Final point of contact: securing AI yield through advanced testing socket

Solid growth ahead with robust capacity expansions

We initiate coverage of AI/HPC test socket leader WinWay with a Buy rating and NT $8,900 price target. WinWay's share price has corrected 43% from its April 2026 peak due to broader market de-rating and margin pressure associated with its Technoprobe partnership and capacity expansion. We believe the recent correction presents an opportunity to re-engage with WinWay's long-term growth trajectory, supported by three key drivers: 1) increasing content from AI GPUs, CPUs, and TPUs, 2) substantial capacity expansion, and 3) broader adoption of system-level testing (SLT). Together, these drivers should support revenue growth of 105%/74%/71% in 2026E/27E/28E. Importantly, WinWay's growth is increasingly being driven by higher socket content per device rather than semiconductor unit growth alone and the stock currently trades at 16x of our 2028E P/E vs historical average of 30x, potential to re-rate with GM recovery in the coming quarters. See our companion testing deep dive sector note.

Rising yields and utilisation to offset probe card dilution

Gross margin declined to 38.3% in Q226 from 45.3% in FY25, pressured by outsourced MEMS probes and expansion-related costs. While probe-card margins are unlikely to return to H125 levels of 48.9% given the Technoprobe partnership structure, we expect margin pressure to ease as utilization and yields improve, supporting GM recovery to 43.1% in 2027E and 44.7% in 2028E.

CPU and TPU as fundamental growth drivers

Beyond its core GPU socket franchise, WinWay is well positioned to benefit from the expansion of AI-oriented CPU and TPU platforms. We expect the company to supply sockets for AMD's Venice CPU, Nvidia's Vera CPU, and Google's TPU v8t and v9, and also Vera CPU probe cards, providing an additional growth engine beyond GPUs. WinWay is well positioned in this segment due to its historical collaboration with end customers and its proximity to the local Taiwanese test supply chain. We view AI CPUs and TPUs as an increasingly important contributor to test interface demand as compute architectures diversify in the agentic AI era, driving WinWay's socket and probe card sales growth of 132%/75%/69% and 94%/72%/78% in 2026E/27E/28E, respectively. We estimate CPU/TPU to contribute around 30%/20% of WinWay's 2027E sales.

Valuation: Initiate with a Buy rating, with price target of NT$8,900

We forecast EPS of NT$101.8 in 2026E, rising to NT$201.4/393.0 in 2027E/28E. Our NT $8,900 price target is based on 30x average 2027E-28E P/E, in line with the company's historical average. We believe this valuation is supported by WinWay's exposure to structural growth in AI/HPC testing, expanding socket content, and our long-term earnings CAGR estimate of 30%. We initiate with a Buy rating.

UBS Research THESIS MAP a guide to our thinking and what's where in this reportPIVOTAL QUESTIONS*Q: Will capacity constraints limit WinWay's growth in the next two to three years?

Near term, yes. Beyond 2026E, no. WinWay's current capacity remains constrained, but ongoing expansions should significantly increase output over the next two years. With new capacity coming online and the company shifting toward higher-value AI/HPC applications, including CPU probe cards, >10k-pin coaxial sockets and next-generation HyperSockets, we forecast revenue growth of 105%/74%/71% in 2026E/27E/28E, supported by capacity additions, rising AI/HPC content and expanding socket demand. We also expect operating leverage to improve as capacity scales and utilization increases, with OPM rising from 27.5% in 2026E to 32.1%/36.7% in 2027E/28E.

Q: Will WinWay's GM recover from Q226's 38.3%?

Yes. We view recent margin pressure as largely temporary. GM has been impacted by MEMS probe sourcing through Technoprobe and start-up costs associated with capacity expansion. Although margin dilution from probe card business is unlikely to unravel due to the MEMS partnership terms with Technoprobe, as new facilities ramp and yields improve, we expect profitability to recover gradually from the Q226 trough, with gross margin improving to 43.1% in 2027E and 44.7% in 2028E.

UBSVIEW

We initiate coverage of WinWay with a Buy rating and NT$8,900 price target. We believe the market is overly focused on near-term margin pressure and underappreciating WinWay's long-term growth outlook. Key drivers include 1) expanding content from AI GPUs, CPUs, and TPUs, 2) substantial capacity expansion, and 3) growing adoption of system-level testing (SLT). Together, these drivers should support revenue growth of 105%/74%/71% in 2026E/27E/28E.

