, winter crops such as wheat would appear to come under pressures, but for now strong global supply balances will keep these prices contained and the risks of large price increases sit more in 2027. At this stage we have food price inflation of more than 4%yr by end 2026 and into the first half of 2028.

We have allowed for larger spillovers into services prices and wages than previously, based on early firm announcements as well as the higher profile for fuel prices. Higher fuel costs are feeding directly into transport prices, including airfares, with Qantas already announcing a 5% price increases in response to higher jet fuel costs. More broadly, higher transport and input costs will mechanically lift prices for items such as eating out and even new home construction, adding to core inflation pressures even as weaker real disposable income growth signals some limited scope for costs to be fully passed on.

We expect the Trimmed mean inflation to peak at around 4.0%yr by end 2026 and remain above 3%yr in 2027. That said, a key risk is that memories of the last global supply shock mean businesses react pre-emptively to increases in prices, something we are already hearing anecdotally. This time around, businesses could also be readier to pass on any actual cost increases to consumers. Indeed, there have already been calls from some Australian businesses to implement a fuel surcharge including the Australian Restaurant and Cafe Association proposing a 5% charge. Again, we see these spillovers as likely to be smaller than in 2022, when demand was recovering strongly, policy was expansionary and a wider range of supply chains were disrupted. They will, however, contribute to a slower normalisation in underlying inflation.

RBA response

We have changed our forecast for the RBA cash rate, adding in two more hikes, in June and August, on top of the increase we were already forecasting for May. The cash rate is now expected to peak at 4.85%, significantly above the previous peak of 4.35%. With trimmed mean inflation sitting around 4% in the second half of this year and only slowly declining thereafter, the Monetary Policy Board (MPB) will want policy to be clearly restrictive to keep inflation expectations anchored. It will be dismayed at the recent examples of rapid pass-through of energy costs to other prices, and tightening and risks getting behind the curve in coming years. We push out the date for rate cuts and pencil in four rate cuts, one per quarter in February, May, August and November 2028. We have low conviction about the exact timing.

Despite the weaker economic outlook and potential undershoot of the inflation target implied by these revised forecasts, we think the RBA will be slow to reverse this policy

The main rationales for the slower reversal are that Australia already had relatively limited spare capacity at the point the conflict broke out, and that pre-emptive pass-through by firms could keep underlying inflation high into 2027. We also note that the RBA is likely to have something of a “once bitten, twice shy” approach even as inflation declines towards the 2–3% target range. Inflation kicked up shortly after it cut rates last year, and the MPB would want to avoid a repeat of the backtracking that induced.

GDP impact

The combination of a deeper energy shock globally and higher path for inflation and interest rates locally points to a more pronounced and prolonged slowdown in the Australian economy than we forecast in mid-March. The combination will place particularly intense strains on the household sector. We now expect real consumption growth to slow to just 1.2%yr in 2026, implying a renewed period of decline in per capita terms.

Higher borrowing and input costs will also weigh on other interest-sensitive parts of the economy, particularly dwelling construction and business investment in construction-related industries, including new commercial buildings.

Taken together, these forces are expected to see real GDP growth slow to just 1% in 2027 and remain subdued at 1.6% in 2027. With population growth running at 1.6%yr, activity is set to contract in per capita terms in 2026, holding flat in 2027. Beyond that, anticipated rate cuts in 2028 should mean that monetary policy no longer prevents a recovery in growth. With energy supply assumed to have recovered by then, demand growth can rebound to 2.8% over 2028, though there will still be considerable spare capacity at that point.

Australia's labour market is also expected to experience a more pronounced and extended weakening. The combination of slower employment growth and a slightly higher participation rate sees the unemployment rate rise from 4.3% currently to a peak of 5% by year end, holding near these levels through 2027. That additional slack will, in turn, accentuate the moderation in inflation expected to come through as energy price related pressures subside in 2028.

Key insights from the week that was.

In Australia, February's CPI came in slightly below expectations, headline inflation ticking down to 3.7%yr from 3.8%yr, while trimmed mean inflation held steady at 3.3%yr. Constructive elements of the detail included: dwelling purchases posting its smallest increase in ten months; a below-expectations annual increase in education prices; and lower childcare costs, the result of increased take-up of the Childcare Subsidy following the introduction of the three-day guarantee. There were also a couple of upside surprises, however, most notable were clothing and some food-related categories. The impact from electricity rebates has also now abated, bringing reported electricity prices back into line with actual prices.

The net result is that the inflationary pulse Australia was experiencing prior to the current surge in fuel prices was marginally softer than expected. While fuel will undoubtedly boost headline inflation from March, the trimmed mean pulse is likely to hold above but near the top of the target range through 2026. For a detailed view of how each state's economy is positioned to weather coming headwinds, see our latest Coast-to-Coast report.

The Q1 Westpac-ACCI Survey of Industrial Trends meanwhile showed that the long-awaited improvement in manufacturing conditions is finally materialising, the Actual Composite rising to 59.3 – a strong expansionary read. Underpinning the move was a surge in output growth, another solid lift in new orders and, encouragingly, a rise in employment and overtime. Note though, this survey was largely completed before the onset of the Middle East conflict. Australian manufacturing's acute exposure to fuel and energy costs is likely to see a partial reversal in Q2 and a degree of apprehension over the outlook.

Offshore, data released was inconsequential. The preliminary March S&P Global PMIs for the major advanced economies unsurprisingly pointed to softer momentum and heightened inflationary pressures in the initial weeks of the Middle East conflict. FOMC members Bowman and Waller meanwhile were focused more on labour market weakness than inflation, though they felt it prudent to wait-a-while to assess the implications of the current conflict for price risks.

Regarding the state of the Middle East conflict, equity markets took solace in news the White House had been involved in initial intermediated discussions over the path to a ceasefire, although uncertainty over who in Iran's leadership will take the lead in any formal negotiations has kept participants guessing on both the timing and potential success of these initiatives. The overnight extension of the 5-day reprieve for Iranian energy infrastructure by President Trump to 10 days is a positive step towards fruitful negotiations, however.

Iran's military actions have also been relatively contained this week, and safe passage through the Strait of Hormuz has been provided to several ships, consistent with prior communications from Iranian officials that ships operated by countries not involved in the conflict are free to transit if Iran's conditions are met. It is not clear if this includes a payment of up to US$2 million per shipment as previously telegraphed. If Iranian authorities hold to this guidance, China's fleet and vessels from other non-aligned countries such as Malaysia (a key supplier to Australia who reportedly reached an agreement with Iran overnight) could slowly reduce the current global deficiency in crude and LNG supply, even if the US/Israel and Iran continue military actions against one another. The key risk remains the intentional, or unintentional, destruction of production and/or logistics facilities, turning a temporary loss of supply into an enduring one. The duration of this conflict and lost supply matters a great deal to both the persistence of global consumer inflation and the policy outlook.

Forecasts are an assessment of the most likely outcome, not the preferred one. The ceasefire announcement was welcome, but whether it holds is highly uncertain.

- The economy does not care about your feelings, so forecasts must reflect what you think is the most likely outcome, not necessarily what you wish would happen. This distinction is especially salient

now. The outright fall in global fuel supply has different implications than other recent supply shocks, and the outlook for Australia and the world is rough.

- The ceasefire announced this week was obviously welcome, but the question is whether the Strait of Hormuz opens properly. The first 24 hours after the announcement were not promising. But if it does, that would be a better outcome than the baseline forecast update we released last week. We would be happy if our baseline forecast was wrong for this reason.
- The key issue for Australia, and for the domestic interest rate outlook, is how much of the energy price shock is already being passed through to prices of other goods and services. The RBA will be watching for this kind of behaviour, including through its liaison program, and will see it as a further leg up in underlying inflation from a rate that was already higher than desired.

The thing about forecasting is that your preferences do not matter. A baseline scenario is simply what you think is most likely. It is not necessarily what you wish would happen. And of course things could play out differently. It is the role of scenario and risk-sensitivity analysis to articulate these other possible future states of the world.

The disconnect between what you hope will happen and what you think will actually happen is especially salient now. The near-term outlook for Australia is tough: higher inflation, with consumers again squeezed by some combination of higher interest rates, lower income growth and higher unemployment. Things are even worse for many other countries. Australia has been able to leverage its LNG exports to ensure we have – so far – not been left short of other fuels. Many lower-income countries do not have this advantage and have been facing the prospect of shortages and rationing; some of our neighbours in the Pacific are particularly hard-hit.

The economic shock from the Gulf conflict centres on global oil and gas supply. It is different from COVID, when the disruptions were all the way down supply chains. It also differs from the energy shock following Russia's invasion of Ukraine, where the Russian oil and gas supply did not disappear, it just needed time to be redistributed to non-European nations willing to buy it despite the sanctions; the peak decline in its oil output was estimated to be around 3 million barrels per day, but the disruption faded quickly. This time around, the oil and gas are not getting out of the Persian Gulf. Some production has been redirected through Saudi pipelines to other ports, but not all of it. Current estimates are that the net reduction of global production has been 8–9 million barrels per day for oil and one-fifth of pre-war global supply for gas. And at the same time, Russia's output capacity has been reduced by successful Ukrainian attacks on Russian oil infrastructure; news reports suggest this has cut global output by a further 0.7–1 million barrels per day.

The effect on prices from such a cut to capacity was always going to be severe.

News this week that a two-week ceasefire had been agreed was obviously welcome. Assuming it holds well enough to reopen the Strait of Hormuz properly – a big if given the attacks in the 24 hours following its announcement – it would be a better outcome than the baseline update we released last week, and one of the “risks on both sides” we contemplated when we released it. A lasting ceasefire and faster opening up of the Strait would put energy prices on a trajectory between the one we contemplated in last week's baseline, and the one underpinning the forecasts in the March Market Outlook. A return to pre-war prices is unlikely in the short term, though, given the damage to oil and gas infrastructure in the Gulf states and in Russia.

Even if the ceasefire holds well enough that the Strait stays open, a key watchpoint is whether ships enter the Gulf during the next two weeks, not just whether those previously stuck there leave. If ships do not enter, the next wave of production will not be able to be shipped. Supply will sag again a few weeks later and prices will rebound, especially for refined product.

If the ceasefire does not hold, the reprieve on fuel supply will be brief. Trust between the parties is low and Iranian control of the Strait – even jointly with Oman – is an unstable equilibrium that is unacceptable to much of the rest of the world. Even if the ceasefire gets back on track after its rocky start, flare-ups later in the year cannot be ruled out.

The real question for Australia, and for the domestic interest rate outlook, is how much of the energy price shock is already being passed through to prices of other goods and services. On this there is less cause for optimism. While ‘temporary fuel levies’ are easier to unwind as fuel prices decline, for many products, list prices have been lifted significantly and a reversal seems less likely. Building materials are a particular issue, with the cost of building a detached home increasing as much as 10%, on our preliminary estimates. The lift in pricing has been widespread across industries and in some cases quite large relative to overall inflation trends. The RBA will be watching for this kind of behaviour, including through its liaison program, and will see it as a further leg up in underlying inflation from a rate that was already higher than desired.

Our next forecast round, scheduled for release next week, will contemplate both the case where traffic through the Strait remains disrupted and one where the ceasefire holds.

If the ceasefire does hold, downside risks to growth diminish and inflation risks ease. Because of the downstream pass-through to other prices we are already seeing, though, the inflation risks do not disappear and the RBA is still likely to raise the cash rate further. Still, it would be a better outcome than our current published baseline. This would be one of the instances where we would be quite happy to be wrong.

Financial Markets

Markets looked through ongoing geopolitical risks after reports that the US and Iran agreed to a two week ceasefire just hours before President Trump's escalation deadline. While Iran later claimed the ceasefire had already been breached due to continued Israeli strikes in Lebanon, the US announced plans for direct talks with Iran in Islamabad over the weekend, led by Vice President Vance. The Strait of Hormuz remained largely closed, with President Trump reiterating that reopening the Strait is a condition for maintaining the ceasefire.

Despite the continued closure of Hormuz and sporadic attacks across the Gulf and Lebanon, market sentiment was notably resilient. Risk assets rallied, bonds were firm, and oil prices fell sharply.

- Equities rallied strongly across the globe. In the US, the Dow Jones Industrial Average posted its largest daily gain of 2026 at 2.9%, alongside solid advances in the NASDAQ and S&P 500. The VIX index fell sharply to 21 (-18.4%), retracing towards pre-conflict levels.
- Europe was no exception to the rally, with the Euro Stoxx 50 and FTSE 100 both logging their strongest sessions of the year, 5.0%, and 2.5% respectively. Asian markets outperformed, closing before ceasefire violation concerns gained traction. The Nikkei surged 5.4% and the Hang Seng rose 3.1%. The ASX200 climbed 2.6%, its best performance of 2026, despite weakness in domestic energy stocks.
- Bond markets were choppy as ceasefire optimism supported prices while reports of renewed conflict capped gains. On net, US Treasury yields were little changed across the curve, with 2 and 10 year yields flat on the day.
- Domestic yields softened across the curve as domestic inflation expectations eased. The 3 year yield declined 11bps and the 10 year fell 13bps. Swap markets further pared expectations for tightening, with only two additional hikes priced by year end.
- FX markets saw the USD sell off, the DXY down -0.8%, though the dollar remains well above pre-conflict levels. The AUD rose 1.0% to 0.7049, while NZD outperformed, gaining +1.6% to 0.5822, supported by ceasefire developments and a more hawkish showing from the RBNZ.
- Commodity markets reacted sharply. Oil prices slumped on hopes that the more than 800 vessels stranded in the Persian Gulf may soon transit Hormuz, though ongoing hostilities kept a floor under prices. Brent fell -11.5%, below $100/bbl for the first time since early March to US$96.7/bbl, while WTI saw an even sharper pull-back by 16.4% to

International Data

The minutes from the 17–18 March FOMC meeting provided additional detail on the discussions underpinning the decision to leave the fed funds rate unchanged. Participants judged that inflation remained above 2%, with several members noting that “further progress in reducing inflation had been absent in recent months.” Core inflation pressures were seen as ongoing, particularly in goods and non housing services. In the case of goods, these pressures were judged to be at least partly reflecting the effects of tariffs.

Energy prices were identified as an important near term upside risk to inflation. While labour market conditions were generally assessed as stable. Looking ahead, however, a vast majority of participants judged that “risks to the employment side of the mandate were skewed to the downside”. In a low hiring environment, the labour market was seen as vulnerable to adverse shocks, including from AI, or if elevated energy prices or geopolitical uncertainty were to weigh on business sentiment and hiring.

Euro area retail sales declined 0.2% in February, extending the 0.1% mth fall recorded in January. Food sales, down 0.5% mth, were the main source of weakness, while non food and fuel sales were flat and up 0.7% mth respectively. The average level of sales in Q1 was unchanged from Q4, suggesting a slowing in consumer spending growth from 0.6% qtr at the end of 2025.

Local Data

In New Zealand, the RBNZ held the OCR at 2.25% as expected, but signalled a more hawkish bias, emphasising risks from second-round inflation effects. Westpac NZ has brought forward its expected timing of the first rate hike to September (from December) and now sees the OCR ending 2026 at 3% (see here).

Australia's Trade in Goods Account, February

Sharp shifts in gold flows led to Australia's goods trade surplus widening in February. The impacts of the conflict in the Middle East, including on commodity prices, are likely to see volatility in monthly trade flows increase in March and beyond. Trade balance: $5.7bn. Export values: up 4.9%_{mth}. Import values: down 3.9%_{mth}.

After a period of more stability recently, monthly trade figures saw volatility return, with the headline goods trade surplus jumping from $2.3bn to $5.7bn, marking the highest level in seven months. Significant fluctuations in gold inflows and outflows were the primary driver. Excluding gold, the goods trade balance remained close to zero. Importantly, this data predates the outbreak of the conflict in the Middle East, suggesting greater volatility in trade flows is likely as these impacts flow through in coming months. The sharp appreciation of the AUD – in trade-weighted terms up more than 3% in February – had minimal impact on trade flows.

Exports

Export earnings surged nearly 5%mt. Gold exports reached a new record high and were almost entirely responsible for the increase. Most of this increase was likely driven by higher prices rather than volumes – this is consistent with our view that gold prices will deliver the federal budget a significant and underappreciated windfall (see here). Excluding gold, exports were up just 0.8%mt, remaining below last year's peak following sharp declines in January and November.

Major commodity exports fell 3.7%mt, led by decreases in iron ore and LNG shipments. ABS data show that exports of both iron ore and LNG fell in both volume and price terms. Production and shipment disruptions caused by Tropical Cyclone Mitchell, which impacted the Pilbara coastline, were partly responsible for the soft outcome during the month. Coal exports, by contrast, were broadly unchanged.

Rural goods exports surprised on the upside, rising almost 14%^{mt} – the steepest increase in over a year – offsetting the previous month's decline. Meat exports jumped by more than a quarter, suggesting that January's drop was likely a temporary retraction. We think that risks for meat exports remain skewed to the downside due to expected supply weakness, but such effects are likely to materialise more in the medium term.

By country, exports to major trading partners remained relatively stable. Hong Kong was an exception – exports there tripled due to a surge in gold shipments. Exports to the US showed little change, though larger shifts may occur in coming months, following the US Supreme Court's decision to rule previous tariffs under the IEEPA act illegal and subsequent adjustments to US import tariffs.

Imports

The import bill declined by 3.2%^{mt}. Similar to exports, gold – which dropped over 40% – played a significant role. Excluding gold, imports were almost unchanged. Nonetheless, major import categories experienced considerable swings.

Consumption goods imports rose 3.4%^{mt}, reversing a similar decline in January, with food and household electronics leading the way. Intermediate goods imports also strengthened notably, up 3.1%^{mt}. Capital goods imports fell 8.1%^{mt} – volatility seen in recent months for data processing equipment and aircraft imports was again the main driver.

Looking past the monthly volatility, imports for January–February were nearly 2% lower compared to Q4, with all three major components reporting declines. Price effects may have contributed, but following the significant jump in Q4, this suggests that domestic demand may have softened at the start of the year.

Trade in the coming months

Over the coming months, monthly trade data will likely be shaped by the ongoing conflict in the Middle East. Price effects are expected to dominate, with the LNG (Japan/Korea benchmark) 80% higher since the end of February, and coal and iron ore prices also up significantly.

Beyond price movements, we might also see impact to trade volumes. Australia's direct trade with Middle Eastern countries is small representing around $1bn in exports and around $0.5bn in imports per month. However, indirect impacts via supply chain disruptions could be substantial. For instance, most refined oil products in Australia are sourced from Asian countries, which in turn import crude oil from the Middle East. Oil accounts for roughly 11% of total goods imports, and a sharp drop could significantly affect the economy, especially if certain regions begin to experience fuel shortages.

Financial Markets

Markets looked through ongoing geopolitical risks after reports that the US and Iran agreed to a two week ceasefire just hours before President Trump's escalation deadline. While Iran later claimed the ceasefire had already been breached due to continued Israeli strikes in Lebanon, the US announced plans for direct talks with Iran in Islamabad over the weekend, led by Vice President Vance. The Strait of Hormuz remained largely closed, with President Trump reiterating that reopening the Strait is a condition for maintaining the ceasefire.

Despite the continued closure of Hormuz and sporadic attacks across the Gulf and Lebanon, market sentiment was notably resilient. Risk assets rallied, bonds were firm, and oil prices fell sharply.

- Equities rallied strongly across the globe. In the US, the Dow Jones Industrial Average posted its largest daily gain of 2026 at 2.9%, alongside solid advances in the NASDAQ and S&P 500. The VIX index fell sharply to 21 (-18.4%), retracing towards pre-conflict levels.
- Europe was no exception to the rally, with the Euro Stoxx 50 and FTSE 100 both logging their strongest sessions of the year, 5.0%, and 2.5% respectively. Asian markets outperformed, closing before ceasefire violation concerns gained traction. The Nikkei surged 5.4% and the Hang Seng rose 3.1%. The ASX200 climbed 2.6%, its best performance of 2026, despite weakness in domestic energy stocks.
- Bond markets were choppy as ceasefire optimism supported prices while reports of renewed conflict capped gains. On net, US Treasury yields were little changed across the curve, with 2 and 10 year yields flat on the day.
- Domestic yields softened across the curve as domestic inflation expectations eased. The 3 year yield declined 11bps and the 10 year fell 13bps. Swap markets further pared expectations for tightening, with only two additional hikes priced by year end.
- FX markets saw the USD sell off, the DXY down -0.8%, though the dollar remains well above pre-conflict levels. The AUD rose 1.0% to 0.7049, while NZD outperformed, gaining +1.6% to 0.5822, supported by ceasefire developments and a more hawkish showing from the RBNZ.
- Commodity markets reacted sharply. Oil prices slumped on hopes that the more than 800 vessels stranded in the Persian Gulf may soon transit Hormuz, though ongoing hostilities kept a floor under prices. Brent fell -11.5%, below $100/bbl for the first time since early March to US$96.7/bbl, while WTI saw an even sharper pull-back by 16.4% to

The minutes from the 17–18 March FOMC meeting provided additional detail on the discussions underpinning the decision to leave the fed funds rate unchanged. Participants judged that inflation remained above 2%, with several members noting that “further progress in reducing inflation had been absent in recent months.” Core inflation pressures were seen as ongoing, particularly in goods and non housing services. In the case of goods, these pressures were judged to be at least partly reflecting the effects of tariffs.

Energy prices were identified as an important near term upside risk to inflation. While labour market conditions were generally assessed as stable. Looking ahead, however, a vast majority of participants judged that “risks to the employment side of the mandate were skewed to the downside”. In a low hiring environment, the labour market was seen as vulnerable to adverse shocks, including from AI, or if elevated energy prices or geopolitical uncertainty were to weigh on business sentiment and hiring.

Euro area retail sales declined 0.2% in February, extending the 0.1%^{mth} fall recorded in January. Food sales, down 0.5%^{mth}, were the main source of weakness, while non food and fuel sales were flat and up 0.7%^{mth} respectively. The average level of sales in Q1 was unchanged from Q4, suggesting a slowing in consumer spending growth from 0.6%^{qtr} at the end of 2025.

Local Data

In New Zealand, the RBNZ held the OCR at 2.25% as expected, but signalled a more hawkish bias, emphasising risks from second-round inflation effects. Westpac NZ has brought forward its expected timing of the first rate hike to September (from December) and now sees the OCR ending 2026 at 3% (see here).

Financial Markets

Markets looked through ongoing geopolitical risks after reports that the US and Iran agreed to a two week ceasefire just hours before President Trump's escalation deadline. While Iran later claimed the ceasefire had already been breached due to continued Israeli strikes in Lebanon, the US announced plans for direct talks with Iran in Islamabad over the weekend, led by Vice President Vance. The Strait of Hormuz remained largely closed, with President Trump reiterating that reopening the Strait is a condition for maintaining the ceasefire.

Despite the continued closure of Hormuz and sporadic attacks across the Gulf and Lebanon, market sentiment was notably resilient. Risk assets rallied, bonds were firm, and oil prices fell sharply.

- Equities rallied strongly across the globe. In the US, the Dow Jones Industrial Average posted its largest daily gain of 2026 at 2.9%, alongside solid advances in the NASDAQ and S&P 500. The VIX index fell sharply to 21 (-18.4%), retracing towards pre-conflict levels.
- Europe was no exception to the rally, with the Euro Stoxx 50 and FTSE 100 both logging their strongest sessions of the year, 5.0%, and 2.5% respectively. Asian markets outperformed, closing before ceasefire violation concerns gained traction. The Nikkei surged 5.4% and the Hang Seng rose 3.1%. The ASX200 climbed 2.6%, its best performance of 2026, despite weakness in domestic energy stocks.
- Bond markets were choppy as ceasefire optimism supported prices while reports of renewed conflict capped gains. On net, US Treasury yields were little changed across the curve, with 2 and 10 year yields flat on the day.
- Domestic yields softened across the curve as domestic inflation expectations eased. The 3 year yield declined 11bps and the 10 year fell 13bps. Swap markets further pared expectations for tightening, with only two additional hikes priced by year end.
- FX markets saw the USD sell off, the DXY down -0.8%, though the dollar remains well above pre-conflict levels. The AUD rose 1.0% to 0.7049, while NZD outperformed, gaining +1.6% to 0.5822, supported by ceasefire developments and a more hawkish showing from the RBNZ.
- Commodity markets reacted sharply. Oil prices slumped on hopes that the more than 800 vessels stranded in the Persian Gulf may soon transit Hormuz, though ongoing hostilities kept a floor under prices. Brent fell -11.5%, below $100/bbl for the first time since early March to US$96.7/bbl, while WTI saw an even sharper pull-back by 16.4% to

The minutes from the 17–18 March FOMC meeting provided additional detail on the discussions underpinning the decision to leave the fed funds rate unchanged. Participants judged that inflation remained above 2%, with several members noting that “further progress in reducing inflation had been absent in recent months.” Core inflation pressures were seen as ongoing, particularly in goods and non housing services. In the case of goods, these pressures were judged to be at least partly reflecting the effects of tariffs.

Energy prices were identified as an important near term upside risk to inflation. While labour market conditions were generally assessed as stable. Looking ahead, however, a vast majority of participants judged that “risks to the employment side of the mandate were skewed to the downside”. In a low hiring environment, the labour market was seen as vulnerable to adverse shocks, including from AI, or if elevated energy prices or geopolitical uncertainty were to weigh on business sentiment and hiring.

Euro area retail sales declined 0.2% in February, extending the 0.1% mth fall recorded in January. Food sales, down 0.5% mth, were the main source of weakness, while non food and fuel sales were flat and up 0.7% mth respectively. The average level of sales in Q1 was unchanged from Q4, suggesting a slowing in consumer spending growth from 0.6% qtr at the end of 2025.

Local Data

In New Zealand, the RBNZ held the OCR at 2.25% as expected, but signalled a more hawkish bias, emphasising risks from second-round inflation effects. Westpac NZ has brought forward its expected timing of the first rate hike to September (from December) and now sees the OCR ending 2026 at 3% (see here).

Financial Markets

Markets looked through ongoing geopolitical risks after reports that the US and Iran agreed to a two week ceasefire just hours before President Trump's escalation deadline. While Iran later claimed the ceasefire had already been breached due to continued Israeli strikes in Lebanon, the US announced plans for direct talks with Iran in Islamabad over the weekend, led by Vice President Vance. The Strait of Hormuz remained largely closed, with President Trump reiterating that reopening the Strait is a condition for maintaining the ceasefire.

Despite the continued closure of Hormuz and sporadic attacks across the Gulf and Lebanon, market sentiment was notably resilient. Risk assets rallied, bonds were firm, and oil prices fell sharply.

- Equities rallied strongly across the globe. In the US, the Dow Jones Industrial Average posted its largest daily gain of 2026 at 2.9%, alongside solid advances in the NASDAQ and S&P 500. The VIX index fell sharply to 21 (-18.4%), retracing towards pre-conflict levels.
- Europe was no exception to the rally, with the Euro Stoxx 50 and FTSE 100 both logging their strongest sessions of the year, 5.0%, and 2.5% respectively. Asian markets outperformed, closing before ceasefire violation concerns gained traction. The Nikkei surged 5.4% and the Hang Seng rose 3.1%. The ASX200 climbed 2.6%, its best performance of 2026, despite weakness in domestic energy stocks.
- Bond markets were choppy as ceasefire optimism supported prices while reports of renewed conflict capped gains. On net, US Treasury yields were little changed across the curve, with 2 and 10 year yields flat on the day.
- Domestic yields softened across the curve as domestic inflation expectations eased. The 3 year yield declined 11bps and the 10 year fell 13bps. Swap markets further pared expectations for tightening, with only two additional hikes priced by year end.
- FX markets saw the USD sell off, the DXY down -0.8%, though the dollar remains well above pre-conflict levels. The AUD rose 1.0% to 0.7049, while NZD outperformed, gaining +1.6% to 0.5822, supported by ceasefire developments and a more hawkish showing from the RBNZ.
- Commodity markets reacted sharply. Oil prices slumped on hopes that the more than 800 vessels stranded in the Persian Gulf may soon transit Hormuz, though ongoing hostilities kept a floor under prices. Brent fell -11.5%, below $100/bbl for the first time since early March to US$96.7/bbl, while WTI saw an even sharper pull-back by 16.4% to

The minutes from the 17–18 March FOMC meeting provided additional detail on the discussions underpinning the decision to leave the fed funds rate unchanged. Participants judged that inflation remained above 2%, with several members noting that “further progress in reducing inflation had been absent in recent months.” Core inflation pressures were seen as ongoing, particularly in goods and non housing services. In the case of goods, these pressures were judged to be at least partly reflecting the effects of tariffs.

Energy prices were identified as an important near term upside risk to inflation. While labour market conditions were generally assessed as stable. Looking ahead, however, a vast majority of participants judged that “risks to the employment side of the mandate were skewed to the downside”. In a low hiring environment, the labour market was seen as vulnerable to adverse shocks, including from AI, or if elevated energy prices or geopolitical uncertainty were to weigh on business sentiment and hiring.

Euro area retail sales declined 0.2% in February, extending the 0.1% mth fall recorded in January. Food sales, down 0.5% mth, were the main source of weakness, while non food and fuel sales were flat and up 0.7% mth respectively. The average level of sales in Q1 was unchanged from Q4, suggesting a slowing in consumer spending growth from 0.6% qtr at the end of 2025.

Local Data

In New Zealand, the RBNZ held the OCR at 2.25% as expected, but signalled a more hawkish bias, emphasising risks from second-round inflation effects. Westpac NZ has brought forward its expected timing of the first rate hike to September (from December) and now sees the OCR ending 2026 at 3% (see here).

The epic blunder of fighting the last war

The Middle East conflict is not Venezuela, or Russia's invasion of Ukraine, or COVID. Policymakers should not use "the last war" as a template for the current one.

- The Middle East conflict and the resulting fuel crisis are not the same as previous crises and should not require COVID-style policy responses such as work-from-home mandates. Governments and other decision-makers need to avoid the temptation to "fight the last war". Nor should they fall into the trap of “we must do something, and this is something”, when that something is ill-suited to the current problem.

- The focus should instead be on the key issue for the world economy: how the conflict maps into energy-supply disruption via the closure of the Strait of Hormuz and/or damage to oil and gas infrastructure in other Gulf states. Time is almost up on our initial assumption that the Strait would be closed for about a month, so we will shortly update our baseline forecast to reflect this. But the Strait is a time-limited source of leverage for Iran. At some point, third-party countries will respond to the damage being done to them; already some tankers are being allowed through.
- This is a significant shock to the economy and a challenging situation for public policy. For the next few weeks, though, the appropriate monetary policy response is “wait and see”. The current crisis is not (yet) a financial crisis or a pandemic requiring immediate, potentially out-of-cycle, action. And conditions could be quite different in a month's time. Domestic conditions will continue to shape the RBA's decisions at its regular meetings.

“Fighting the last war” is a common cognitive trap: trying to make a current crisis fit a past one. We saw attempts to make COVID fit the GFC template by expecting borrower distress despite massive fiscal support and, in some quarters, to make the AI boom fit the COVID template of sudden mass job losses, at least in the US.

The current conflict in the Middle East is producing plenty of examples of this behaviour, again misguided. The US/Israel attack has not gone the same way as the US intervention in Venezuela, nor are the implications like those of Russia's invasion of Ukraine. The geographic pinch-point of the Strait of Hormuz shapes both the energy-price implications and the military ones. The context also differs significantly: the world is not emerging from a pandemic, with macroeconomic policy highly expansionary and other supply chains already disrupted.

The domestic context in Australia also differs in important ways, particularly the ceiling on east coast wholesale gas prices introduced after the 2022 episode. We are also four years further along with solar and battery installation. These changes mean that, for Australia, this is mostly an issue of fuel prices and availability, rather than electricity (as in 2022–23).

In addition, the current conflict bears little resemblance to the COVID pandemic, so policy responses should differ. We were surprised that work-from-home mandates have been seriously proposed. A fuel shortage is not a respiratory virus, and there is no reason to prevent or discourage workers from attending their workplace if they commute by foot, bicycle or public transport. Better responses would be to expand public transport coverage and frequency, encourage carpooling (including more extensive transit lanes), and cancel non-essential government travel. Only if those policies fail, or fuel shortages become so extreme that critical workers need to be prioritised, would WFH become an appropriate response.

Likewise, businesses are not facing a sudden loss of income as the community goes into lockdown. Income support measures should therefore be much more targeted, if they are needed at all.

The main similarity to the pandemic is stockpiling, as people fear downstream supply disruptions. Policy responses to address this make more sense than mandating work-from-home. Options include publicising the restocking of petrol stations that had run out of some fuels, as well as measures already taken such as temporary changes to fuel standards and the oil-for-gas supply deal with Singapore.

A kinetic war between US/Israel and Iran could drag on without necessarily having its current dramatic impact on global energy markets. For the rest of the world, the key issues are closure of the Strait of Hormuz and actual or threatened damage to gas and other civilian infrastructure in non-combatant Gulf states. But closure of the Strait is a time-limited source of leverage for Iran. At some point, third-party countries will respond to the damage being done to them; already some tankers are being allowed through.

The immediate issue for the global and Australian economies is fuel availability. Higher prices will curb demand, but periods of localised unavailability will be especially disruptive.

The implications for macroeconomic policy depend on the broader effects on inflation and growth. The RBA was already hiking rates ahead of the outbreak of the conflict. Demand growth had picked up a little more sharply than they, or we, had expected. And with the economy no longer running with significant spare capacity as in the 2010s, even small upside demand or downside supply shocks show up in prices rather than being absorbed. More frequent policy adjustments should therefore be expected.

As highlighted by the RBA's counterparts at the RBNZ, policymakers should ordinarily try to look through the first-round, fuel-specific impacts on inflation from a shock like this. Second-round effects such as higher transport and materials costs flowing through to other prices may, however, require a response. A lift in inflation expectations is also a watch point. But if the supply-disruption element of the conflict fades over the next month or so, these effects will also be short-lived. While the forthcoming update to our baseline forecast is more severe than this, the risks around it are two-sided. It will therefore pay to wait to see which scenario plays out ahead of the May meeting. A May rate hike is still on the cards for pre-existing domestic reasons, but pre-judging the second-round effects on inflation, and the need for any hikes beyond the next one, is a much less secure strategy.

In particular, we do not expect an out-of-cycle RBA decision. These are rare: the last one was in March 2020, just ahead of lockdown, and the one before that was in 1997, both to cut rates. Even during the GFC, there were no out-of-cycle policy decisions. The decision tree facing the RBA also does not require one. May seems a long way away, but by then either things will have de-escalated, or the war will have escalated, drawn in Gulf states and worsened energy supply. De-escalation would see some of the inflationary shock soon moderate, weakening the case for further policy tightening. Escalation would be an even larger negative shock to global growth than we are already facing, but also inflationary. With the Board already split on the need to hike expeditiously, we see neither the need, nor the appetite, to bring forward that decision in either scenario. This is not COVID, and we do not expect policymakers to act like it is.

Financial Markets

Markets looked through ongoing geopolitical risks after reports that the US and Iran agreed to a two week ceasefire just hours before President Trump's escalation deadline. While Iran later claimed the ceasefire had already been breached due to continued Israeli strikes in Lebanon, the US announced plans for direct talks with Iran in Islamabad over the weekend, led by Vice President Vance. The Strait of Hormuz remained largely closed, with President Trump reiterating that reopening the Strait is a condition for maintaining the ceasefire.

Despite the continued closure of Hormuz and sporadic attacks across the Gulf and Lebanon, market sentiment was notably resilient. Risk assets rallied, bonds were firm, and oil prices fell sharply.

- Equities rallied strongly across the globe. In the US, the Dow Jones Industrial Average posted its largest daily gain of 2026 at 2.9%, alongside solid advances in the NASDAQ and S&P 500. The VIX index fell sharply to 21 (-18.4%), retracing towards pre-conflict levels.
- Europe was no exception to the rally, with the Euro Stoxx 50 and FTSE 100 both logging their strongest sessions of the year, 5.0%, and 2.5% respectively. Asian markets outperformed, closing before ceasefire violation concerns gained traction. The Nikkei surged 5.4% and the Hang Seng rose 3.1%. The ASX200 climbed 2.6%, its best performance of 2026, despite weakness in domestic energy stocks.
- Bond markets were choppy as ceasefire optimism supported prices while reports of renewed conflict capped gains. On net, US Treasury yields were little changed across the curve, with 2 and 10 year yields flat on the day.
- Domestic yields softened across the curve as domestic inflation expectations eased. The 3 year yield declined 11bps and the 10 year fell 13bps. Swap markets further pared expectations for tightening, with only two additional hikes priced by year end.
- FX markets saw the USD sell off, the DXY down -0.8%, though the dollar remains well above pre-conflict levels. The AUD rose 1.0% to 0.7049, while NZD outperformed, gaining +1.6% to 0.5822, supported by ceasefire developments and a more hawkish showing from the RBNZ.
- Commodity markets reacted sharply. Oil prices slumped on hopes that the more than 800 vessels stranded in the Persian Gulf may soon transit Hormuz, though ongoing hostilities kept a floor under prices. Brent fell -11.5%, below $100/bbl for the first time since early March to US$96.7/bbl, while WTI saw an even sharper pull-back by 16.4% to

The minutes from the 17–18 March FOMC meeting provided additional detail on the discussions underpinning the decision to leave the fed funds rate unchanged. Participants judged that inflation remained above 2%, with several members noting that “further progress in reducing inflation had been absent in recent months.” Core inflation pressures were seen as ongoing, particularly in goods and non housing services. In the case of goods, these pressures were judged to be at least partly reflecting the effects of tariffs.

Energy prices were identified as an important near term upside risk to inflation. While labour market conditions were generally assessed as stable. Looking ahead, however, a vast majority of participants judged that “risks to the employment side of the mandate were skewed to the downside”. In a low hiring environment, the labour market was seen as vulnerable to adverse shocks, including from AI, or if elevated energy prices or geopolitical uncertainty were to weigh on business sentiment and hiring.

Euro area retail sales declined 0.2% in February, extending the 0.1% mth fall recorded in January. Food sales, down 0.5% mth, were the main source of weakness, while non food and fuel sales were flat and up 0.7% mth respectively. The average level of sales in Q1 was unchanged from Q4, suggesting a slowing in consumer spending growth from 0.6% qtr at the end of 2025.

Local Data

In New Zealand, the RBNZ held the OCR at 2.25% as expected, but signalled a more hawkish bias, emphasising risks from second-round inflation effects. Westpac NZ has brought forward its expected timing of the first rate hike to September (from December) and now sees the OCR ending 2026 at 3% (see here).

Financial Markets

Markets looked through ongoing geopolitical risks after reports that the US and Iran agreed to a two week ceasefire just hours before President Trump's escalation deadline. While Iran later claimed the ceasefire had already been breached due to continued Israeli strikes in Lebanon, the US announced plans for direct talks with Iran in Islamabad over the weekend, led by Vice President Vance. The Strait of Hormuz remained largely closed, with President Trump reiterating that reopening the Strait is a condition for maintaining the ceasefire.

Despite the continued closure of Hormuz and sporadic attacks across the Gulf and Lebanon, market sentiment was notably resilient. Risk assets rallied, bonds were firm, and oil prices fell sharply.