EVIDENCE

TSMC and OSATs have been expanding their CoWoS capacities aggressively, from 40kwpm in 2024 to around 90 kwpm in 2025, and is tracking to expand CoWoS capacity toward 160kwpm in 2026E. TSMC also ramped up expanding N3/N2 capacity, with multiple product launches from customers' pipelines—Nvidia's Rubin, AMD's MI400 series/Venice CPU and other cloud ASICs—translating into foreseeable, strong testing demand as the majority are WinWay's customers. AI accelerator test times have increased meaningfully for new platforms. We expect continued front-end and advanced packaging investments to drive higher testing intensity and support long-term demand for advanced sockets and test interfaces.

WHAT'S PRICED IN?

WinWay's share price has corrected 43% from its April 2026 peak and currently trades at 16x of our 2028E P/E vs historical average of 30x. Our reverse DCF analysis indicates that the current market price implies only a 19% long-term sales CAGR vs our estimate of 25%, alongside long-term GM level of 32% vs our estimate of 45%. We see scope for re-rating.

COMPANY DESCRIPTION

WinWay was founded in 2001 in Kaoshiung, Taiwan. It is a semiconductor testing interface solutions provider, with final test socket as its main business segment. The company has high-end solutions for AI/HPC testing, providing final test/system-level test and burn-in test sockets and probe cards through its own made probes and partnership with Technoprobe.

Testing TAM expanding with IC complexity: leaders likely to outperform industry growth

Our central view is that testing content per AI accelerator is growing faster than semiconductor unit volumes, creating a multi-year expansion in testing TAM. We believe semiconductor testing is entering a period of structural growth as AI-driven chip complexity increases testing intensity across wafer, package and system levels. The industry's shift-left strategy, which moves more testing upstream in the semiconductor manufacturing process, is resulting in longer and more frequent test insertions. As cloud AI GPUs and ASICs become increasingly complex, additional testing is required to ensure functionality, performance and yield, while reducing defective parts per million (DPPM). More robust testing should improve deployment efficiency and lower the cost of operating AI infrastructure.

Semiconductor testing generally comprises four stages: wafer/chip probing (CP), final test (FT), system-level test (SLT), and burn-in. CP is conducted at the wafer-level before packaging, while FT, SLT, and burn-in occur after packaging. The below Figure 1 illustrates the semiconductor manufacturing flow.

Source: UBS

We estimate semiconductor testing historically accounts for ~1% of total semiconductor revenue. Within testing, consumables such as probe cards, sockets and interface boards represent ~10-15% of industry revenue. According to Yole, the probe card, socket and interface board markets should grow from US$3.8bn, US$2.3bn and US$1.7bn in 2026 to US$5.5bn, US$3.1bn and US$2.0bn by 2031, respectively.

Nonetheless, leaders within the testing sector will stand out among competition, with greater sales CAGR comparing to the industry.

As the leader of AI/HPC sockets, WinWay is set to deliver 2026-31E socket sales CAGR of 33%, underpinned by robust demand for final test and system-level test, with test content and test times rising which each iteration of new AI accelerators/CPU, more sockets and equipment will be needed in order to increase the throughput.

- Strong accelerator/CPU roadmap to support growth. Robust testing demand can also be inferred from AI accelerator/CPU roadmaps of Nvidia, AMD, Google, alongside tester capacity expansions by Advantest.
- Capacity expansion underpinning future strength. WinWay's socket pin capacity expansion is expected by the company to support this exceptional sales growth from 3.5mn pins per month at year-end 2025 to 6mn currently, reaching 9mn by year-end 2026 and 14mn by year-end 2027 through expansions in Renwu, Kaohsiung. By 2027, approximately 60% of pogo-pin requirements should be internally sourced, strengthening both supply security and margins.

- Probe card business to rise from smaller base. Its probe card business is also set to benefit from the shift-left trend for high-end AI/HPC probe cards. WinWay leverages its existing customers' demand in addition to their MEMS partnership with Technoprobe, as we forecast WinWay's probe card sales to rise from a low base, with a 33% 2026-31E sales CAGR.

WinWay is expanding capacity rapidly to capture this growing TAM. Industry test interface suppliers are expanding capacity aggressively to meet rising AI and HPC demand. As advanced semiconductors require higher-performance probe cards, sockets and interface boards, capacity additions are becoming increasingly important to support growth across both wafer-level and package-level testing.

We believe WinWay is well positioned to gain share within the high-end AI/HPC test interface market. Taiwanese suppliers benefit from their proximity to leading fabless customers and the growing preference for localised supply chains, particularly for advanced testing applications where responsiveness and engineering support are critical. Against a backdrop of tight industry supply, WinWay announced significant capacity expansion plans over the next two to three years.

WinWay's capacity is expected by the company to increase from 3.5mn pins per month at year-end 2025 to 6mn currently, reaching 9mn by year-end 2026 and 14mn by year-end 2027 through expansions in Renwu, Kaohsiung. By 2027, approximately 60% of pogo-pin requirements should be internally sourced, strengthening both supply security and margins.

We estimate these capacity additions will support revenue growth of 105%/74%/71% in 2026E/27E/28E.

Source: Company data

For WinWay, this growth opportunity is substantial, as the capacity expansions for its socket pins will satisfy around 60% of its own pogo pin demand in 2027E, we estimate socket sales will likely contribute for around NT$163 of EPS in 2027E and to further expand to NT$307 in 2028E. This paves the way for substantial share gaining opportunity for WinWay for AI/HPC sockets as we believe there are advantages to have footprint within Taiwan, where there's already an established testing ecosystem with testing providers such as ASE/SPIL/KYEC, and handler providers such as Hon Precision, all positioned locally in Taiwan to provide around the clock service and support for AI/HPC customers.

We see industry capacity tightness to support socket pin ASP growth, as we forecast pin ASP to grow from US$2.0 in 2026E to US$2.5 in 2027E and US$3.0 in 2028E. We believe WinWay's capacity expansion creates a significant growth opportunity with a better margin profile. By 2027E, approximately 60% of pogo pin demand should be internally sourced, improving both supply security and profitability. We estimate sockets could contribute around NT$123 of EPS in 2027E, rising to NT$261 in 2028E. Combined with its expanding capacity, strong customer relationships and proximity to Taiwan's semiconductor testing ecosystem, including ASE/SPIL, KYEC and major handler suppliers, WinWay is well positioned to gain share in the AI/HPC socket market.

The AI era has materially increased the value of semiconductor testing. Compared with traditional mobile and automotive chips, AI accelerators incorporate larger compute dies, more advanced nodes, chiplet architectures, advanced packaging technologies, multiple I/O dies, and increasing HBM content. These factors drive higher-value test consumables, including advanced MEMS probe cards, multilayer interface boards, and next-generation sockets designed to support higher pin counts, thermal loading, and power delivery requirements.

Capacity expansion by test interface vendors is ultimately supported by continued investment throughout the advanced packaging ecosystem, from providers such as TSMC, ASE, Intel, and Amkor. During the Q226 earnings calls, TSMC raised its recent 2026 capex from US$52-56bn to US$60-64bn and ASE raised its 2026 capex from US $8.5bn to US$10.5bn, with both companies citing robust demand supporting capex raise, we believe capex for the next two years will be even higher than 2026, indicating continuous growth in future years. With advanced packaging technologies getting significantly more complex and with larger form factor, illustrated by the upcoming ramp of both TSMC's CoPoS (chip-on-panel-on-substrate) and Intel's EMIB-T (embedded multi-die interconnect bridge) packaging technologies, test interface solution providers will benefit with more value added consumables (see our CoPoS vs EMIB-T deep dive).

Source: UBS

New iterations of semiconductors, especially for AI/HPC applications, are set to increase in both front-end wafer fabrication advancements and back-end packaging complexities with each iterations (i.e. Nvidia's roadmap from Blackwell to Rubin to Feynman or Google's TPU roadmap from v7 to v8 to v9). This trend is evident with TSMC's front-end and TSMC, Intel, and OSAT's back-end advanced packaging capacity expansions. For front-end, we see industry N3 capacity expanding from 156kwpm in year end 2025 to 224/283/293kwpm in year end 2026E/27E/28E, and N2 capacity from 47kwpm in year-end 2025 to 111/200/312kwpm in year end 2026E/27E/28E. For back-end, we are seeing industry CoWoS capacity to rise from 90kwpm in 2025 to 160kwpm in 2026E and further expand to 270kwpm in 2027E.

Final-test, system-level test, and burn-in content should continue to increase as AI accelerators become larger, more power-hungry and more complex. Rising thermal design power and packaging complexity increase validation requirements, driving longer test times and higher demand for test equipment to prevent testing from becoming a production bottleneck. This is where WinWay's sockets comes into play—as high-end chips with 2.5D/3D/3.5D packaging requires intricate FT sockets to handle the high thermal design power (TDP) and high data rates of up to 224G during the FT process for reliable test results.