- Equities rallied strongly across the globe. In the US, the Dow Jones Industrial Average posted its largest daily gain of 2026 at 2.9%, alongside solid advances in the NASDAQ and S&P 500. The VIX index fell sharply to 21 (-18.4%), retracing towards pre-conflict levels.
- Europe was no exception to the rally, with the Euro Stoxx 50 and FTSE 100 both logging their strongest sessions of the year, 5.0%, and 2.5% respectively. Asian markets outperformed, closing before ceasefire violation concerns gained traction. The Nikkei surged 5.4% and the Hang Seng rose 3.1%. The ASX200 climbed 2.6%, its best performance of 2026, despite weakness in domestic energy stocks.
- Bond markets were choppy as ceasefire optimism supported prices while reports of renewed conflict capped gains. On net, US Treasury yields were little changed across the curve, with 2 and 10 year yields flat on the day.
- Domestic yields softened across the curve as domestic inflation expectations eased. The 3 year yield declined 11bps and the 10 year fell 13bps. Swap markets further pared expectations for tightening, with only two additional hikes priced by year end.
- FX markets saw the USD sell off, the DXY down -0.8%, though the dollar remains well above pre-conflict levels. The AUD rose 1.0% to 0.7049, while NZD outperformed, gaining +1.6% to 0.5822, supported by ceasefire developments and a more hawkish showing from the RBNZ.
- Commodity markets reacted sharply. Oil prices slumped on hopes that the more than 800 vessels stranded in the Persian Gulf may soon transit Hormuz, though ongoing hostilities kept a floor under prices. Brent fell -11.5%, below $100/bbl for the first time since early March to US$96.7/bbl, while WTI saw an even sharper pull-back by 16.4% to

Markets looked through ongoing geopolitical risks after reports that the US and Iran agreed to a two week ceasefire just hours before President Trump's escalation deadline. While Iran later claimed the ceasefire had already been breached due to continued Israeli strikes in Lebanon, the US announced plans for direct talks with Iran in Islamabad over the weekend, led by Vice President Vance. The Strait of Hormuz remained largely closed, with President Trump reiterating that reopening the Strait is a condition for maintaining the ceasefire.

Despite the continued closure of Hormuz and sporadic attacks across the Gulf and Lebanon, market sentiment was notably resilient. Risk assets rallied, bonds were firm, and oil prices fell sharply.

- Equities rallied strongly across the globe. In the US, the Dow Jones Industrial Average posted its largest daily gain of 2026 at 2.9%, alongside solid advances in the NASDAQ and S&P 500. The VIX index fell sharply to 21 (-18.4%), retracing towards pre-conflict levels.
- Europe was no exception to the rally, with the Euro Stoxx 50 and FTSE 100 both logging their strongest sessions of the year, 5.0%, and 2.5% respectively. Asian markets outperformed, closing before ceasefire violation concerns gained traction. The Nikkei surged 5.4% and the Hang Seng rose 3.1%. The ASX200 climbed 2.6%, its best performance of 2026, despite weakness in domestic energy stocks.
- Bond markets were choppy as ceasefire optimism supported prices while reports of renewed conflict capped gains. On net, US Treasury yields were little changed across the curve, with 2 and 10 year yields flat on the day.
- Domestic yields softened across the curve as domestic inflation expectations eased. The 3 year yield declined 11bps and the 10 year fell 13bps. Swap markets further pared expectations for tightening, with only two additional hikes priced by year end.
- FX markets saw the USD sell off, the DXY down -0.8%, though the dollar remains well above pre-conflict levels. The AUD rose 1.0% to 0.7049, while NZD outperformed, gaining +1.6% to 0.5822, supported by ceasefire developments and a more hawkish showing from the RBNZ.
- Commodity markets reacted sharply. Oil prices slumped on hopes that the more than 800 vessels stranded in the Persian Gulf may soon transit Hormuz, though ongoing hostilities kept a floor under prices. Brent fell -11.5%, below $100/bbl for the first time since early March to US$96.7/bbl, while WTI saw an even sharper pull-back by 16.4% to

The minutes from the 17–18 March FOMC meeting provided additional detail on the discussions underpinning the decision to leave the fed funds rate unchanged. Participants judged that inflation remained above 2%, with several members noting that “further progress in reducing inflation had been absent in recent months.” Core inflation pressures were seen as ongoing, particularly in goods and non housing services. In the case of goods, these pressures were judged to be at least partly reflecting the effects of tariffs.

Energy prices were identified as an important near term upside risk to inflation. While labour market conditions were generally assessed as stable. Looking ahead, however, a vast majority of participants judged that “risks to the employment side of the mandate were skewed to the downside”. In a low hiring environment, the labour market was seen as vulnerable to adverse shocks, including from AI, or if elevated energy prices or geopolitical uncertainty were to weigh on business sentiment and hiring.

Euro area retail sales declined 0.2% in February, extending the 0.1% mth fall recorded in January. Food sales, down 0.5% mth, were the main source of weakness, while non food and fuel sales were flat and up 0.7% mth respectively. The average level of sales in Q1 was unchanged from Q4, suggesting a slowing in consumer spending growth from 0.6% qtr at the end of 2025.

Local Data

In New Zealand, the RBNZ held the OCR at 2.25% as expected, but signalled a more hawkish bias, emphasising risks from second-round inflation effects. Westpac NZ has brought forward its expected timing of the first rate hike to September (from December) and now sees the OCR ending 2026 at 3% (see here).

Financial Markets

Markets looked through ongoing geopolitical risks after reports that the US and Iran agreed to a two week ceasefire just hours before President Trump's escalation deadline. While Iran later claimed the ceasefire had already been breached due to continued Israeli strikes in Lebanon, the US announced plans for direct talks with Iran in Islamabad over the weekend, led by Vice President Vance. The Strait of Hormuz remained largely closed, with President Trump reiterating that reopening the Strait is a condition for maintaining the ceasefire.

Despite the continued closure of Hormuz and sporadic attacks across the Gulf and Lebanon, market sentiment was notably resilient. Risk assets rallied, bonds were firm, and oil prices fell sharply.

- Equities rallied strongly across the globe. In the US, the Dow Jones Industrial Average posted its largest daily gain of 2026 at 2.9%, alongside solid advances in the NASDAQ and S&P 500. The VIX index fell sharply to 21 (-18.4%), retracing towards pre-conflict levels.
- Europe was no exception to the rally, with the Euro Stoxx 50 and FTSE 100 both logging their strongest sessions of the year, 5.0%, and 2.5% respectively. Asian markets outperformed, closing before ceasefire violation concerns gained traction. The Nikkei surged 5.4% and the Hang Seng rose 3.1%. The ASX200 climbed 2.6%, its best performance of 2026, despite weakness in domestic energy stocks.
- Bond markets were choppy as ceasefire optimism supported prices while reports of renewed conflict capped gains. On net, US Treasury yields were little changed across the curve, with 2 and 10 year yields flat on the day.
- Domestic yields softened across the curve as domestic inflation expectations eased. The 3 year yield declined 11bps and the 10 year fell 13bps. Swap markets further pared expectations for tightening, with only two additional hikes priced by year end.
- FX markets saw the USD sell off, the DXY down -0.8%, though the dollar remains well above pre-conflict levels. The AUD rose 1.0% to 0.7049, while NZD outperformed, gaining +1.6% to 0.5822, supported by ceasefire developments and a more hawkish showing from the RBNZ.
- Commodity markets reacted sharply. Oil prices slumped on hopes that the more than 800 vessels stranded in the Persian Gulf may soon transit Hormuz, though ongoing hostilities kept a floor under prices. Brent fell -11.5%, below $100/bbl for the first time since early March to US$96.7/bbl, while WTI saw an even sharper pull-back by 16.4% to

The minutes from the 17–18 March FOMC meeting provided additional detail on the discussions underpinning the decision to leave the fed funds rate unchanged. Participants judged that inflation remained above 2%, with several members noting that “further progress in reducing inflation had been absent in recent months.” Core inflation pressures were seen as ongoing, particularly in goods and non housing services. In the case of goods, these pressures were judged to be at least partly reflecting the effects of tariffs.

Energy prices were identified as an important near term upside risk to inflation. While labour market conditions were generally assessed as stable. Looking ahead, however, a vast majority of participants judged that “risks to the employment side of the mandate were skewed to the downside”. In a low hiring environment, the labour market was seen as vulnerable to adverse shocks, including from AI, or if elevated energy prices or geopolitical uncertainty were to weigh on business sentiment and hiring.

Euro area retail sales declined 0.2% in February, extending the 0.1% mth fall recorded in January. Food sales, down 0.5% mth, were the main source of weakness, while non food and fuel sales were flat and up 0.7% mth respectively. The average level of sales in Q1 was unchanged from Q4, suggesting a slowing in consumer spending growth from 0.6% qtr at the end of 2025.

Local Data

In New Zealand, the RBNZ held the OCR at 2.25% as expected, but signalled a more hawkish bias, emphasising risks from second-round inflation effects. Westpac NZ has brought forward its expected timing of the first rate hike to September (from December) and now sees the OCR ending 2026 at 3% (see here).

Key insights from the week that was.

Ahead of the worst of the current conflict, the ABS' household spending indicator gained 0.3% in February, in line with January's result and the trend pace of the past two years. Services continued to drive growth overall, aided in particular by holiday-related spending. Goods spending only managed a 0.1% gain, however, remaining weak.

Our Westpac-DataX Card Tracker suggests spending growth is likely to moderate in coming months as higher energy prices and weaker sentiment are felt, though a lasting end to hostilities could ease concern and see households look through some of the cost shock already in train. Geopolitical considerations are challenging for market participants to digest, let alone households and small business. For these individuals, in the fulness of time, pricing responses and time delays up and down the supply chain could prove as, or more, significant than the energy market dynamics currently being witnessed. Risks for the Australian consumer are therefore likely to linger.

In New Zealand, the RBNZ maintained the stance of policy as expected. However, our New Zealand team took the commentary to be hawkish, with a particular focus on second-round inflation pressures. The RBNZ's short-term inflation forecast is now 4.2%yr at June 2026, in line with Westpac NZ Economics' 4.1%yr projection. As a result, Westpac's expected timing for the first hike for the coming cycle has been brought forward from December to September 2026, with the risk of a further acceleration if evidence of second-round inflation impacts accumulates.

Further afield, the data flow was concentrated in the US and mixed in tone. Over the Easter long weekend, nonfarm payrolls rebounded 178k in March, bringing the three-month average back up to 68k compared to an average monthly outcome of -8k in the second half of 2025 and 10k over the full year. The unemployment rate was also consistent with labour supply and demand being in balance in March, edging back down to 4.3%. Note though, this outcome was due to a further decline in the participation rate (now down 0.7ppts since April 2025) rather than an increase in household survey employment.

The weak outcomes for employment through late-2025 look to increasingly be affecting household demand – indeed, the downward revision to Q4 GDP to just 0.5% annualised was in part due to sub-par consumption growth (1.9% annualised).

Since the turn of the year, momentum looks to have slowed further, with real personal consumption expenditure up just 0.1% in February after a flat January. With business investment soft and susceptible to downside risks (core goods order growth in Q1-to-date is less than a third of the pace registered in Q4), US Q1 GDP growth looks likely to maintain a pace well below trend, closer to Q4's third estimate than the 1.3% annualised pace currently projected by the Atlanta Fed's GDPNow nowcast. This is before the sentiment and cost of living shock emanating from the Middle East is felt.

The above outcomes are unlikely to materially alter FOMC member's baseline view and overall risk assessment. While the latest meeting minutes indicate "a vast majority of participants" see "risks to the employment side of the mandate... [as] skewed to the downside", the labour market is considered to be in good health overall. Active risk assessment is therefore likely to focus more on price uncertainty, both with respect to the initial jump in energy prices and second-round effects which, over time, could build greater persistence into the core inflation pulse. This is not to say that the FOMC will vote on hiking interest rates anytime soon, in contrast to the RBA and RBNZ, but it likely means debate over a need to cut further will be deferred for the foreseeable future.

Financial Markets

Markets looked through ongoing geopolitical risks after reports that the US and Iran agreed to a two week ceasefire just hours before President Trump's escalation deadline. While Iran later claimed the ceasefire had already been breached due to continued Israeli strikes in Lebanon, the US announced plans for direct talks with Iran in Islamabad over the weekend, led by Vice President Vance. The Strait of Hormuz remained largely closed, with President Trump reiterating that reopening the Strait is a condition for maintaining the ceasefire.

Despite the continued closure of Hormuz and sporadic attacks across the Gulf and Lebanon, market sentiment was notably resilient. Risk assets rallied, bonds were firm, and oil prices fell sharply.

- Equities rallied strongly across the globe. In the US, the Dow Jones Industrial Average posted its largest daily gain of 2026 at 2.9%, alongside solid advances in the NASDAQ and S&P 500. The VIX index fell sharply to 21 (-18.4%), retracing towards pre-conflict levels.
- Europe was no exception to the rally, with the Euro Stoxx 50 and FTSE 100 both logging their strongest sessions of the year, 5.0%, and 2.5% respectively. Asian markets outperformed, closing before ceasefire violation concerns gained traction. The Nikkei surged 5.4% and the Hang Seng rose 3.1%. The ASX200 climbed 2.6%, its best performance of 2026, despite weakness in domestic energy stocks.
- Bond markets were choppy as ceasefire optimism supported prices while reports of renewed conflict capped gains. On net, US Treasury yields were little changed across the curve, with 2 and 10 year yields flat on the day.
- Domestic yields softened across the curve as domestic inflation expectations eased. The 3 year yield declined 11bps and the 10 year fell 13bps. Swap markets further pared expectations for tightening, with only two additional hikes priced by year end.
- FX markets saw the USD sell off, the DXY down -0.8%, though the dollar remains well above pre-conflict levels. The AUD rose 1.0% to 0.7049, while NZD outperformed, gaining +1.6% to 0.5822, supported by ceasefire developments and a more hawkish showing from the RBNZ.
- Commodity markets reacted sharply. Oil prices slumped on hopes that the more than 800 vessels stranded in the Persian Gulf may soon transit Hormuz, though ongoing hostilities kept a floor under prices. Brent fell -11.5%, below $100/bbl for the first time since early March to US$96.7/bbl, while WTI saw an even sharper pull-back by 16.4% to

The minutes from the 17–18 March FOMC meeting provided additional detail on the discussions underpinning the decision to leave the fed funds rate unchanged. Participants judged that inflation remained above 2%, with several members noting that “further progress in reducing inflation had been absent in recent months.” Core inflation pressures were seen as ongoing, particularly in goods and non housing services. In the case of goods, these pressures were judged to be at least partly reflecting the effects of tariffs.

Energy prices were identified as an important near term upside risk to inflation. While labour market conditions were generally assessed as stable. Looking ahead, however, a vast majority of participants judged that “risks to the employment side of the mandate were skewed to the downside”. In a low hiring environment, the labour market was seen as vulnerable to adverse shocks, including from AI, or if elevated energy prices or geopolitical uncertainty were to weigh on business sentiment and hiring.

Euro area retail sales declined 0.2% in February, extending the 0.1% mth fall recorded in January. Food sales, down 0.5% mth, were the main source of weakness, while non food and fuel sales were flat and up 0.7% mth respectively. The average level of sales in Q1 was unchanged from Q4, suggesting a slowing in consumer spending growth from 0.6% qtr at the end of 2025.

Local Data

In New Zealand, the RBNZ held the OCR at 2.25% as expected, but signalled a more hawkish bias, emphasising risks from second-round inflation effects. Westpac NZ has brought forward its expected timing of the first rate hike to September (from December) and now sees the OCR ending 2026 at 3% (see here).

Financial Markets

Markets looked through ongoing geopolitical risks after reports that the US and Iran agreed to a two week ceasefire just hours before President Trump's escalation deadline. While Iran later claimed the ceasefire had already been breached due to continued Israeli strikes in Lebanon, the US announced plans for direct talks with Iran in Islamabad over the weekend, led by Vice President Vance. The Strait of Hormuz remained largely closed, with President Trump reiterating that reopening the Strait is a condition for maintaining the ceasefire.

Despite the continued closure of Hormuz and sporadic attacks across the Gulf and Lebanon, market sentiment was notably resilient. Risk assets rallied, bonds were firm, and oil prices fell sharply.

- Equities rallied strongly across the globe. In the US, the Dow Jones Industrial Average posted its largest daily gain of 2026 at 2.9%, alongside solid advances in the NASDAQ and S&P 500. The VIX index fell sharply to 21 (-18.4%), retracing towards pre-conflict levels.
- Europe was no exception to the rally, with the Euro Stoxx 50 and FTSE 100 both logging their strongest sessions of the year, 5.0%, and 2.5% respectively. Asian markets outperformed, closing before ceasefire violation concerns gained traction. The Nikkei surged 5.4% and the Hang Seng rose 3.1%. The ASX200 climbed 2.6%, its best performance of 2026, despite weakness in domestic energy stocks.
- Bond markets were choppy as ceasefire optimism supported prices while reports of renewed conflict capped gains. On net, US Treasury yields were little changed across the curve, with 2 and 10 year yields flat on the day.
- Domestic yields softened across the curve as domestic inflation expectations eased. The 3 year yield declined 11bps and the 10 year fell 13bps. Swap markets further pared expectations for tightening, with only two additional hikes priced by year end.
- FX markets saw the USD sell off, the DXY down -0.8%, though the dollar remains well above pre-conflict levels. The AUD rose 1.0% to 0.7049, while NZD outperformed, gaining +1.6% to 0.5822, supported by ceasefire developments and a more hawkish showing from the RBNZ.
- Commodity markets reacted sharply. Oil prices slumped on hopes that the more than 800 vessels stranded in the Persian Gulf may soon transit Hormuz, though ongoing hostilities kept a floor under prices. Brent fell -11.5%, below $100/bbl for the first time since early March to US$96.7/bbl, while WTI saw an even sharper pull-back by 16.4% to

The minutes from the 17–18 March FOMC meeting provided additional detail on the discussions underpinning the decision to leave the fed funds rate unchanged. Participants judged that inflation remained above 2%, with several members noting that “further progress in reducing inflation had been absent in recent months.” Core inflation pressures were seen as ongoing, particularly in goods and non housing services. In the case of goods, these pressures were judged to be at least partly reflecting the effects of tariffs.

Energy prices were identified as an important near term upside risk to inflation. While labour market conditions were generally assessed as stable. Looking ahead, however, a vast majority of participants judged that “risks to the employment side of the mandate were skewed to the downside”. In a low hiring environment, the labour market was seen as vulnerable to adverse shocks, including from AI, or if elevated energy prices or geopolitical uncertainty were to weigh on business sentiment and hiring.

Euro area retail sales declined 0.2% in February, extending the 0.1% mth fall recorded in January. Food sales, down 0.5% mth, were the main source of weakness, while non food and fuel sales were flat and up 0.7% mth respectively. The average level of sales in Q1 was unchanged from Q4, suggesting a slowing in consumer spending growth from 0.6% qtr at the end of 2025.

Local Data

In New Zealand, the RBNZ held the OCR at 2.25% as expected, but signalled a more hawkish bias, emphasising risks from second-round inflation effects. Westpac NZ has brought forward its expected timing of the first rate hike to September (from December) and now sees the OCR ending 2026 at 3% (see here).

Financial Markets

Markets looked through ongoing geopolitical risks after reports that the US and Iran agreed to a two week ceasefire just hours before President Trump's escalation deadline. While Iran later claimed the ceasefire had already been breached due to continued Israeli strikes in Lebanon, the US announced plans for direct talks with Iran in Islamabad over the weekend, led by Vice President Vance. The Strait of Hormuz remained largely closed, with President Trump reiterating that reopening the Strait is a condition for maintaining the ceasefire.

Despite the continued closure of Hormuz and sporadic attacks across the Gulf and Lebanon, market sentiment was notably resilient. Risk assets rallied, bonds were firm, and oil prices fell sharply.

- Equities rallied strongly across the globe. In the US, the Dow Jones Industrial Average posted its largest daily gain of 2026 at 2.9%, alongside solid advances in the NASDAQ and S&P 500. The VIX index fell sharply to 21 (-18.4%), retracing towards pre-conflict levels.
- Europe was no exception to the rally, with the Euro Stoxx 50 and FTSE 100 both logging their strongest sessions of the year, 5.0%, and 2.5% respectively. Asian markets outperformed, closing before ceasefire violation concerns gained traction. The Nikkei surged 5.4% and the Hang Seng rose 3.1%. The ASX200 climbed 2.6%, its best performance of 2026, despite weakness in domestic energy stocks.
- Bond markets were choppy as ceasefire optimism supported prices while reports of renewed conflict capped gains. On net, US Treasury yields were little changed across the curve, with 2 and 10 year yields flat on the day.
- Domestic yields softened across the curve as domestic inflation expectations eased. The 3 year yield declined 11bps and the 10 year fell 13bps. Swap markets further pared expectations for tightening, with only two additional hikes priced by year end.
- FX markets saw the USD sell off, the DXY down -0.8%, though the dollar remains well above pre-conflict levels. The AUD rose 1.0% to 0.7049, while NZD outperformed, gaining +1.6% to 0.5822, supported by ceasefire developments and a more hawkish showing from the RBNZ.
- Commodity markets reacted sharply. Oil prices slumped on hopes that the more than 800 vessels stranded in the Persian Gulf may soon transit Hormuz, though ongoing hostilities kept a floor under prices. Brent fell -11.5%, below $100/bbl for the first time since early March to US$96.7/bbl, while WTI saw an even sharper pull-back by 16.4% to

The minutes from the 17–18 March FOMC meeting provided additional detail on the discussions underpinning the decision to leave the fed funds rate unchanged. Participants judged that inflation remained above 2%, with several members noting that “further progress in reducing inflation had been absent in recent months.” Core inflation pressures were seen as ongoing, particularly in goods and non housing services. In the case of goods, these pressures were judged to be at least partly reflecting the effects of tariffs.