Source: UBS estimates

While architectural changes can affect test requirements for individual product generations, we expect the long-term trend of rising testing content to remain intact. For example, Nvidia's Rubin Ultra adopts a simpler package structure than previously expected, from a 4-die structure to a 2-die structure and Rubin Ultra HBM de-spec from HBM4E 12-Hi to initially use HBM4 8-Hi and upgrade to HBM4E 8-Hi at the latter stages, which may moderate near-term test growth. However, future products such as Nvidia's Feynman are expected to reintroduce greater package complexity, with a four-GPU per package structure. More importantly, any reduction in test time can be offset by higher production volumes, making throughput requirements equally important for testing demand.

We expect test interface content growth to outpace unit growth. For instance, test socket's ASP directly correlates with its pin counts, with the addition of 20-30% more pins inside the sockets, socket ASP can grow 20-30% or more as the socket might require significant cooling capabilities as the TDP of the DUT rises with its larger form factor. Unlike prior semiconductor cycles, much of the current demand is driven by rising test interface content per device rather than unit growth alone.

Robust growth drivers across semiconductor testing

We believe WinWay is set to benefit from several semiconductor testing growth drivers and capture the AI induced, expanding testing TAM. We see three main growth drivers for WinWay: 1) AI accelerators (GPU + TPU), 2) agentic AI driven CPU demand, and 3) shift-left testing trend. Below we list the three main growth drivers in detail.

Accelerators still in focus with TPU as another significant growth driver

Nvidia has been the primary driver of testing content growth over the past several years, benefiting the entire semiconductor testing supply chain. We expect this trend to continue as GPU architectures evolve from Blackwell to Rubin and then to Feynman, with increasing process node complexity, larger package sizes and more advanced packaging technologies driving higher testing value per device.

We believe Nvidia should remain a major contributor to WinWay, with GPUs continuing to serve as their core growth engine. We estimate WinWay's socket share could improve from a roughly 50/50 split with Smiths Interconnect in prior generations to 60/40 with Rubin. Nvidia currently accounts for approximately 50% of WinWay's revenue. Both Nvidia GPUs and Google TPUs increase testing demand through higher content per device rather than unit growth alone.

Beyond Nvidia, Google's TPU roadmap represents a significant incremental growth opportunity. In our view, WinWay should benefit as the socket supplier for both TPU v8t and the next-generation TPU v9 platform. We believe MediaTek's increasing share gain for Google TPUs will also benefit the local Taiwanese test interface supply chain. We estimate TPU to contribute to around 20% of WinWay 2027E sales.

We view TPU v9 as a particularly attractive opportunity given its large four-die package architecture based on Intel's EMIB-T packaging technology, which should drive higher testing content. We estimate production of 4mn TPU v8t units in 2027E, followed by 2.3mn TPU v9 packages (9.2mn dies) and an additional 2mn TPU v8t units in 2028E. Importantly, while EMIB-T packaging is expected to be performed in Malaysia, we believe the majority of advanced testing value should remain within the Taiwanese testing ecosystem. Leading testing providers, including ASE and KYEC, maintain substantial testing operations across Taiwan and Southeast Asia, supporting continued participation by Taiwanese test interface suppliers. See our latest MediaTek report and EMIB-T deep dive.

CPU business as a supplemental catalyst for test interface companies in the agentic world

We believe semiconductor test interface are an underappreciated beneficiary of the emerging agentic AI ecosystem. UBS estimates the CPU market will expand to US $170bn by 2030E from US$31bn in 2025 and US$71bn in 2027E, driven by rising deployment of AI infrastructure. As CPU-to-GPU ratios increasingly approach 1:1 in AI clusters, demand for testing interfaces should expand alongside CPU volumes. TSMC is the main CP test provider in the industry, with probe card suppliers aiding its massive demand by supplying probes, such as TSMC's GPU probe cards supported by Technoprobe's probes. However, with capacity now becoming scarce with strong front and back-end demand, TSMC is outsourcing its CP business to ASE and KYEC, further broadening the testing supply chain. This is where new probe card vendors come in—smaller probe card players in the past, such as WinWay, now has the opportunity to gain significant, non-GPU share from TSMC, as they have MEMS probe capabilities (WinWay's MEMS probe are from its strategic partnership with Technoprobe) and has a long established relationship with the fabless companies such as Nvidia via supplying non-probe card consumables such as sockets. Of which, CPU projects has become the main area for WinWay to expand their footprint.