Energy prices were identified as an important near term upside risk to inflation. While labour market conditions were generally assessed as stable. Looking ahead, however, a vast majority of participants judged that “risks to the employment side of the mandate were skewed to the downside”. In a low hiring environment, the labour market was seen as vulnerable to adverse shocks, including from AI, or if elevated energy prices or geopolitical uncertainty were to weigh on business sentiment and hiring.

Euro area retail sales declined 0.2% in February, extending the 0.1% mth fall recorded in January. Food sales, down 0.5% mth, were the main source of weakness, while non food and fuel sales were flat and up 0.7% mth respectively. The average level of sales in Q1 was unchanged from Q4, suggesting a slowing in consumer spending growth from 0.6% qtr at the end of 2025.

Local Data

In New Zealand, the RBNZ held the OCR at 2.25% as expected, but signalled a more hawkish bias, emphasising risks from second-round inflation effects. Westpac NZ has brought forward its expected timing of the first rate hike to September (from December) and now sees the OCR ending 2026 at 3% (see here).

Financial Markets

Markets looked through ongoing geopolitical risks after reports that the US and Iran agreed to a two week ceasefire just hours before President Trump's escalation deadline. While Iran later claimed the ceasefire had already been breached due to continued Israeli strikes in Lebanon, the US announced plans for direct talks with Iran in Islamabad over the weekend, led by Vice President Vance. The Strait of Hormuz remained largely closed, with President Trump reiterating that reopening the Strait is a condition for maintaining the ceasefire.

Despite the continued closure of Hormuz and sporadic attacks across the Gulf and Lebanon, market sentiment was notably resilient. Risk assets rallied, bonds were firm, and oil prices fell sharply.

- Equities rallied strongly across the globe. In the US, the Dow Jones Industrial Average posted its largest daily gain of 2026 at 2.9%, alongside solid advances in the NASDAQ and S&P 500. The VIX index fell sharply to 21 (-18.4%), retracing towards pre-conflict levels.
- Europe was no exception to the rally, with the Euro Stoxx 50 and FTSE 100 both logging their strongest sessions of the year, 5.0%, and 2.5% respectively. Asian markets outperformed, closing before ceasefire violation concerns gained traction. The Nikkei surged 5.4% and the Hang Seng rose 3.1%. The ASX200 climbed 2.6%, its best performance of 2026, despite weakness in domestic energy stocks.
- Bond markets were choppy as ceasefire optimism supported prices while reports of renewed conflict capped gains. On net, US Treasury yields were little changed across the curve, with 2 and 10 year yields flat on the day.
- Domestic yields softened across the curve as domestic inflation expectations eased. The 3 year yield declined 11bps and the 10 year fell 13bps. Swap markets further pared expectations for tightening, with only two additional hikes priced by year end.
- FX markets saw the USD sell off, the DXY down -0.8%, though the dollar remains well above pre-conflict levels. The AUD rose 1.0% to 0.7049, while NZD outperformed, gaining +1.6% to 0.5822, supported by ceasefire developments and a more hawkish showing from the RBNZ.
- Commodity markets reacted sharply. Oil prices slumped on hopes that the more than 800 vessels stranded in the Persian Gulf may soon transit Hormuz, though ongoing hostilities kept a floor under prices. Brent fell -11.5%, below $100/bbl for the first time since early March to US$96.7/bbl, while WTI saw an even sharper pull-back by 16.4% to

The minutes from the 17–18 March FOMC meeting provided additional detail on the discussions underpinning the decision to leave the fed funds rate unchanged. Participants judged that inflation remained above 2%, with several members noting that “further progress in reducing inflation had been absent in recent months.” Core inflation pressures were seen as ongoing, particularly in goods and non housing services. In the case of goods, these pressures were judged to be at least partly reflecting the effects of tariffs.

Energy prices were identified as an important near term upside risk to inflation. While labour market conditions were generally assessed as stable. Looking ahead, however, a vast majority of participants judged that “risks to the employment side of the mandate were skewed to the downside”. In a low hiring environment, the labour market was seen as vulnerable to adverse shocks, including from AI, or if elevated energy prices or geopolitical uncertainty were to weigh on business sentiment and hiring.

Euro area retail sales declined 0.2% in February, extending the 0.1% mth fall recorded in January. Food sales, down 0.5% mth, were the main source of weakness, while non food and fuel sales were flat and up 0.7% mth respectively. The average level of sales in Q1 was unchanged from Q4, suggesting a slowing in consumer spending growth from 0.6% qtr at the end of 2025.

Local Data

In New Zealand, the RBNZ held the OCR at 2.25% as expected, but signalled a more hawkish bias, emphasising risks from second-round inflation effects. Westpac NZ has brought forward its expected timing of the first rate hike to September (from December) and now sees the OCR ending 2026 at 3% (see here).

AUSTRALIAN DWELLING APPROVALS BULLETIN

Units take approvals higher

Key points

- Total dwelling approvals rebounded sharply in February, rising 29.7%_{mt}. The annual pace lifted to 14.0%_{yr}, marking the first positive read following the December–January low period.
- As in recent months, private unit approvals drove the headline outcome, surging 101%_{mt}, with strength spanning both high-rise and low-mid-rise segments. Private detached house approvals were broadly flat, though underlying momentum remains positive on a smoothed basis.
- State-level outcomes remain uneven, with strength concentrated in Qld, NSW and WA, while Vic and SA lag.
- Looking ahead, further expected RBA cash rate rises throughout 2026, alongside likely softer dwelling price growth are likely to temper the near-term recovery.

High-rise and low-mid-rise both support

Luka Belobrajdic
Economist

Total dwelling approvals rebounded sharply in February, rising 29.7%^{mt}, following two consecutive monthly declines over the December–January period. The result was well above both our and the market's expectations, lifting the annual pace to 14.0%^{yr}.

Note that most figures in the charts and table are presented on a rolling-three month basis to smooth out monthly volatility.

Private unit approvals once again drove headline volatility, doubling in February after declines of 25%^{mt} in January and 30%^{mt} in December. The segment accounted for just under 47% of private approvals in the month, the highest share since December 2022. Strength was evident across both 'high-rise' and 'low-mid-rise' segments. High-rise approvals were the standout, rising 198%^{mt}, the strongest monthly outcome since September 2009, while low-mid-rise approvals increased 73%^{mt}. On a rolling three-month basis, high-rise approvals are now up 6.2%, while earlier weakness continues to weigh on the low-mid-rise segment, which remains 1.5% lower over the same period.

Private detached house approvals were little changed in February, recording a modest 0.2%^{mt} gain. January approvals were revised higher to 1.7%^{mt} (+0.6ppt), reinforcing the recent improvement in underlying momentum. On a rolling three-month basis, house approvals rose 3.3%^{qtr}, slightly below the revised 3.6%^{qtr} pace recorded in January, but still indicative of a gradual upswing.

A clear divergence across states persisted. On a rolling three-month basis, approvals were strongest in Qld (26.3%^{yr}), NSW (24.0%^{yr}) and WA (20.7%^{yr}). In Qld and NSW, annual growth is driven primarily by unit approvals, while in WA the bulk of the increase reflects strength in detached housing. In contrast, dwelling approvals growth remained comparatively weak in Vic (2.5%^{yr}), while SA recorded a contraction (–6.0%^{yr}).

In value terms, new residential approvals rose sharply on a rolling three-month basis (+35.9%), more than offsetting a modest decline in renovation activity (–1.2%). The value of non-residential approvals fell 4.4%, led by weakness in transport-related buildings. Overall, the total value of building approvals increased 14.4%^{mt} in February.

Looking ahead, further expected RBA cash rate increases across May, June and August, alongside softer dwelling price growth, are likely to temper the near-term recovery in dwelling approvals. While detached housing momentum has improved, volatility in unit approvals and broader affordability constraints suggest the recovery is likely to remain uneven.

The 2026 Business Advantage PNG CEO100 Survey reveals a significant improvement in business conditions to the highest level since 2023, driven by reduced foreign exchange concerns, profit and investment expectations rising despite softer hiring intentions and a critical focus on unreliable utilities, all together suggesting optimistic economic growth prospects potentially exceeding 5% if key projects like Papua LNG proceed as planned.

Since 2012, Business Advantage PNG has conducted an annual PNG CEO100 Survey capturing the expectations of senior PNG executives for the year ahead and assessed how business performance in the year just ended compared with expectations.

Last year, the Survey highlighted a positive shift, with profits exceeding expectations and the outlook strengthening for profits, investment, and recruitment. This positive momentum continued into the 2026 Survey, aided at least in part, we believe, by the opening of the foreign exchange market. The share of CEOs reporting FX as a mission critical issue fell sharply from 67% to 17%, matching the lowest level of concern since 2015. Indeed, overall concern about FX availability is now so low that it has dropped into the list of the six least concerning issues, after being the number one concern for the previous three years and in seven of the past ten years.

In 2026, the number one critical impediment facing PNG businesses is unreliable utilities, the first time this issue has topped the list since 2014.

Top concerns for 2026, in order of severity, are:

1. Unreliable utilities
2. Security/law and order
3. Lack of government capacity
4. Shortage of expertise and skills
5. Inflation
6. Regulatory uncertainty

Of least concern for 2026, from least to more concern, are:

1. Access to overseas markets
2. Lack of available land
3. Lack of office and warehouse space
4. Access to capital
5. High real estate rental costs
6. Foreign Exchange

Six factor of least concern for PNG businesses

From the 2026 survey, we have identified five key highlights:

1. PNG Business Confidence is better than average

Westpac combines the survey's various indicators of business conditions into the Westpac Business Advantage Business Conditions Index, where 50 represents the long run average. Readings above 50 indicate more positive business conditions.

In 2026, the Business Conditions Index rose to 62.5, the highest level since 63.5 in 2023, which also remains the all-time high for the Index.

During the COVID 19 period of 2020 and 2021, Business Conditions fell below 50. More troubling, however, was the decline to 47.2 in 2024, following a worse than expected profit outcome for 2023. It is therefore encouraging to see reported Business Conditions continue to improve as PNG entered 2026.

While significant headwinds remain, current economic settings for PNG businesses are better than average and with the Westpac Business Advantage Business Confidence Index the highest seen in eight years, the groundwork is there for a better than average year. If policy, fiscal, and regulatory reform continues, there is potential for economic growth in 2026 to exceed expectations.

2. Reliability of utilities is the number one mission critical issue

In 2025, Westpac noted that CEOs' concern about the reliability of utilities was rising and had reached parity with security/law and order. At that time, only foreign exchange availability ranked higher as a critical issue.

In 2026, with FX concerns falling into the category of least concern, unreliable utilities have surged to become the number one issue facing PNG businesses.

Average concern about utilities is higher than in 2025, though still below the peak reached in 2024. This should not be interpreted as evidence that utility reliability has improved. Rather, the share of firms identifying utilities as a mission critical issue has risen sharply to 56%, up from 46% in 2025 and well above the all time low of 3% in 2018. We suspect that the lower overall concern reflects PNG businesses adapting to ongoing constraints, rather than any meaningful improvement in service reliability.

While business resilience in the face of adversity is encouraging, unreliable utilities remain a major constraint on both current economic activity and the longer term development of the PNG economy. Unlocking PNG's full economic potential will require meaningful improvements in utility reliability, making this a critical policy priority.

...to be replaced by unreliable utilities in 2026

3. Profits outperformed expectations; outlook improves despite softer hiring intentions.

In 2025, profit expectations were already higher than in 2024, signalling that PNG CEOs anticipated a return toward more average growth profile for profits.

Actual profit outcomes in 2025 exceeded expectations by a significant margin, with the 2026 Survey reporting responses 30% above the historical average. Against this backdrop, it is unsurprising that profit expectations strengthened further in 2026. While profit expectations last year were only marginally above average, they are now around 10% higher than the long run average. Attention will naturally turn to the 2027 Survey to see whether profit outcomes can once again exceed expectations.

Improving profit expectations have been accompanied by stronger investment intentions, with the Investment Expectations Index rising 6% over the year to sit almost 20% above its long run average. In contrast, recruitment intentions declined by 6%, which is disappointing given the more favourable business environment. Nevertheless, at 56, the Recruitment Expectations Index remains more than 7% above its long run average, suggesting non mineral employment can continue to grow in 2026, albeit at a slower pace than in 2025.

4. Rising business expectations points to stronger economic growth

Westpac combines profit, investment, and recruitment expectations into the Westpac Business Advantage Business Expectations Index, where 50 represents the long run average.

In 2026, the Business Expectations Index rose to 68, up from 59 in 2025, marking the highest reading since 69 in 2023 and standing 25% above the long run average. When combined with the improvement in the Business Conditions Index, the 2026 Survey suggest that PNG CEOs broadly share Westpac's expectation that economic growth will strengthen in 2026.

Our current forecast is for GDP growth of 4.6% in 2026. However, risks are skewed to the upside as we reassess PNG's near-term growth outlook ahead of an expected final investment decision on Papua LNG in the second half of the year, with construction potentially commencing shortly thereafter. While the Government has stepped up efforts to advance the project, a history of delays and internal opposition means the timing remains uncertain. Should the project proceed as expected, growth could be around 5.0%, with momentum building further in 2027, underpinned by capital inflows, infrastructure development and construction activity, and supported by a constructive outlook for the resource sector overall amid favourable global prices.

The March Labour Force Survey (LFS), due to be released on April 16th, was in the field from March 1st to 14th. This will garner significant interest given it is the first official economic data release that overlaps the Middle East conflict.

Impact from Middle East unlikely to appear in labour market data, yet

The March Labour Force Survey (LFS), due to be released next week, was in the field from March 1st to 14th. This will be the first official piece of 'hard' economic data since the onset of the Middle East conflict on February 28th and as such could garner significant interest, especially in the event of a downside surprise. That said, it is almost certainly too early for flow-on effects from this shock or from recent interest rate rises to be showing through in labour markets.

The surge in global oil prices is undoubtedly having an impact. Local fuel prices rose almost immediately. Our own Westpac-DataX Card Tracker data has already detected a clear shift in spending patterns since the onset of the conflict: fuel spending up 8.2% over the four weeks to March 21, reflecting a lift in both volumes and prices. Changes in non-fuel spending is still evolving – discretionary services spending has softened, largely in accommodation and recreation, but there is no real signs of weakness in discretionary goods spending.

However, the March LFS will only capture the first two weeks of the conflict. This is far too early to detect any meaningful shift in broad labour market conditions in Australia that could be tied to the Middle East conflict. This is because the labour market sits further downstream from price shocks, which take time to work through household spending to margins and decisions around investment and staffing. The costs associated re-hiring and re-training staff is why the labour market is often labelled as a 'lagging indicator' of the economy – any flow-through from higher fuel prices or global uncertainty is more likely to show up later in the year than in March's data.

We do expect the labour market to soften later this year

Last week, we published our revised forecasts which take into account our updated baseline assumptions on the Middle East conflict and our revised view of the RBA policy outlook. In summary, the conflict is now expected to be materially bigger and more persistent than initially assumed, requiring the RBA to deliver another two 25bp rate hikes after the expected move in May, driving a more pronounced weakening in labour market conditions over the second half of this year.

Unlike the modest improvement that was anticipated before the conflict, employment growth is now expected to slow to a well below-average pace of 1.3%yr (on a three-month average basis) by end-2026. This will be slower than the rate of working age population growth, meaning the employment-to-population ratio is expected to decline from around 64% currently to 63.7% by year-end. A combination of softer labour demand and slightly higher labour force participation means that more slack will open up in the labour market this year, with the unemployment rate expected to rise from 4.3% currently to a peak of 5% by early-2027.

Labour market expected to weaken later this year

Experiences will differ across industries

While the labour market is expected to soften in aggregate, how this unfolds over the coming quarters will likely be uneven across the economy. Industries with a greater exposure to the fuel shock are likely see a clearer softening in labour demand initially. The starting point for labour demand will also be an important consideration.

Manufacturing is one such example – not only has the number of jobs declined for four consecutive quarters in the industry (–3.2%yr), but it is also the most fuel intensive industry in Australia (outside of utilities), where 41 cents is spent on fuel per dollar of gross value added. Our Westpac-ACCI Business Survey pointed to some green shoots for manufacturing prior to the Middle East conflict, but the onset of the fuel price shock could see declines in headcount persist for longer than otherwise.

Construction is another industry with significant exposure to fuel prices. We are already seeing reports of sharp cost increases across a range of building materials, which could put some dwelling projects at risk this year. Transport and logistics is another area worth monitoring – with increases in ‘fuel levies’ across a range of services, reduced usage could result in weaker labour demand in this sector. The sharp increase in flight costs also puts jobs in travel and tourism at risk.

Starting from April 2026, industry-level labour market data will only be available on a quarterly basis via the Australian Labour Account, with mid-quarter month estimates from the LFS being suspended as part of the transition in the ABS labour market statistics.

Watch out for differences in hours worked vs. employment

When employers want to reduce their labour demand, they can do so via two levers: decreasing the average number of hours worked, and/or decreasing headcount. During the recessions of the 1980s and 1990s, employers opted to reduce labour demand via both channels. But since the 2000s, periods of weakening labour demand has seen a larger response via a decrease in average hours worked, while headcount often initially slowed, before expanding again later on.

Earlier  research from the RBA suggests the preference for average hours as the main lever of the adjustment can be attributed to the shorter and shallower nature of the downturns since the 2000s, as employers opt for greater flexibility by reducing labour demand while also retaining staff. Therefore, absent a severe recession, it can be assumed that the main response we are likely to see from the current shock is a pull-back in average hours worked. Growth in headcount will slow, but it is unlikely to decline on a sustained basis unless the shock proves to be more severe than currently assumed.

Inflation concerns take precedence for RBA

While February's gain in employment was firmer than expected, it was partly a result of an ongoing shift in seasonal patterns in the data. The ABS noted that February "saw fewer people who were unemployed and waiting to start a job in January move into employment in February". Since the pandemic, January months have tended to see more people than usual saying they have a job lined up for after the holidays but are not yet working – with many in this group labelled as 'unemployed'. Come February, they move into the job and are now classified as 'employed'. Given this dynamic has persisted for a few years, it could (and perhaps should) be seen as a shift in seasonal behaviours; but for now, seasonal factors are not yet fully adjusting for this, resulting in softer January reads and stronger February reads for employment growth.

Having now moved past this January/February seasonal dynamic, we have pencilled in a lift in employment of +25k for March – slightly firmer than the average gain over the preceding twelve months, reflecting the pre-conflict trend of firming employment growth. With the participation rate expected to tick down slightly to 66.8%, the unemployment rate is expected to print 4.2%.

For the RBA, though, the immediate focus is on the local inflation outlook and risks around inflation expectations. So, absent a significant surprise, March's labour market data is not going to play a big role in the RBA's next policy decision.

February household spending indicator: 0.3%_{mth}, 4.6%_{yr}

Read full report  Household spending indicator - February (PDF 440KB)

Household spending rose 0.3%_{mth} in February, matching January's outcome and in line with its average monthly pace over the past two years. Annual growth edged up to 4.6%yr.

Services continued to drive overall growth, rising 0.5%mt, supported by holiday-related spending across recreation & culture, transport and accommodation. Goods spending reversed recent weakness to post a modest 0.1%mt gain.

State outcomes were mixed. WA led the gains, with SA, Qld and Vic also recording increases. NSW was the only state to post a decline.

Looking ahead, risks to the spending outlook remain skewed to the downside. Weaker consumer sentiment, ongoing monetary policy restraint and signals from our Westpac–DataX Card Tracker suggest spending growth is likely to moderate over coming months.

March Cotality home value index: +0.6%*mt*h; +9.3%yr

The Cotality home value index rose 0.6%in March, following gains of 0.5%*mt*h in February, 0.6%*mt*h in January and 0.4%*mt*h in December. Annual growth was broadly steady at 9.3%yr.

The March update confirms that the changed interest rate outlook has translated into moderation in price growth and a sharper pull-back in turnover.

The slowdown remains concentrated in Sydney and Melbourne, where prices declined modestly in March and turnover has softened materially. In contrast, price growth continues to track a strong pace across the mid-sized capitals of Brisbane, Adelaide and Perth.

With further interest rate increases expected over coming months, additional headwinds are likely, and the scope for renewed acceleration in price growth appears increasingly limited.

ECONOMIC BULLETIN

RBNZ April 2026 Monetary Policy Review and change of call.

8 Apr 2026 | Kelly Eckhold, Chief Economist | +64 9 348 9382 | +64 21 786 758 | kelly.eckhold@westpac.co.nz

RBNZ to tighten in September

- As widely expected, the RBNZ retained the OCR at 2.25%. There was no vote, with the decision reached by consensus.
- The commentary was hawkish as concerns of rising second-round inflation pressures were quite prominent.
- The MPC debated the options of an earlier vs later beginning to interest rate normalisation. Interest rate cuts were not discussed.
- An earlier start was described as May or July. A hike was discussed as an option today, but the Governor said that the MPC was not close to hiking at this meeting.
- The RBNZ's short-term inflation forecast is now 4.2%/y in June 2026 – higher than before, but close to our 4.1% forecast.
- We have pulled forward our forecast for the first OCR hike from the RBNZ to September (previously December).
- The balance of risks is towards an earlier start to hikes than September, should evidence of second-round inflation impacts accumulate.

Official Cash Rate forecasts

OCR retained at 2.25% but coupled with a hawkish outlook.

The RBNZ kept the OCR unchanged at 2.25% as expected. There was no vote, with the decision reached by consensus. However, the Bank's commentary adopted a more hawkish tone than expected. There was no discussion of needing to cut the OCR despite acknowledging that, at least in the short term, there would be greater excess capacity than previously thought. Rather, the debate was between:

- a "a pre-emptive response to medium-term inflation pressures could guard against the risk of inflation expectations becoming unanchored"; or
- a gradual increase in the OCR towards "more neutral levels" to reduce the risk of "reacting to higher near-term inflation and accentuating weakness in the real economy and labour market".

In the press conference the Governor noted that the MPC discussed the possibility of raising the OCR at this meeting, but there had been "no strong advocate" for doing so.

We interpret the more gradual path as being something akin to the late 2026 lift-off date that we have been forecasting, and that the RBNZ largely had in mind at the February meeting. A pre-emptive response likely implies something faster that begins by September but could come sooner than that, should evidence of second-round inflation impacts begin to accumulate. Indeed, the Governor indicated that the pre-emptive approach could have been a tightening in May or July. More dovish members were uncomfortable with the risks of that.

Key evidence that the RBNZ seeks seems to be in the form of anecdotal evidence on pricing and wage setting behaviour combined with higher frequency evidence on price setting, costs and inflation expectations coming from monthly surveys. We think it likely that at least some evidence along these lines will accumulate given the broad-based cost shock that the economy is facing. As a result, an earlier than December beginning to the tightening cycle looks much more likely now.

Hence, we are bringing forward our existing 25bp per meeting tightening profile to begin in September. The OCR will thus end 2026 at 3% and reach the previously expected 4.25% peak earlier, in September 2027. Easing is forecast to begin a year later in September 2028 with the neutral OCR reestablished in December 2028.

An earlier start than September should not be ruled out. And given it's likely easier to explain the tightening profile in a Monetary Policy Statement meeting than the bias is likely for an earlier move to come in May versus July. The key question is: will sufficient evidence of second-round inflation impacts have accumulated by then? We think that's still an open question at this point.

Key quotes from the press release and Record of Meeting were:

"The Monetary Policy Committee is focused on ensuring that inflation returns to the 2-percent target midpoint over the medium term. This requires core inflation and wage growth to remain contained and medium- and long-term inflation expectations to remain around 2 percent. If these conditions are not met, decisive and timely increases in the OCR would be required."

"The outlook for medium-term inflation pressures depends on the size and persistence of the inflationary impulse stemming from higher oil prices and the extent to which it is offset by weaker demand in the economy."

"If the increase in near-term inflation is largely temporary, the Committee envisages gradually moving the OCR to more neutral levels as activity recovers and near-term inflationary pressures dissipate. However, any signs of significant second-round inflationary effects or increases in medium-term inflation expectations would require decisive and timely increases in the OCR to re-anchor inflation expectations."

"On the timing of any increase in the OCR, members discussed that a pre-emptive response to medium-term inflation pressures could guard against the risk of inflation expectations becoming unanchored and reduce the extent of second round price increases."

"Conversely, the Committee noted the risk of reacting to higher near-term inflation and accentuating weakness in the real economy and labour market. Members noted that this could cause unnecessary volatility in output and employment if the conflict was resolved in the near term or if the economic outlook weakens by more than currently expected."

The RBNZ's initial thoughts on the near-term outlook.

The RBNZ provided updated inflation forecasts for the next two quarters. This is a change from their usual practice of not releasing updates to their forecasts at interim reviews and reflects that recent geopolitical developments have in the RBNZ's words "materially altered the outlook and the balance of risks for inflation and economic growth".

The RBNZ now expects inflation of 3% in the March quarter (previously 2.8%), rising to 4.2% in the June quarter (previously 2.7%). Those updated figures are close to our own forecasts. The RBNZ did not provide forecasts further ahead.

The RBNZ has noted that higher energy costs will push up other prices in the economy. However, longer term impacts on wage and price setting (aka. 'second round impacts') are expected to be constrained by weak demand at this stage. This is a key area of uncertainty and one where the RBNZ will be watching closely for signs that longer-term inflation pressures are increasing. Indeed, the RBNZ went on to note that "any signs of significant second-round inflationary effects or increases in medium-term inflation expectations would require decisive and timely increases in the OCR to re-anchor inflation expectations. The Committee is vigilant to these risks."

While the RBNZ did not provide forecasts for other variables, they noted that the conflict and related increases in both operating costs and economic uncertainty will result in weaker activity in the near term. That's very much in line with our own thoughts.

Things to watch ahead of the next meeting.

The RBNZ's next policy review is on 27 May, when it will also publish a full Monetary Policy Statement (MPS) with refreshed forecasts (and probably some alternative scenarios too considering the current level of uncertainty). How the RBNZ's stance evolves between now and then will depend on the path the Middle East conflict takes; what early indicators and anecdote suggest about the impact of the conflict on activity and inflation, both in New Zealand and abroad; and any developments in financial markets as a result of the conflict or other vulnerabilities triggered by the conflict.

As far as domestic economic indicators are concerned, we think the following are key ones to watch.

- Q1 CPI (21 April) and April Selected Prices (15 May): These pricing indicators will reveal the initial first-round direct and indirect impacts of the recent surge in fuel prices. They will provide some insight as to how high headline inflation might peak, but not about how long it will remain at elevated levels.
- Q1 QSBO (21 April) and April/May ANZ Business Outlook (30 April/27 May): Unfortunately, the data-rich QSBO survey was initially in the field very early in the conflict (it is unclear whether a breakdown of early and late responses will be released). Therefore, the ANZ surveys may provide a more up-to-date account of how businesses are responding to the conflict.
- March/April PMI and PSI surveys (mid-April/mid-May): These may provide some early insight regarding the likelihood of a contraction in GDP in Q2.
- Q1 labour market surveys (6 May): Employment and hours worked data from the HLFS and QES surveys will cast light on what momentum the economy had going into the conflict, while the LCI will cast light on underlying inflation pressures.
- Budget 2026 (28 May): While the formal unveiling of the Budget comes the day after the release of the MPS, ahead of the Budget the RBNZ's MPC will receive a high-level briefing from the Treasury on what to expect at the macro level. Pre-Budget speeches and policy announcements may reveal more in the public sphere.

In addition to the above, we will be monitoring a range of other high-frequency indicators, such as monthly data on filled jobs, consumer spending, building consents, housing market activity and prices, job ads and consumer confidence. We will also be paying close attention to developments in prices for New Zealand's key export commodities. The RBNZ looks to also be focused on anecdotal evidence of business pricing and wage setting behaviour – although that will be harder to track.

Revised RBA rates view: two extra hikes, 4.85% peak, later reversal

Luci Ellis
Chief Economist, Westpac Group

We have revised our view of the outlook for RBA policy, adding two further hikes to the near-term profile and pushing out the eventual reversal. We now expect 25bp rate hikes at the 16 June and 11 August decisions, in addition to the 25bp hike we already expected at the May meeting. The peak for the cash rate is now expected to be 4.85%.

This shift reflects the longer disruption to and slower recovery in fuel supply assumed in the revised baseline forecasts we first published on Friday afternoon, with the Strait of Hormuz essentially closed for eight weeks and traffic recovering only slowly after that. It also reflects the surprisingly rapid pass-through of higher fuel and other oil-derived product prices into other prices in Australia. We believe the RBA will respond to this pricing behaviour by tightening monetary policy by more than would have been needed absent that pass-through.

The halving of fuel excise, announced by national cabinet today, reduces the near-term outlook for headline CPI inflation, but a peak of 5.4%yr in June quarter remains likely. The announcement also does not affect prices of other oil-related products, including aviation fuel and various plastics, or any price increases from damage to gas and other production facilities in non-combatant Gulf states. Much of the second-round pass-through of prices is therefore likely to remain in place, and we continue to expect trimmed mean inflation to peak around 4%yr later this year.

The higher cash rate profile will weigh on Australia's economic outlook. Growth will be slower, especially consumption, and the labour market will be softer. We expect unemployment to peak around 5%, somewhat higher than the 4.7% peak we flagged last week. Headline inflation will dip below 2½% by mid 2027 and will remain in the lower half of the 2–3% target range through to 2028. Trimmed mean inflation will take a little longer to decline, but will be back in the target range in 2028.

A companion note, also to be released this afternoon, fleshes out the rest of the forecasts. The revisions incorporate the assumed longer closure of the Strait of Hormuz and other supply disruptions in the Middle East flagged last week. In addition, we have updated for the new profile for the cash rate, the changes to fuel excise and some other recent events.

Despite the weaker economic outlook and potential undershoot of the inflation target implied by these revised forecasts, we think the RBA will be slow to reverse this policy tightening and risks getting behind the curve in coming years. We push out the date for rate cuts and pencil in four rate cuts, one per quarter in February, May, August and November 2028. We have low conviction about the exact timing.

The RBA will have already been spooked by the way inflation kicked up late last year after it took back some of its earlier rate hikes (though the usual lags of policy imply that the cuts were not the cause of that increase in inflation). We therefore suspect that the unwind of the current policy tightening will involve something of a “one bitten, twice shy” mentality. Second-round pass-through to other prices and costs will only increase the RBA's reluctance to unwind the current policy tightening.

“we continue to expect trimmed mean inflation to peak around 4%yr later this year.”

We also believe the RBA's evolving intellectual framework will militate against an early reversal of these hikes. A supply shock such as the one the world is now facing should ordinarily be looked through to the extent possible, so long as longer-term inflation expectations remain anchored. Because it believes Australia is starting from a position of little spare capacity, though, the RBA sees the supply shocks as a potential reason to have both a restrictive stance of policy and to revise up its view of what constitutes restrictive policy.

The RBA has insisted that it retains its earlier strategy of holding onto as much of the post-pandemic employment gains as possible, subject to meeting the inflation target. While inflation was actually in the 2–3% target range for part of last year, underlying inflation did not get all the way back to the 2½% target midpoint before lifting again. This is clearly being interpreted in some quarters as inflation having been above target continuously. The Monetary Policy Board will therefore want to demonstrate its commitment to returning inflation back to target expeditiously and its willingness to do what it sees as necessary to achieve this.

As noted last week, there are risks on both sides of our revised baseline view. Iran is already letting some ships through the Strait, and it is possible that fuel supply recovers faster than we are currently assuming. It is also possible that a consensus forms domestically to resist second-round inflation, especially where the flow-on of higher costs to downstream prices could be construed as excessive. On the more inflationary side, it is possible that the war drags on longer, or domestic pass-through is stronger than we currently expect.

Forecast changes

- RBA now expected to hike rates three times (May, June, August), revised up from one more (in May) previously. Peak cash rate now 4.85%, above previous peak.
- Longer Middle East disruption lifts peak prices for oil and gas, lengthens recovery. Infrastructure damage exacerbates the shock. Brent oil now expected to peak at an average $120/bbl in Q2 and Japanese LNG prices at $26mmbtu.
- Australian CPI inflation now expected to peak at 5.4%yr in June quarter, and even higher on the monthly series, despite the announced cut to fuel excise. Trimmed mean inflation peaks around 4% in 2026 H2. Food prices a particular concern through to 2028, but broader pass-through to non energy prices also an issue.
- Supply shock and tight monetary policy drag on demand, especially consumption and other interest-sensitive sectors. GDP growth forecast to trough at 1%yr in 2026, and remain subdued at 1.6%yr in 2027; unemployment rate peaks at 5% end-2026.

Cliff Notes: mixed messages

Elliot Clarke, Head of International Economics

At the turn of the week, Chief Economist Luci Ellis and Westpac Economics highlighted how severe the inflationary impact is expected to be for Australia. Recognising the extreme uncertainty surrounding the conflict and the passage of time, we extended our baseline supply assumption from a one to two-month complete shutdown of the Strait of Hormuz followed by a protracted recovery in transit from 20% of pre-conflict supply in May to normal supply at year end. Also, a consequence of elevated refining margins globally, annual Australian consumer inflation is now expected to peak around 6%yr in mid-Q2. While headline inflation will fall back to target over the following year, trimmed mean inflation is forecast to remain above 3.0%yr until end-2027 and only settle in the middle of the target range in late-2028, having peaked at 4.0%yr at end-2026.

With Australia already experiencing tight capacity and elevated domestic inflation pressures, attested to again by the RBA in the March Monetary Policy Board meeting minutes, the Middle East conflict warrants pre-emptive action by the RBA through three 25bp cash rate hikes in May, June and August 2026 to 4.85%. Policy is then seen on hold until 2028, when success with inflation should allow the cash rate to be reduced by 100bps steadily through the year. The consequence for GDP is likely to be a deceleration to just 1.0%yr in 2026, followed by a sub-par 1.6%yr gain in 2027, then an above-trend 2.8%yr recovery in 2028. The unemployment rate is forecast to rise to 5.0% at end-2026, and to take until end-2028 to return to its full employment level, circa 4.5%.

To the above forecasts, time matters a great deal. If, as has been mooted in recent days (and may be confirmed in a Presidential address later today), the Trump administration calls a quick end to the US' strikes against Iran, Australian GDP and the labour market may receive a reprieve. That said, heightened inflation will remain an acute risk while transit and supply-chain disruptions persist, and businesses may also take the opportunity to re-set margins. The balance between inflation and activity risks will therefore remain in focus for the RBA over the coming year. Ahead of the Federal Budget, the Government's financial position is also in flux, although current conditions look more likely to prove a positive than negative at this stage.

Local data out this week meanwhile focused on housing. Cotality home values increased a solid 0.6% in March. Although affordability saw a divergence in conditions city by city, with prices down a touch in Sydney and Melbourne as strong growth continued in Brisbane, Adelaide and Perth. Where conditions are weakest, reduced turnover is holding prices up. Dwelling approvals remained volatile in February, a 29.7% monthly gain lifting the annual growth rate to 14%yr. Australia clearly has need for significant, sustained additions to housing supply across our major cities, but affordability and the cost of construction are material risks which are likely to persist into the medium term.

“heightened inflation will remain an acute risk while transit and supply-chain disruptions persist”

Offshore, the list of data worthy of mention was short this week. University of Michigan consumer sentiment was, unsurprisingly, weak in March, 19% below the 5-year average and 37% under the full-history benchmark. The Conference Board's measure showed greater resilience but was still weak versus history. That said, ADP private payrolls continued to grow in March, and the retail sales control group recorded a solid gain of 0.5%mt. The ISM manufacturing index for March was also favourable, although the survey only caught the beginning of disruptions related to the Middle East conflict and the detail was also mixed, with production up, new orders down and employment contracting. China's official PMIs emphasised the nation's ability to weather uncertainty, with both the manufacturing and services indexes higher in March.

The key international data release for the week is still to come on Friday night. The US March employment report will be closely scrutinised after February's weak detail reset participants current understanding and expectations for the labour market. US policy makers have been more focused on inflation risks in recent weeks, but another poor employment result could see them reconsider this view. In contrast, a rebound in job creation will likely see market pricing for near-term policy decisions shift materially in favour of a hike, or two, as has been the case elsewhere across the developed world.

Not hawkish. Not dovish. Balanced.

Satish Ranchhod
Senior Economist

The RBNZ meets next week for its April Monetary Policy Review (Wednesday 8 April, NZ 2pm). As discussed in our preview, in the absence of major developments in the Middle East over the coming days, the RBNZ is set to leave the Official Cash Rate (OCR) at 2.25%. However, rather than the immediate OCR decision, the key focus will be on how the RBNZ is balancing the significant challenges stemming from the conflict in the Middle East and what that implies for the longer-term policy outlook.

Since the RBNZ last met in February, the risks around the economic outlook have changed significantly. Economic growth in the final quarter of last year has already come in below the RBNZ's forecast. More significantly, disruptions stemming from the war in the Middle East mean that growth over 2026 is now also likely to fall well short of the RBNZ's previous forecast. We expect the economy to grow just 1.9% in the year to December, well below the February MPS forecast for growth of 2.8%. We also expect a higher track for the unemployment rate.

At the same time, inflation is set to run much hotter than the RBNZ had expected over 2026. We're forecasting that inflation will peak around 4.1% around the middle of this year before softening a little to 3.8% by year's end – well above the RBNZ's previous year-end forecast for 2.4%. Our stronger inflation outlook is mainly due to the direct impact of higher oil prices (i.e., higher prices for petrol and diesel). However, even if global oil prices were to drop back now, inflation is still set to linger above the RBNZ's forecast over the remainder of this year, as disruptions to supply chains and other related increases in costs of production will take time to dissipate.

RBNZ Governor Breman has already outlined how she is thinking about those challenges in a recent speech. That speech described an orthodox (and sensible) approach to monetary policy in the face of a supply shock, of which the current oil price is a typical example. The Governor noted that the RBNZ would not react to the immediate fuel-related lift in inflation. The RBNZ can't offset a rise in oil prices that has already occurred with higher interest rates now, but doing so would compound the downward pressure on growth. Furthermore, with interest rates taking around 12 to 18 months to have their maximum impact, hiking rates now would potentially result in an even deeper fall in inflation at the same time as the eventual falls in oil prices will naturally pull it lower.

Instead, the focus for the RBNZ will be the longer-term outlook for inflation. And this is where things start to get murky. The key issue for the RBNZ is whether the current sharp rise in prices will have lingering effects, resulting in higher inflation even when oil prices eventually ease. That could occur if businesses come to expect continued large increases in operating costs and raise their prices accordingly. There's also the risk that we see demands for higher-than-normal cost-of-living increases as workers try to recoup the current loss of spending power. Both of those risks are very plausible given that we've recently been through an extended period of high inflation and related pressure on businesses' operating costs. And if those risks do materialise, the current uplift in inflation could end up being much more protracted.

It will take some time before we know whether those longer-term inflation risks (sometimes referred to as 'second round' impacts of an oil price shock) are manifesting. The starting point for the economy is important on this front and provides some cause for optimism. Soft activity in recent years has left the New Zealand economy with a high level of spare capacity, including a higher-than-average unemployment rate. That will limit the ability to push through larger increases in output prices or wages (though that does also imply related pressure on margins and households' purchasing power).

GDP growth forecasts

We are already seeing reports of businesses raising their prices due to the direct impact of increases in fuel prices on their operating costs (e.g., higher fares and fuel surcharges within the land transport industry). Perhaps of more concern for the RBNZ, the latest ANZ Business Outlook Survey (which was conducted following the outbreak of the war) showed a sharp rise in inflation expectations, along with increases in the number of businesses who said they are planning to increase their prices. That said, given the outlook for inflation, it would be surprising if surveyed inflation expectations did not rise in the near-term. Some comfort might be taken from firms' expectations for wage growth. These remained muted in the survey, suggesting that firms are not expecting current cost increases to feed a wage-price spiral.

The RBNZ's discussion of how its balancing the impact on growth and near-term inflation will be crucial for how markets react next week. Markets have been very focused on the rise in inflation pressures and related hawkish comments from other central banks. That's seen financial markets also pulling forward expectations for rate hikes here: at the time of writing, market pricing was consistent with an 60% chance of an OCR hike in July, and just over two hikes are priced in before the end of the year.

In its communications on 8 April, the RBNZ will balance a desire to avoid a further tightening of financial conditions with the desire to not sound complacent about the medium-term inflation risks that come with an energy price shock. Reinforcement of the approach communicated in Governor Breman's speech guidance should continue to lean against the market's current pricing for earlier rate hikes, especially as liquidity issues in the domestic market continue to ease. We continue to forecast just one 25bp hike this year, but also that significant tightening will occur in 2027 once the activity implications of the energy shock begin to dissipate.

The RBNZ's guidance about what to expect at future meetings will also likely echo the Governor's speech. In crafting this guidance, the MPC will aim to reassure markets that it will not overreact to the shock, which could cause markets to further tighten financial conditions. At the same time, the RBNZ will need to ensure it sounds credible to households and businesses about its willingness to tighten policy if inflation expectations and pricing behaviour evolve in a manner inconsistent with achieving the inflation target over the medium-term. While monetary policy should look through a temporary spike in energy prices, the MPC will need to be vigilant – and be seen to be vigilant – against the risk that inflation becomes persistent.

As we discuss in our latest Hawks, doves, and kiwis note, there are clearly risks on both sides for the OCR. Governor Breman's recent speech did draw on feedback from other MPC members, but there could still be a range of views among the Committee. Furthermore, this is a fast-changing situation. And with inflation pressures continuing to build over the past few days, even more dovish or balanced members of the MPC could start to change their assessments of risks. With that in mind, the Record of Meeting accompanying next week's interest rate review will be monitored closely to see where the members of the Committee see the risk. Key areas where the views of the Committee could diverge include the likely duration of the conflict, the impact on the economy, the likelihood of second-round effects driving persistent inflation over the medium-term, and the appropriate course for monetary policy over time. Such discussions might provide some insight into how the consensus view of the MPC might evolve as more is learnt about the evolution of the conflict and its economic impacts.

As part of her efforts to improve central bank transparency, Governor Breman has introduced a full press conference at interim reviews, and this will be the first review under that new framework. Historically, the RBNZ has not released updated forecasts at review meetings, and instead released them at the more complete quarterly updates. However, given the large changes in the economic landscape in recent weeks, the RBNZ is likely to discuss the risks around their previous forecasts. And we wouldn't rule out the chance that they could release some initial forecasts of key variables, like GDP, inflation, and the OCR.

AUS: Feb Household Spending Indicator (%mth)

Apr 7, Last: 0.3, Westpac f/c: -0.2

Mkt f/c: 0.2, Range: -0.2 to 0.4

The Household Spending Indicator rose 0.3%_{mth} in January, in line with its average monthly pace over the past two years. Annual growth eased back to 4.6%_{yr}, having averaged just over 5%_{yr} through the second half of 2025.

The detail from our Westpac-DataX Card Tracker suggests the ABS spending indicator will show a dip for the February month. Our forecast 0.2% decline in the month would take annual growth to 4.2%_{yr}. With population growth tracking at 1.6%_{yr}, the 2.6%_{yr} pace in per capita terms this points to a slight decline in real, inflation-adjusted terms. Of course, all of this pre-dates the Middle East conflict and associated fuel price surge. Our card tracker shows this has already seen significant disruptions to activity in March (see here).

NZ: RBNZ Monetary Policy Review

Apr 8, Official Cash Rate – last: 2.25%, Westpac: 2.25%, Market: 2.25%

We expect the RBNZ to hold the OCR at 2.25% at its 8 April review. We expect the RBNZ to emphasise that it will not react to the first-round impact of higher energy prices on near-term inflation, but that it will respond should there be evidence of second round effects that might create persistent inflation. The Bank is not scheduled to present revised economic projections at this meeting. However, it is possible that the RBNZ will provide some guidance of the likely magnitude of the upward revision to near-term inflation and downward revision to GDP.

US: Mar CPI

Apr 10, %m/m, Last: 0.3%

February saw a 0.3% increase in headline consumer prices as both food and energy contributed to the aggregate impulse. The gain for core prices was measured at 0.2%, although that means underlying inflation continues to run meaningfully above the FOMC's 2.0% target on both an annual and annualised basis.

March is likely to see a material step up in headline inflation as the Middle East conflict shocks energy prices higher. Firms may also take the opportunity to push through additional increases to strengthen margins. All the while, capacity pressures continue to hold up price growth for services, and the weaker dollar and tariff costs support core goods pricing. Inflation risks will remain a lasting concern for the FOMC.

25 March speech redux

- Consistent with guidance given by Governor Breman in a recent speech, we expect the RBNZ to hold the OCR at 2.25% at the 8 April review.
- Barring major developments over coming days in the Middle East, the associated commentary – which will include a post-meeting press conference – will likely closely mirror Governor Breman's recent speech.
- We expect the Bank to emphasise that it will not react to the first-round impact of higher energy prices on near-term inflation but that it will respond should there be evidence of second-round effects that might create persistent inflation.
- While the post-meeting statement will present the consensus view of the MPC, the Record of Meeting will likely reflect a diversity of views about the likelihood of second-round persistent inflation and thus the appropriate policy stance.
- The Bank is not scheduled to present revised economic projections at this meeting. However, it is possible that the RBNZ will provide some guidance of the likely magnitude of the upward revision to near-term inflation and downward revision to GDP growth that might be considered in May.
- We think the Bank will aim to balance a desire to avoid a further tightening of financial conditions with the desire to not sound complacent about the medium-term inflation risks that come with an energy price shock.

Official Cash Rate forecasts

The RBNZ will announce the outcome of the next Monetary Policy Review (MPR) at 2pm NZT on 8 April. In addition to the usual release of a post-meeting statement and the Record of Meeting, this meeting is notable as it will feature the first post-meeting press conference at a MPR meeting – a welcome innovation introduced as part of Governor Breman's drive for greater transparency.

In the absence over coming days of major developments in the Middle East, we think that the Bank's communication at this meeting is likely to closely mirror the speech given by Breman on 25 March – a speech that had received input from the Bank's Monetary Policy Committee (MPC), albeit it not necessarily representing every member's view. And so, with the Bank already indicating that it will not respond in a knee-jerk manner to a near-term oil-driven lift in inflation, the OCR is almost certain to be held at 2.25% next week, as would have been the case in the absence of the oil shock.

The RBNZ's guidance about what to expect at future meetings will also likely echo the Governor speech. In crafting this guidance, the MPC will aim to reassure markets that it will not overreact to the shock, which could cause markets to further tighten financial conditions. At the same time, the RBNZ will need to ensure it sounds credible to households and businesses about its willingness to tighten policy if inflation expectations and pricing behaviour evolve in a manner inconsistent with achieving the inflation target over the medium-term. While monetary policy should look through a temporary spike in energy prices, the MPC will need to be vigilant – and be seen to be vigilant – against the risk that inflation becomes persistent.

The magnitude of that risk will depend in part on the duration of the conflict, with a more protracted conflict likely to lead to greater damage to energy infrastructure and enduring damage to supply chains, prolonging the inflation shock. It will also depend on the state of the domestic economy. As the Governor noted in her speech, while the recovery may be broadening, it is still early – as demonstrated by the disappointing Q4 GDP outcome – and the economy is operating well below capacity. In this context, many businesses may struggle to fully pass on cost increases without losing demand – a dynamic that should delay or limit second-round inflation effects stemming from the rise in oil prices.

While the post-meeting statement and the Governor's press conference will largely represent the consensus view of the Committee, the Record of Meeting will likely reveal a diversity of views. Key areas where the views of the Committee could diverge include the likely duration of the conflict, the impact on the economy, the likelihood of second-round effects driving persistent inflation over the medium-term, and the appropriate course for monetary policy over time. Such discussions might provide some insight into how the consensus view of the MPC might evolve as more is learnt about the evolution of the conflict and its economic impact.

The RBNZ is unlikely to provide a full update of its economic projections next week – that will likely come as usual when it releases the next Monetary Policy Statement (MPS) in May. That update will include reaction to pre-conflict data, such as the slightly disappointing Q4 GDP report. It will also allow reflect reaction to the first reports showing how the global and domestic economies have responded to the oil shock (so far there has been some evidence of softer PMI readings offshore, together with a marked drop in consumer confidence in New Zealand). Developments in financial conditions, including the exchange rate, will also factor into those revisions.

But we don't rule out the possibility that next week the RBNZ could provide some preliminary quantification of how the conflict has impacted the near-term outlook for inflation and GDP growth that was presented in the February MPS (such as where inflation may peak and how much growth might be impacted this year). Such estimates could be refined in May based on developments in the Middle East and with the benefit of early economic data and further anecdotes quantifying the impact on New Zealand consumer and business behaviour. In our own recent forecast update, we upgraded our outlook for CPI inflation (now expected to peak at 4.1%/y this year) and downgraded our forecasts for economic growth (now expected to be 1.9%/y this year, down from a pre-war forecast of 3.3%/y).

In its communications on 8 April, the RBNZ will balance a desire to avoid a further tightening of financial conditions with the desire to not sound complacent about the medium-term inflation risks that come with an energy price shock. Reinforcement of the approach communicated in Breman's speech guidance should continue to lean against the market's current pricing of more than three 25bp OCR hikes by the end of this year, especially once current liquidity issues in the domestic market ease. As we discussed in our own forecast update, we continue to forecast just one 25bp hike this year, but also that significant tightening will occur in 2027 once the activity implications of the energy shock begin to dissipate.

Kelly's take.

No change is very appropriate for now. This supply shock is extremely unwelcome and will likely significantly boost headline inflation for a while. But at least for now the large, accumulated level of excess capacity likely means the risk of entrenched inflation remains modest.

The MPC has time to assess how the outlook will evolve. We don't know how far and for how long inflation will remain elevated. Forecasts are necessarily uncertain if only because the duration of the war and restriction of oil supplies remain uncertain.

We can't assume inflation will automatically revert to more normal levels, but we also can't assume it won't. We should be alert to the possibility of financial stability issues globally that could see financial conditions tighten. That's another reason for not putting maximum weight on forecasts that suggest risks of inflation remaining elevated for a long time. The market might do some of the job for us. And there might be bigger fish to fry.

If inflation rises for a protracted period, then it won't be appropriate to have interest rates in the 2's or even the low 3's as real interest rates will be too low. But there's time to assess and plenty of scope to move quickly once it's determined that real interest rates closer to more neutral settings are appropriate. I'd want to see a lot more data before coming to that judgement.

Overview.

As discussed in our preview this week, the outcome of the upcoming Monetary Policy Review seems certain – an OCR maintained at 2.25%. However, looking further ahead, we think there is likely to be a diversity of views across the Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) about how the Middle East conflict is likely to play out; the likely impact on the economy and inflation; and the appropriate monetary policy response.

In this edition of our regular “Hawks, Doves and Kiwis” note, we survey some of the arguments that might be advanced by MPC members as they seek to tease out the implications of this shock. Some of those arguments would push the RBNZ in a more “hawkish” direction, while others would counsel a “dovish” response.

We expect to see at least some of these perspectives raised in the Record of Meeting that will be published after next week’s meeting. However, it will likely take some time before it becomes clear which path the economy and monetary policy will take.

Official Cash Rate forecasts

The Hawk’s Eye View.

The Middle East conflict is both large and possibly long lasting. The current 2.25% nominal OCR was set with a view to a very different outlook. More neutral settings will soon be appropriate while we assess the size and duration of the inflation shock.

- Inflation is likely to rise to the 4-5% range at the very least. And the shock could be long lasting, reflecting the significant supply chain disruptions at play.
- The OCR was set based on a forecast of a high level of excess capacity which still seems relevant. But it also envisaged an inflation rate that would soon move back inside the inflation target range. This is unlikely now.
- Hence the real OCR is now much lower than was anticipated would be the case in late 2025/early 2026. Indeed, the real OCR is now likely in deeply negative territory and will fall a lot further as inflation rises.
- We would need to make heroic assumptions to think inflation expectations will remain low enough to think that real interest rates are not now low and falling.
- This inflation shock comes after a long period of above target inflation. This further challenges the idea that inflation expectations will remain unimpacted.

RBNZ forecasts of the nominal OCR and estimated real OCR

Significant risks to inflation expectations and wage setting behaviour could result from the inflation shock. This requires a proactive response to avoid a later OCR overshoot.

- The shock to the inflation rate is extreme and the duration of the shock unknown.
- Price setting behaviour could quickly adjust to reflect the shock. Pricing intentions were already high, and costs are increasing in a visible way. Customers are likely to accept a price rise given the Iran war.
- Labour market conditions are not uniformly loose. Skilled labour remains hard to get and there are considerable costs for firms to replace lost skilled workers. These firms may opt to compensate those workers given the broad-based nature of the inflation shock.
- Given the risk of a lift in inflation expectations, it's no longer appropriate to retain stimulatory conditions. Policy should be at least neutral in the current circumstances. A quick adjustment of the OCR above 3% is appropriate.

Inflation and inflation expectations

Many central banks will likely be forced to tighten monetary policy in response to the inflation shock. The RBNZ will need to follow suit or exchange rate depreciation will be a significant risk.

- Most of the move up in market interest rates has reflected global dynamics.
- Global rates are rising reflecting the inflation shock and an expectation that central banks won't accommodate the shock.
- If the RBNZ retains relatively low short-term rates then downward pressure on the exchange rate will occur. This will add to inflation pressures.
- Some rise in the OCR to compensate for rising foreign rates is thus appropriate – likely towards the 3.5-4.5% range now likely for the US and Australia.

Even if the Iran war is quickly resolved, a legacy of high inflation will remain. It would be better for the OCR to be positioned much closer to neutral levels to bring that inflation down to 2%.

- Even if the war ended tomorrow, inflation would be much higher than thought when the 2.25% OCR was last considered by the MPC.
- While doves can argue that accumulating excess capacity means an accommodative stance is appropriate, growth could quickly be restored if the war ended.
- The uncertain situation argues for a more neutral policy stance. Certainly, the odds of an undershoot of core inflation in the next 2 years looks remote.

The Dove's Tale.

Good central bank practice is to look through the direct impact of supply shocks.

- The RBNZ cannot offset with higher interest rates the impact on near-term inflation of an increase in oil prices that's already occurred.
- As interest rates usually take around 12 to 18 months to have their full effects, interest rate hikes now could compound the downwards pressures on activity just as inflation will naturally be falling back, thus amplifying rather than dampening the cycle in inflation.
- Monetary policy tightening would only be appropriate if there were clear evidence of second-round inflation pressures that would not be addressed by the additional surplus productive capacity created by the shock.

The impacts on activity from the Middle East conflict are likely to be large, especially considering the fragility of New Zealand's recovery.

- GDP growth disappointed last year, with the recovery seemingly interrupted by uncertainty associated with US tariff policy. Many smaller firms will be poorly positioned to cope with a further year of disappointing growth.
- Consumer and business confidence has already taken a significant hit, and next month's surveys seem likely to be weaker again. Firms already report the curtailing of some activity.
- Uncertainty will lead to delays in making major decisions (such as hiring and investment proposals); a reduction in discretionary purchases due to a squeeze on household disposable incomes; and downward pressure on asset prices (including housing).
- In this environment, even a 2.25% OCR is unlikely to stimulate activity. While the real OCR this year will be lower than forecast previously, it is absurd to suggest that financial conditions have been eased by this shock.

- Long haul travel to New Zealand is likely to be lower than forecast previously due both increased costs associated with travel, physical disruptions through major hubs and perhaps travellers' reluctance to travel long distances.
- There is a risk that the conflict is protracted, and that the related disruptions cause a larger and more enduring lift in inflation than expected. However, in such circumstances, there is likely to be an even sharper downturn in economic activity. Tightening policy in such circumstances would be unnecessary.

ANZ consumer and business confidence

The output gap is already sufficiently negative to place the required downward pressure on inflation over the medium term.

- Some countries will likely need to tighten monetary policy. This is because they will need to generate the excess capacity required to ensure that a near-term spike in inflation does not lead to persistent inflation over the medium-term.
- By contrast, New Zealand's economy already has significant spare capacity and that capacity is now unlikely to be absorbed this year given the weaker outlook for growth.
- The current level of spare capacity proved sufficient to normalise pricing setting behaviour – including wage growth – in the wake of the huge Covid inflation shock.
- It is unclear why even greater spare capacity would be required to dampen inflation this time, especially with fiscal policy providing a more supportive role than during the Covid shock.
- Tightening now will needlessly generate even greater spare capacity – probably including an unemployment rate over 6% – adding to the real cost of this shock to the New Zealand economy.

Unemployment rate and wage growth

The oil price shock could expose other much-discussed weaknesses in the global economy, leading to a generalised tightening of financial conditions. The RBNZ needs to be wary of tightening into what could be a sharper global slowdown than currently assumed.

- Stresses caused by the oil shock could expose other vulnerabilities in the global economy, such as concerns about equity market valuations, private credit and structural weaknesses in China's economy.
- Some central banks will have little choice but to tighten policy (e.g., the RBA). This will weigh on trading partner growth and feed back into the outlook for both the demand for and prices of New Zealand's exports.
- The RBNZ needs to consider these risks especially given the weak starting point for the recovery.

This report focuses on current dynamics occurring within the agricultural sector and provides a forward view on where we see prices going for the main agricultural commodities.

 Read full report here \(PDF 2MB\)

Expect the unexpected.

Despite uncertainties, agricultural export prices to remain elevated.

- The impact of war in Iran is likely to be broadly supportive of prices. The key issue is whether war-induced costs can be passed on. In the near term, the scope for passthrough is likely to be limited, which implies some pressure on margins. Should hostilities persist, the potential to pass on higher costs increases, providing more support to prices, and a recovery in margins.
- We've revised up our farmgate milk price forecast for this season by 40 cents to $9.80/kg, which is slightly higher than the midpoint of Fonterra's forecast range. While global supply remains ample, that's been matched by strong demand for protein. That said, with the war introducing new uncertainties, we have kept our milk payout forecast for the 2026/27 season at $9.20/kg.
- Beef and lamb export prices are set to remain elevated. Key considerations include the war in Iran, how quickly the US beef herd rebuilds, the resilience of US consumer beef demand, ongoing weakness in the Chinese market, and price resistance in the UK and EU markets for lamb.
- Meanwhile, kiwifruit and apple export prices are set to plateau at high levels as supply catches up with demand in key offshore markets.
- Log export prices are expected to remain rangebound, showing little upward momentum. Rising freight costs imply margin squeeze, which could result in corporate action.

The epic blunder of fighting the last war

Luci Ellis
Chief Economist, Westpac Group

- The Middle East conflict and the resulting fuel crisis are not the same as previous crises and should not require COVID-style policy responses such as work-from-home mandates. Governments and other decision-makers need to avoid the temptation to “fight the last war”. Nor should they fall into the trap of “we must do something, and this is something”, when that something is ill-suited to the current problem.
- The focus should instead be on the key issue for the world economy: how the conflict maps into energy-supply disruption via the closure of the Strait of Hormuz and/or damage to oil and gas infrastructure in other Gulf states. Time is almost up on our initial assumption that the Strait would be closed for about a month, so we have updated our baseline forecast to reflect this. But the Strait is a time-limited source of leverage for Iran. At some point, third-party countries will respond to the damage being done to them; already some tankers are being allowed through.
- This is a significant shock to the economy and a challenging situation for public policy. For the next few weeks, though, the appropriate monetary policy response is “wait and see”. The current crisis is not (yet) a financial crisis or a pandemic requiring immediate, potentially out-of-cycle, action. And conditions could be quite different in a month’s time. Domestic conditions will continue to shape the RBA’s decisions at its regular meetings.

“Fighting the last war” is a common cognitive trap: trying to make a current crisis fit a past one. We saw attempts to make COVID fit the GFC template by expecting borrower distress despite massive fiscal support and, in some quarters, to make the AI boom fit the COVID template of sudden mass job losses, at least in the US.

The current conflict in the Middle East is producing plenty of examples of this behaviour, again misguided. The US/Israel attack has not gone the same way as the US intervention in Venezuela, nor are the implications like those of Russia’s invasion of Ukraine. The geographic pinch-point of the Strait of Hormuz shapes both the energy-price implications and the military ones. The context also differs significantly: the world is not emerging from a pandemic, with macroeconomic policy highly expansionary and other supply chains already disrupted.

The domestic context in Australia also differs in important ways, particularly the ceiling on east coast wholesale gas prices introduced after the 2022 episode. We are also four years further along with solar and battery installation. These changes mean that, for Australia, this is mostly an issue of fuel prices and availability, rather than electricity (as in 2022–23).

In addition, the current conflict bears little resemblance to the COVID pandemic, so policy responses should differ. We were surprised that work-from-home mandates have been seriously proposed. A fuel shortage is not a respiratory virus, and there is no reason to prevent or discourage workers from attending their workplace if they commute by foot, bicycle or public transport. Better responses would be to expand public transport coverage and frequency, encourage carpooling (including more extensive transit lanes), and cancel non-essential government travel. Only if those policies fail, or fuel shortages become so extreme that critical workers need to be prioritised, would WFH become an appropriate response.

Likewise, businesses are not facing a sudden loss of income as the community goes into lockdown. Income support measures should therefore be much more targeted, if they are needed at all.

The main similarity to the pandemic is stockpiling, as people fear downstream supply disruptions. Policy responses to address this make more sense than mandating work-from-home. Options include publicising the restocking of petrol stations that had run out of some fuels, as well as measures already taken such as temporary changes to fuel standards and the oil-for-gas supply deal with Singapore.

A kinetic war between US/Israel and Iran could drag on without necessarily having its current dramatic impact on global energy markets. For the rest of the world, the key issues are closure of the Strait of Hormuz and actual or threatened damage to gas and other civilian infrastructure in non-combatant Gulf states. But closure of the Strait is a time-limited source of leverage for Iran. At some point, third-party countries will respond to the damage being done to them; already some tankers are being allowed through.

The immediate issue for the global and Australian economies is fuel availability. Higher prices will curb demand, but periods of localised unavailability will be especially disruptive.

The implications for macroeconomic policy depend on the broader effects on inflation and growth. The RBA was already hiking rates ahead of the outbreak of the conflict. Demand growth had picked up a little more sharply than they, or we, had expected. And with the economy no longer running with significant spare capacity as in the 2010s, even small upside demand or downside supply shocks show up in prices rather than being absorbed. More frequent policy adjustments should therefore be expected.

As highlighted by the RBA’s counterparts at the RBNZ, policymakers should ordinarily try to look through the first-round, fuel-specific impacts on inflation from a shock like this. Second-round effects such as higher transport and materials costs flowing through to other prices may, however, require a response. A lift in inflation expectations is also a watch point. But if the supply-disruption element of the conflict fades over the next month or so, these effects will also be short-lived. While the update to our baseline forecast is more severe than this, the risks around it are two-sided. It will therefore pay to wait to see which scenario plays out ahead of the May meeting. A May rate hike is still on the cards for pre-existing domestic reasons, but pre-judging the second-round effects on inflation, and the need for any hikes beyond the next one, is a much less secure strategy.

In particular, we do not expect an out-of-cycle RBA decision. These are rare: the last one was in March 2020, just ahead of lockdown, and the one before that was in 1997, both to cut rates. Even during the GFC, there were no out-of-cycle policy decisions. The decision tree facing the RBA also does not require one. May seems a long way away, but by then either things will have de-escalated, or the war will have escalated, drawn in Gulf states and worsened energy supply. De-escalation would see some of the inflationary shock soon moderate, weakening the case for further policy tightening. Escalation would be an even larger negative shock to global growth than we are already facing, but also inflationary. With the Board already split on the need to hike expeditiously, we see neither the need, nor the appetite, to bring forward that decision in either scenario. This is not COVID, and we do not expect policymakers to act like it is.

Forecast changes

- The US/Israel–Iran conflict is likely to result in a more prolonged disruption to energy production in the Middle East and shipping through the Strait of Hormuz than we previously assumed.
- We have therefore revised our baseline forecast to assume an eight-week closure of the Strait of Hormuz and a slower recovery, compared with the previous assumption of a one-month closure and one month of recovery. Shipping traffic through the Strait is assumed to be closer to 20% of normal in May, with a gradual return to normal by year end.
- Oil is now expected to average US$120/bbl (Brent) in Q2, from $90/bbl previously. It is expected to remain $13 higher even by the end of the year. Japanese LNG prices are expected to peak at a quarterly average of US$26mmbtu over the next few quarters.
- We have also made more allowance for wider refinery margins and downstream flow-on from transport and fertiliser costs into prices, especially food prices, as well as some moderate second-round effects including wages. We continue to assess that there will be minimal impact on Australia's domestic electricity prices.
- For Australia, headline inflation peaks at 5.5% in 2026 Q2. Trimmed mean inflation is less affected but still peaks at 4% by end 2026.
- At 1.4%, GDP growth over 2026 is more than 1ppt weaker relative to pre-war forecast and 0.6ppts weaker than our March Market Outlook base case. The unemployment rate is also higher in the second half of 2026, reaching 4.7% in Q4.
- There have been no changes to our forecasts for interest rates and exchange rates.
- There are risks on both sides of this base case, depending on the progress of negotiations between US/Israel and Iran, the status of the Strait of Hormuz and whether there is further damage to energy infrastructure.
- Additional detail on our revised base case forecasts will be released on Monday.

Cliff Notes: a fork in the road

Elliot Clarke, Head of International Economics
Ryan Wells, Economist

In Australia, February's CPI came in slightly below expectations, headline inflation ticking down to 3.7%yr from 3.8%yr, while trimmed mean inflation held steady at 3.3%yr. Constructive elements of the detail included: dwelling purchases posting its smallest increase in ten months; a below-expectations annual increase in education prices; and lower childcare costs, the result of increased take-up of the Childcare Subsidy following the introduction of the three-day guarantee. There were also a couple of upside surprises, however, most notable were clothing and some food-related categories. The impact from electricity rebates has also now abated, bringing reported electricity prices back into line with actual prices.

The net result is that the inflationary pulse Australia was experiencing prior to the current surge in fuel prices was marginally softer than expected. While fuel will undoubtedly boost headline inflation from March, the trimmed mean pulse is likely to hold above but near the top of the target range through 2026. For a detailed view of how each state's economy is positioned to weather coming headwinds, see our latest Coast-to-Coast report.

The Q1 Westpac-ACCI Survey of Industrial Trends meanwhile showed that the long-awaited improvement in manufacturing conditions is finally materialising, the Actual Composite rising to 59.3 – a strong expansionary read. Underpinning the move was a surge in output growth, another solid lift in new orders and, encouragingly, a rise in employment and overtime. Note though, this survey was largely completed before the onset of the Middle East conflict. Australian manufacturing's acute exposure to fuel and energy costs is likely to see a partial reversal in Q2 and a degree of apprehension over the outlook.

“the trimmed mean pulse is likely to hold above but near the top of the target range through 2026”

Offshore, data released was inconsequential. The preliminary March S&P Global PMIs for the major advanced economies unsurprisingly pointed to softer momentum and heightened inflationary pressures in the initial weeks of the Middle East conflict. FOMC members Bowman and Waller meanwhile were focused more on labour market weakness than inflation, though they felt it prudent to wait-a-while to assess the implications of the current conflict for price risks.

Regarding the state of the Middle East conflict, equity markets took solace in news the White House had been involved in initial intermediated discussions over the path to a ceasefire, although uncertainty over who in Iran's leadership will take the lead in any formal negotiations has kept participants guessing on both the timing and potential success of these initiatives. The overnight extension of the 5-day reprieve for Iranian energy infrastructure by President Trump to 10 days is a positive step towards fruitful negotiations, however.

Iran's military actions have also been relatively contained this week, and safe passage through the Strait of Hormuz has been provided to several ships, consistent with prior communications from Iranian officials that ships operated by countries not involved in the conflict are free to transit if Iran's conditions are met. It is not clear if this includes a payment of up to US$2 million per shipment as previously telegraphed. If Iranian authorities hold to this guidance, China's fleet and vessels from other non-aligned countries such as Malaysia (a key supplier to Australia who reportedly reached an agreement with Iran overnight) could slowly reduce the current global deficiency in crude and LNG supply, even if the US/Israel and Iran continue military actions against one another. The key risk remains the intentional, or unintentional, destruction of production and/or logistics facilities, turning a temporary loss of supply into an enduring one. The duration of this conflict and lost supply matters a great deal to both the persistence of global consumer inflation and the policy outlook.

Inflation up, growth down, OCR on hold?

Kelly Eckhold
Chief Economist NZ

As the war has drawn on and evidence of disruption to the NZ economy has accumulated, we have had another cut at estimating the impact on the economic outlook. The hit to growth and employment looks significant and inflation is set to move well above the top of the RBNZ's target range. The RBNZ noted an intention to try and look through the direct impacts of the shock. But there is significant uncertainty around the outlook so we should be humble around what we know now about how things will develop over the year ahead.

The Iran war is expected to significantly crimp the previously expected recovery.

The Iran war has not moderated in the last couple of weeks and in some sense the pressure on the New Zealand economy has intensified as early hopes of a fast resolution and quick return to global economic normality have waned. We can't say with any certainty when the conflict will end. But we now think it will be at least another month until we see tangible signs of an end to the war with the possibility of more normal service to the global oil markets returning.

Crude oil prices have remained volatile but refined fuels markets have continued to tighten as the flow of crude oil around the world has now been constrained for more than three weeks. Damage to infrastructure in the Persian Gulf has accumulated which means that even if the war ended tomorrow, the path to normality will take some time. As refined fuels spreads are wider and capacity at the Asian refineries where we and our trading partners access fuel has declined, pressure has built on the economic outlook.

We continue to assume that the Iran war eases in around a month and that crude oil and refined fuels prices will gradually ease over the rest of 2026. Crude oil prices are expected to drop back to around pre-war levels by the start of 2027. However, refined fuels prices remain elevated compared to levels seen a few months ago as we expect some element of a war risk premium to remain, and damage to infrastructure may take time to repair. That means inflation in New Zealand will likely linger at elevated levels for much of this year.

We think that the Iran War will have damaged confidence in the household and business sectors and will be prompting changes in spending and investment plans given people have no real idea on when conditions will improve. We saw an early read on this with the monthly consumer confidence survey for March released today. This showed that consumer confidence dropped sharply over the month and currently likely sits some distance below the average level of confidence reported for the month overall.

We've pulled down our forecast for GDP growth over 2026 to 1.9% (from 2.8% previously). In the very near term, we've pencilled in a fall in quarterly GDP of 0.4% in the June quarter. That's mainly due to an expected drop in household spending in response to increases in living costs and related falls in consumer confidence. Those headwinds will not be significantly offset by the Government's support package targeting lower income households.

We also expect weakness in investment spending over the coming year, with some businesses likely to delay major capital spending in response to the increased uncertainty about the outlook for economic growth and the near-term downturn in demand that may be experienced in some industries. We will learn more about this when the NZIER QSBO is available on 21 April.

GDP growth forecasts

The most direct impact of the shock on exports will be felt in the tourism sector, with the recent strong growth in international arrivals likely to be reversed for a period due to a combination of flight disruptions, much higher airfares and perhaps consumer reluctance to travel long distances. The economic impact will be partly mitigated by fewer New Zealanders choosing to holiday abroad. At this stage we have made no major changes to our forecasts for the volume of merchandise trade. As is usually the case in New Zealand, weaker global growth is likely to manifest mostly through lower prices, rather than lower volumes.

Growth is expected to pick up again next year as the eventual fall in oil prices boosts households' disposable incomes. However, the recovery in investment spending is expected to be more gradual, with businesses likely to remain cautious about major capital expenditure until they are confident that the recovery is entrenched.

We anticipate that the shock will put paid to the recovery in the labour market we had expected over 2026. We now expect unemployment will rise from 5.4% currently to 5.6% in the middle of this year, before easing back gradually. With a softer outlook for economic growth, businesses are likely to remain cautious about taking on new staff, and some firms may shed workers.

With weakness in activity and the jobs market, the overall level of wage inflation is expected to remain moderate in the near term (though some workers with specialised skills may be able to negotiate larger pay increases in response to the rise in living costs). Longer term, as the economy recovers, we are likely to see demands for larger cost-of-living adjustments to wages as workers try to claw back the loss in their purchasing power.

Another sector that won't likely see an improvement over 2026 now is the housing market. The hit to the household sector coming from the increase in fuel costs combined with the weaker labour market is likely to be a kick in the guts of a housing market that was already just treading water. We now expect house prices to fall around 1% over 2026 as buyers step back from the market. Further ahead, we expect a return to more moderate rates of house price growth.

Our revised economic outlook also has implications for the Government's fiscal position. As growth is expected to be weaker then so also will be government revenue. Spending is also likely to be higher than expected as unemployment rises. The Government's fuel package announced this week will have just a modest impact given the Government indicates that the roughly $370 m cost implied will fit within current operating allowances. The bottom line is that the OBEGALx deficit in 2026/27 is now likely to be around $4bn larger than we had forecast previously. A surplus might still be achievable in 2029/30, but the cumulative deficit over the forecast period would be around $7-8bn higher than forecast previously, with net core Crown debt peaking at around 46% of GDP. Treasury's forecasts are likely to be more pessimistic than our own with implications for the forecast bond programme.

There are consequential implications for the inflation outlook. We now expect that inflation will peak at 4.1% in mid-2026, and that it will remain above 3% through the first quarter of 2027. That is up sharply from our previous forecasts, which assumed a peak in inflation of around 3.2%. And importantly, inflation is set to remain well above the levels the RBNZ had previously assumed for all of 2026. Higher refined fuels costs are the key driver here. There are direct impacts on petrol and diesel costs, but also indirect impacts through a broad range of goods and services.

When oil prices do eventually drop back, inflation is expected to fall to levels that are lower than we previously assumed (a pattern that is often seen in the wake of oil price spikes). In our updated projections, inflation is expected to briefly dip below 2% in late-2027, before rising back up to around 2.3% further ahead.

CPI inflation forecasts

The extent of the current uplift in inflation signals upside risk for inflation expectations and business price setting behaviour. In the near term, any uplift in output prices will be moderated by the softness in activity. However, when activity recovers, we expect some firms will attempt to rebuild margins, while workers are likely to ask for larger wage increases to offset the erosion of their purchasing power.

This leaves the question on how the RBNZ will respond to the significant change in circumstances. The RBNZ is "exquisitely skewed" between a much higher inflation outlook and the likelihood and increasing excess capacity amid weak growth.

Governor Breman released a speech this week discussing the framework the RBNZ expects to follow. Breman's emphasis was that policy would be focused on medium term inflation pressures, and that for now there's little evidence these have lifted by enough to justify near-term OCR hikes. Breman indicated that rate hikes will only be brought forward should there be an accumulation of evidence suggesting that the oil shock is generating second-round pressures on wages and prices, leading to higher inflation over the medium term. Those second-round effects – which are more likely to occur if the conflict is prolonged – are unlikely to be evident for some time.

AUS: Feb Private Sector Credit (%mth)

Mar 31, Last: 0.5 Westpac f/c: 0.6
Mkt f/c: 0.6, Range: 0.2 to 0.7

Private sector credit growth reached 0.8%_{mth} in December but eased to 0.5%_{mth} in January, surprising to the downside as all major credit components reported weaker growth.

We expect growth to rebound to 0.6%_{mth} in February – slightly below the average pace of 0.7%_{mth} recorded in the second half of last year. The RBA cash rate increase in early February and weaker consumer sentiment at the start of the year are likely to affect credit flows with a lag. With house prices remaining firm, though somewhat lower than last year, credit growth should be supported for now. However, inflationary pressures and rising interest rate expectations from higher energy prices represent a downside risk for Q2 and beyond.

AUS: Mar Cotality Home Value Index (%mth)

Apr 1, Last: 0.6, Westpac f/c: 0.7

The Cotality home value index rose 0.6% in Feb following a 0.7%_{mth} in Jan, a 0.4% rise in Dec and 0.9-1.2%_{mth} gains through Aug-Nov. Despite the softer tone in recent months, annual growth still lifted, rising to 9.6%_{yr}. The detail shows a significant slowing in price growth and a pull-back in turnover in the Sydney and Melbourne markets but a much more muted slowing effect in other markets.

The daily measure points to a similar 0.7% rise for the March month, the detail again showing softness in Sydney and Melbourne but robust gains in Brisbane, Adelaide and Perth. Weekly auction activity – which is only a meaningful guide to conditions in Sydney and Melbourne – suggests there has been a further weakening in these markets into month-end.

AUS: Feb Dwelling Approvals (%mth)

Apr 1, Last: -7.2, Westpac f/c: 5.0
Market f/c: 6.0, Range: -1.0 to 14.0

Dwelling approvals have been very choppy over the last six months, most recently falling 7.2% in Jan after a 14.9% drop in Dec unwind 15.9% jump in Nov, the swings driven by high rise. On a rolling 3mth avg basis, growth has slowed back to 0.9%_{qtr}. As always, housing data needs to be treated with more caution over the December-January low period.

Feb is likely to see some 'pop' higher for headline approvals, with high rise approvals coming off an 18mth low. The segment can be very hard to predict but is generally slower to respond to cyclical shifts, suggesting what we have seen recently is more likely to be lumpiness-related noise than a response to the changed interest rate environment. On balance we expect a 5% rise in total approvals with upside risks if high rise returns to average level of the last two years.

Approvals ascent re-emerges

AUS: Q1 Job Vacancies (%qtr)

Apr 2, Last: -0.2, Westpac f/c: 3.0

Job vacancies fell by just -0.7k (-0.2%) between Aug and Nov, a smaller decline than expected. Over 2025, job vacancies have been broadly steady around 40% higher than pre-COVID levels.

While vacancies have been stable, the size of the labour force has continued to grow, seeing the vacancy rate nudge lower. The unemployment rate also gradually rose over last year. Overall, the labour market is operating around the Beveridge curve, suggesting the relationship between vacancies and unemployment is behaving broadly as expected.

Monthly partial indicators were on the stronger side in recent months, suggesting the official ABS stock measure of vacancies will likely bounce higher in Q1. We have pencilled in a lift of 3.0% for the quarter.

Partial indicators point to a lift in Q1

AUS: Feb Goods Trade Balance ($bn)

Apr 2, Last: 2.6, Westpac f/c: 1.5
Mkt f/c: 2.9 Range: 1.5 to 3.5

Lower exports and higher imports saw the monthly goods trade surplus narrow to $2.6bn in January. We expect this trend to continue in February – we forecast a further narrowing to $1.5bn.

Major commodities are likely to report lower exports, as adverse weather has disrupted production and shipments. Coal production in Queensland appears to have been particularly affected. Iron ore shipments are also likely to decline. Significant AUD appreciation is set to weigh on exports of other goods. On the imports side, January saw large monthly changes across major categories, but overall imports increased by a relatively modest 0.8%mt. We may see notable compositional shifts again, although total imports are expected to be only slightly lower.

NZ: Feb Monthly Employment Indicator (%mth)

Mar 30, Last: 0.2, Westpac f/c: 0.6

The MEI is likely to add to the evidence that the New Zealand economy was regaining momentum prior to the Iran conflict. The weekly snapshots provided by Stats NZ are now running slightly higher than a year earlier, having been down year-on-year since mid-2024. For the February month, we expect an initial print of around +0.6%, although both that and the 0.2% rise in January are likely to be revised down a little in subsequent releases.

Monthly Employment Indicator

NZ: Mar ANZ Business Confidence (index)

Mar 31, Last: 59.2

ANZ's monthly survey is likely to show a sharp deterioration in business sentiment since the start of the Iran conflict – and as with their consumer confidence survey, it will have worsened over the course of the month, with the headline result only capturing the average. The surge in fuel prices will no doubt send inflation expectations and pricing intentions higher as well; the big question for the RBNZ will be around the potential for ongoing rounds of price increases, given that businesses' own customers are also facing a significant hit to their purchasing power.

Business confidence high prior to Iran conflict

NZ: Feb Building Consents (%mth)

Apr 1, Last: 1.9, Westpac f/c: 5.0

Following a modest 2% rise in January, we're forecasting a 5% rise in dwelling consent numbers in February. That's in part due to an expected bounce in multi-unit consents after softness in January. More notably, if we smooth through the monthly swings, the total number of homes consented over the past 12 months has been trending higher and looks set to reach its highest level since 2023. But while this is encouraging, the lift in consents does pre-date the Middle East conflict and related increases in uncertainty around the economic outlook. We expect those factors will weigh on new construction over the year ahead.

Building consents picking up

US: Mar employment report

Apr 3, payrolls, Last: -92k, WBC f/c: 70k, Mkt f/c: 51k
Apr 3, U/E rate, Last: 4.4%, WBC f/c: 4.4%, Mkt f/c: 4.4%

The US labour market surprised to the downside in February, with 92k jobs lost in the month and a 69k cumulative downward revision to December and January. Nonfarm payrolls employment rose by just 13k per month over the year to February, a marked step down from 89k the year prior. If this trend rate of growth continues for employment, the unemployment rate will edge up towards 5.0% through the remainder of the year. Given the comparatively low level of participation, there is also a risk of a step change in the unemployment rate any given month. For the FOMC, downside risks will have to be balanced against inflation pressures.

RBA hikes cash rate to 4.10% in split decision

Luci Ellis
Chief Economist, Westpac Group

- As was widely expected, the RBA Monetary Policy Board (MPB) raised the cash rate 25bps to 4.10% following its March meeting. We flagged the possibility that it could be a split decision, but the 5:4 vote was an even finer majority than we thought might occur.
- The main reasons for the decision were the existing assessment that Australia is experiencing capacity pressures, coupled with the increase in inflation expectations that has already occurred in response to the Middle East conflict and associated spike in petrol prices.
- With the Board already split, a follow-up hike in May looks less certain. But (as revealed in the media conference) all members agreed that a hike was needed and the question was more about timing. We therefore retain a May hike as our base case. Whether the conflict in the Middle East is still ongoing and how it evolves from here will be crucial.
- The Board are also still concerned about domestic capacity pressures keeping inflation above target. This will mean rate hikes will remain on the table until inflation risks have clearly subsided.

Private sector demand growth was stronger than the RBA expected in late 2025, though consumption and unit labour costs were softer. The Board still assesses that part of the increase in inflation late last year reflected temporary factors. However, it has taken signal from the recent strength in labour market data and now believes that capacity pressures are slightly greater than previously assessed. (This, incidentally, was the information value in the Deputy Governor's podcast: that data revisions in the national accounts released earlier in the month did not dislodge the RBA's view that trend growth in supply capacity is still only around 2%. It is well-understood that the internal Board members cannot front-run the whole Board, the way central banks with entirely internal members can.)

That "slightly" might point to one area where Board members' views differ. Also noteworthy is the addition of the word "material" in a sentence that also appeared in the February post-meeting statement without that qualifier: "There are material uncertainties about the outlook for domestic economic activity and inflation and the extent to which monetary policy is restrictive."

The other key reason for the decision centred on concerns about the inflationary impact of the Middle East conflict. The traditional thinking around the appropriate monetary response to a temporary supply shock such as a lift in oil prices was to look through it, so long as inflation expectations remained anchored. Near-term inflation expectations have already increased in response to the spike in fuel prices. However, the sparse evidence on more medium-term expectations of financial market participants suggests that these remain well-behaved, in Australia at least.

Yet the post-meeting statement highlighted the implications for (headline) inflation globally and domestically. In addition to the channel through inflation expectations, the post-meeting statement highlighted the possibility that an extended period of high energy prices and uncertainty would degrade supply capacity and thus be inflationary. Most other observers would see that scenario as a global recession risk with rather different policy implications. At the least, we struggle to imagine a scenario where the Strait of Hormuz remains closed for many months without sentiment and financial markets weakening considerably. The consequences for global growth in that scenario would be far from trivial, and not solely on the supply side.

It is possible that the RBA's assessment of the implications of the Middle East conflict will evolve once it has done modelling of the impact. The Governor revealed in the media conference that the RBA staff have not yet done this modelling. In the meantime, Westpac Economics' modelling and forecasts may provide a guide to possible outcomes.

The overall tone of the RBA's post-meeting (and indeed pre-meeting) communication remains broadly as it was in February. The RBA remains concerned that the domestic economy is too tight and demand growing too quickly. As we have highlighted in the past, their assessment rests heavily on a view that the Australian economy can only grow around 2% before hitting capacity constraints. This view, in turn, rests on relatively pessimistic assumptions about population and productivity. While this remains the RBA's view and inflation above target, rate hikes will remain on the table and our base case remains for a May rate hike.

Cliff Notes: fear overwhelms

Elliot Clarke, Head of International Economics
Mantas Vanagas, Senior Economist
Ryan Wells, Economist

Among the plethora of major central bank decisions this week, the RBA stood out from the pack, delivering a 25bp rate hike which took the cash rate to 4.10%. The widely expected decision was finely balanced in the end, the 5-4 split vote coming down to a difference in opinion over timing – the minority believing they had the opportunity to assess more data before acting.

In the press conference, Governor Bullock made clear that the decision was driven by the Board's assessment of the starting point for inflation, which is "already too high", and capacity developments, "the labour market ha[ving] tightened a little recently and [with] capacity pressures... slightly greater than previously assessed". The conflict in the Middle East is also adding to near-term price pressures and uncertainty. In this week's video update, Chief Economist Luci Ellis discusses these points in more detail. We continue to expect another 25bp hike in May, and the market sees a risk of further tightening before year end.

The RBA decision provided an interesting backdrop for the latest labour force survey which surprised on two fronts. Firstly, employment growth was firmer than expected, the 48.9k gain in February lifting the three-month average growth pace above its likely nadir, from 1.0%yr to 1.3%yr. Increased participation also lifted the unemployment rate to 4.3% in February after two months at 4.1%. We previously flagged the risk of a turnaround in participation lifting the unemployment rate. Assuming this turn persists in coming months, December/January will be seen as a display of weaker labour force participation temporarily compressing the unemployment rate rather than a meaningful 're-tightening'.

Before moving offshore, it is worth emphasising that, while higher fuel prices were "not the reason" for the RBA's March rate hike, the Middle East conflict was assessed to have skewed the risk profile for inflation to the upside, both in the near-term via global energy prices and "further out" should supply capacity be impacted, or inflation expectations increase materially. While the RBA have not yet modelled the impact in detail, our scenario analysis and deep-dive into Australia's exposure to energy price shocks provides the structure around our current thinking.

In the US, while the FOMC recognised the increase in global uncertainty since January, their focus remained on the domestic economy. GDP growth is now expected to be 2.4% in 2026 (prev. 2.3%) and, more significantly, 2.3% in 2027 (prev. 2.0%), then 2.1% in 2028 (prev. 1.9%), growth benefitting from productivity versus a stronger labour market. The consequences for inflation of tariffs and the Middle East conflict are, in contrast, seen as temporary, annual inflation revised up 0.3ppts to 2.7% for 2026 but only edged higher in 2027 to 2.2% and unchanged at 2.0% in 2028. Capacity constraints evident in the US economy (housing and energy are prime examples) continue to get little airplay in the FOMC's communications, so too the potential for second-round effects from energy and other commodities impacted by the conflict in the Middle East (fertiliser being an example). Inflation expectations are clearly not a concern for the FOMC, in stark contrast to the RBA's view for Australia.

The Committee's base case for the stance of policy therefore remains one cut in 2026 and another in 2027 to 3.1%, which is now members' best estimate of the US' longer run neutral rate. Westpac continues to believe that the FOMC are, at most, likely to cut once more in this cycle. The lack of private sector job creation spoken about in the press conference points to the timing of this cut being sooner than later. We have this decision pencilled in for June, albeit with low conviction. The more critical point here though is that, with economic and fiscal capacity constrained as well as potential upside risks from tariffs and commodities, term US yields are likely to rise from here.

“Westpac continues to believe that the FOMC are, at most, likely to cut once more in this cycle.”

The global energy price shock meanwhile brought greater unity among policymakers at the Bank of England. Having previously voted to cut Bank Rate by the narrowest of margins in February, in March the Monetary Policy Committee unanimously opted to maintain the policy rate at 3.75%. Both the policy summary and meeting minutes emphasised the ongoing conflict in the Middle East and its repercussions for UK inflation. The committee remains particularly vigilant for any indications of domestic inflationary pressures emerging through second-round effects, though they also acknowledged the implications for inflation from weakening economic activity. In the minutes, MPC members noted that the policy stance has shifted from considering rate cuts towards the possibility of hikes, with concerns about higher inflation outweighing downside risks to growth. Even the most dovish members now appear open to the prospect of a rate hike. Fearing the duration of the current conflict, the market has priced more than two hikes before year end.

Across in Europe, the ECB Governing Council unanimously voted to keep interest rates unchanged, with the deposit rate remaining at 2.0%. The policy statement highlighted that the outlook has become considerably more uncertain due to the Middle East conflict, yet maintained a balanced tone, noting that “monetary policy is well positioned to navigate this uncertainty”. President Lagarde argued during the press conference that the economy is in a stronger position compared to the 2022 energy shock, and the ECB is better equipped to assess the impact of shocks.

Previously, the ECB expected euro area inflation to be slightly below 2% in 2026 and 2027. Now, the ECB forecasts inflation to peak at 3.1%yr in Q2 and average 2.6%yr for this calendar year. However, these projections are based on financial market variables, including oil and gas prices, as of 11 March which current spot prices materially exceed. Helpfully, the ECB also released stress scenarios that assume more severe energy supply disruptions via the Strait of Hormuz and higher energy prices.

In their ‘adverse scenario’ – which appears closer to current experience – the ECB sees inflation at 3.5%yr for this year, while in the ‘severe scenario’ the ECB’s modelling suggest it could rise as high as 4.4%yr and remain well above target through 2027. The impact on GDP growth appears to be more manageable, but still significant. Under the baseline scenario, 2026 growth is expected to be 0.9%yr, down from 1.2%yr forecast three months ago. It would be 0.3ppt and 0.5ppt lower in the adverse and severe stress scenarios, respectively.

As for inflation, under severe, the hit to GDP extends through 2027. The lesson to take from this scenario analysis is not the point estimates themselves, but rather that the impact on both inflation and growth of a loss of supply becomes increasingly non-linear as the duration of the crisis lengthens, as second round and confidence effects are felt. The risk to inflation expectations means that most central banks will initially be focused on price uncertainty near term, then the downside risks for activity as they appear – more so in 2027 than 2026.

Focus turns to the RBNZ after data dump

Darren Gibbs
Senior Economist

The past week has seen a heavy data flow in New Zealand. In normal times, this data would have been of intense market interest, but developments in the Middle East are understandably the focus for domestic market participants at present. That doesn't mean that these reports are unimportant as they provide some insight as to how the economy was travelling prior to the conflict. Momentum – or lack thereof – may play a role in determining how the economy navigates the oil price shock. It will certainly influence how the RBNZ reacts to these developments.

Q4 GDP disappoints; other data mixed this week

The most dated report was this week's release of the national accounts for the December 2025 quarter. The production-based measure of GDP grew just 0.2%q/q – below our recently downwardly-revised estimate of 0.4%q/q. And with growth in the September quarter revised down by 0.2%ppts to 0.9%q/q, annual growth was a lower-than-expected 1.3% (up still up from 1.1% in the September quarter). The level of activity in the December quarter was 0.4ppts lower than the RBNZ had estimated in the February Monetary Policy Statement.

The economy grew modestly in Q4

The expenditure measure of GDP was also soft, up just 0.1%q/q. Household consumption fell by 0.1%q/q following a disappointingly flat September quarter, though this likely partly reflects ongoing issues with distinguishing between spending by households and spending by a growing level of overseas tourists. Business investment fell 3.1%q/q, led by lower spending on non-residential buildings, plant and machinery and transport equipment. Government spending and inventory accumulation made a positive contribution to growth.

Contributions to growth in final domestic demand

So, what do these figures mean for the RBNZ? At one level, they may ultimately prove to be of little more than historical interest, given the pall cast over the global economy in recent weeks by the Middle East conflict. But the RBNZ will likely conclude that while the New Zealand economy was regathering some momentum coming into this latest shock, it was still barely at a pace that would have halted the rise in unemployment or added to domestic inflation pressures. And mechanically, the RBNZ may modestly revise up its estimate of the size of the negative output gap that prevailed at the end of last year. Certainly, these figures make it even more likely that the RBNZ follows the textbook approach and attempts to look through the current oil price shock, while being mindful of the risks to inflation expectations should the period of high headline inflation be prolonged.

Turning to the external sector, a current account deficit of 3.7% of GDP was reported for 2025, down from 4.7% of GDP in 2024. The deficit was slightly wider than expected, with the investment income deficit widening in the December quarter (both due to weaker portfolio income credits and larger direct income debits). And given current developments in the Middle East, the deficit is likely to widen slightly due to the increase cost of imported fuel. However, at current levels, the current account deficit has ceased to be a major talking point, including for the credit ratings agencies.

Of more contemporary interest, following a disappointing January reading, Stats NZ reported a welcome 1.4%q/q rebound in consumer spending in February. The largest driver was a lift in grocery sales. We also saw a rise in discretionary spending areas, with sales of furnishings and other household durables up 1.3%/m, while spending in bars and restaurants increased 2.4%/m (spending by an increasing number of foreign tourists likely contributed to this growth).

Less positively, the Business NZ Performance of Services Index pointed to continued malaise across the broader services sector in February, with the headline index falling to a four-month low of 48.0. And somewhat disappointingly, MBIE's measure of job advertising was unchanged in February. Over coming months, we will be looking to see whether uncertainty created by the Middle East conflict interrupts the gradual uptrend in job advertising that has been evident since around the middle of last year.

Given the pressures that higher fuel prices will impose on household budgets, there are questions about whether the strength in consumer spending will be sustained, at least in the near term. This week's Westpac-McDermott Miller Consumer Confidence survey reported only a modest decline in sentiment over the past three months. However, our survey was in the field from early March and likely will not have fully captured the impact of the sharp increase in fuel prices that many respondents will have experienced in recent days. We will be interested to see whether there is a larger impact when the ANZ releases its monthly consumer confidence index at the end of next week.

The news from the housing market was a mixed bag. The number of house sales grew 1.5%/m in February. While initial counts tend to slightly understate sales completed late in the month, this followed a 4.5%/m decline in January and left sales at a similar level to a year earlier. House prices rose a seasonally-adjusted 0.6%/m – the largest increase in more than two years but median days to sell lengthened to a 14-month high of 48 days. Given the month-to-month volatility, we are hesitant to read much into a single month of data, but at least the growth in house prices is a step in the direction of our forecast for moderate house price growth this year.

Finally, this week's partial CPI data for February left us comfortable with our forecast that annual CPI inflation will drop back to 2.8% in the March quarter – a move back inside the 1-3% target band that now seems certain to be short-lived given the conflict-induced surge in fuel prices. Of note was a 0.1%/m fall in average housing rents – the first monthly decline in the 20-year history of the data. As with the soft trend in house prices, the weakness in rents reflects low population growth and the large numbers of properties available. Other CPI components were a mixed bag, with domestic airfares down but international airfares rising. Clearly both are now subject to significant upward pressure given the huge spike in the price of aviation fuel.

RBNZ Governor to provide key update next week

With the data out of the way, attention will now turn to how the RBNZ is interpreting recent economic data and developments in the Middle East. In advance of the next formal policy review on 8 April, Governor Anna Breman will have the opportunity to guide the market when she delivers a speech to a local business audience on Tuesday (24 March). While Breman had initially planned to focus on the steps being taken to modernise the payments system, considering recent developments the speech will now discuss the ongoing conflict in the Middle East, and the potential impacts of this evolving situation on the New Zealand economy. The speech will be published on the RBNZ website at 9am ahead of two other external engagement events that day (including one with external economists and analysts).

While the RBNZ's advisory states that this speech will not pre-empt the MPC's April Monetary Policy Review decision, at the very minimum, we expect that the Governor will lay out the framework the Bank will use to analyse the impact of the war on the New Zealand economy i.e., the main channels of influence and the short-term inflation and activity trade-offs that the MPC may need to consider when setting monetary policy. We think that there is a better than even chance that the Breman will go further and give a preliminary assessment of how the shock is impacting the MPC's assessment of the policy outlook.

If she does, we think that her comments will lean against the market's current pricing of close to three 25bps OCR hikes this year (which compares starkly with the RBNZ's February MPS indication of just a chance of a single 25bp hike). We expect Breman to acknowledge that headline inflation will be higher this year than forecast in February. And as any good central banker should, we expect that she will indicate that the RBNZ will be vigilant in looking for signs of any second-round impacts that might cause higher-than-target inflation to persist well into next year. However, crucially, we also expect Breman will argue that the New Zealand economy is operating with a large degree of spare capacity – including in the labour market – and that this “negative output gap” makes it less likely that a temporary oil price shock will lead to persistent inflation. And she may indicate an expectation that this negative output gap will remain for longer than the Bank estimated in February, given that higher oil prices and the current tightening of financial conditions will weigh on both trading partner and domestic economic growth.

Finally, we note that the RBNZ has announced this week that from the 8 April review onwards, all OCR decisions will now be followed by a press conference (rather than just those that follow the release of a Monetary Policy Statement). This is a welcome development to boost transparency – one that we had recommended in a paper last year – and is especially timely in the current fast-moving environment.

AUS: Q1 Westpac-ACCI Business Survey (index)

Mar 24, Last: 55.1

Conditions in the manufacturing sector improved significantly late last year. The Westpac-ACCI Actual Composite moved decisively into positive territory, up from 49.4 in Q3 to 55.1 in Q4, marking the strongest reading since mid-2024.

This improvement echoes trends in official data. There is a genuine upswing in consumer spending underway, coming off the back of an improvement in real household disposable incomes. Moreover, there were some early signs of a broader pick-up in investment across the economy.

The Q1 survey was in the field predominately before the surge in oil prices following the US-Israel strikes against Iran. The focus will be instead on how the recovery in manufacturing is tracking and how existing constraints around labour and materials are evolving.

Westpac-ACCI Composite Indexes

Actual & Expected, Seasonally Adjusted

AUS: February CPI (%yr)

Mar 25, Last: 3.8, WBC f/c: 3.8

Mkt f/c: 3.8, Range: 3.5 to 4.3

February is a seasonally softer month, our 0.1%_{mt} estimate translates to 0.3% in seasonally adjusted terms. This matches the 0.1% increase a year earlier holding the annual pace at 3.8%_{yr}.

Fuel prices were still falling through February and we estimate they were down -4.5% in the month adding to the seasonal -6.9% fall in holiday accommodation & travel. Offsetting this is the 5.4% increase in education, 0.4% increase in rents, a 0.5% gain in dwellings, a 0.9% increase in electricity and a 2.9% gain in garments.

We estimate a 0.3%_{mt} (0.34%) rise in the Trimmed Mean, holding the annual pace steady at 3.4%_{yr}. The the six-month annualised rate pick up to 3.6%_{yr} from 3.4%_{yr} but this is still less than 3.7% in December and the pace will ease from here.

Trimmed Mean Inflation

NZ: Q1 Westpac-McDermott Miller Employment Confidence (index)

Mar 25, Last: 93.8

Employment confidence improved modestly in December last year, although a perceived lack of job opportunities and low job security remained key concerns for New Zealanders. There have been signs in recent months of a stabilisation in job numbers and a modest lift in hiring, although the unemployment rate rose further to 5.4% in the December quarter. Note that as with the Consumer Confidence Index, this survey was conducted on 1-12 March, during the early stages of the US-Iran conflict.