We expect WinWay to benefit from the ramp of Nvidia's ARM-based Vera CPU and Google's ARM-based Axion CPU in 2026E-27E. WinWay is positioned to supply sockets and probe cards for Vera and sockets for Axion. Additional upside could come from AMD's Venice CPU, where WinWay is well positioned. For WinWay, CPU-related demand could account for approximately 30% of sales in 2026E-27E. Importantly, CPU programmes diversify exposure beyond AI GPUs and provide a second structural growth driver for test interface suppliers.

Shift-left igniting secular growth for chip probing

The industry's adoption of shift-left testing should drive a multi-year structural growth opportunity for chip probing (CP) and its supply chain. As advanced packaging costs rise and AI accelerators become increasingly complex, semiconductor manufacturers are placing greater emphasis on identifying known-good dies (KGD) before packaging. The test shift-left trend will drive structural AI/HPC probe card and test consumables demand, with increasing test interface content as test insertions and test time increase. WinWay should also benefit through its partnership with Technoprobe, with probe card revenue growth remaining robust at 94%/72% in 2026E/27E following 161%/260% growth in 2024/25.

The economics of advanced packaging reinforce this trend. Heterogeneous integration, chiplet architectures and 2.5D/3D packaging significantly increase package value, while defects identified late in the manufacturing process can lead to substantial scrap costs. To mitigate this risk, foundries and OSATs such as TSMC and ASE employ distributed testing flows incorporating KGD, known-good-stack (KGS) and assembly test screening, to catch defects before the components enter a multi-week packaging cycle (>2 weeks for CoW and 2 weeks for oS). The importance of these tests rises as AI clusters become increasingly dependent on component reliability and low defective-parts-per-million (DPPM) rates. Given the multiplicative yield degradation, a 300bps yield decline at just one manufacturing stage (e.g. dropping from 99.5% to 96.5%) reduces overall integrated four-stage yield from 98.0% to 95.0%; on a 500,000 unit ramp at US $10,000 per unit, this 3% scrap delta translates into around US$150m in unrecoverable losses given >6-month manufacturing lead times.

At the same time, rising chip power consumption is increasing the technical difficulty of wafer-level testing. As chip thermal design power scales beyond 1,000W and power density is expected by the industry to surge another 8x by 2030, traditional wafer-level chip probe (WLCP) encounters severe physical bottlenecks. Finer probe pitches and higher power densities increase the risk of overheating, probe needle burnout and yield degradation, creating demand for more advanced probing and thermal-control solutions.

WinWay was founded in 2001 in Kaohsiung, Taiwan, and is a leading provider of semiconductor testing interface solutions, with test sockets representing its core business. The company focuses on advanced AI/HPC applications, supplying sockets for final test (FT), system-level test (SLT) and burn-in, as well as cobra probe cards and partnership with Technoprobe for MEMS probe cards.

WinWay's business is primarily divided into two segments:

- Test socket: Sockets are WinWay's largest revenue contributor. The company supplies a broad range of testing sockets, including coaxial, PoP/plastic and burn-in sockets, serving applications ranging from consumer electronics to high-performance computing.
- Coaxial socket: utilised as the mainstream option for nearly all AI/HPC chips, as traditional sockets are near its physical limits. Coaxial sockets need to handle data rates of up to 224G for high speed transmission and high chip TDP during the FT process.
- HyperSocket: a rubber-silicone like layer called elastomer are placed on top of the pogo pins, these elastomer pins causes zero damage to the chips being tested under high contact forces. WinWay's next generation HyperSocket technology utilises elastomers to provide a softer contact between the DUT and the pogo pins, avoiding damage to solder ball. This structure significantly enhances spring probe's lifetime, reduces cleaning frequency, and achieves maximum production efficiency. We estimate it will contribute around 5% of sales in 2027E with a 20-30% ASP premium as compared to standard coaxial socket.
- Probe cards: WinWay historically supplies cobra probe cards (vertical probe cards), but with the company announcing their five-year probe supply deal with Technoprobe for MEMS probe in December 2025, they are now one of Nvidia Vera CPU's main probe card suppliers.

AI accelerators are pushing socket requirements beyond 10,000 pins, making coaxial sockets the industry standard for leading-edge AI/HPC devices. These sockets must support transmission speeds of up to 224G while handling significantly higher thermal design power (TDP) during testing.

Elastomer technology is increasingly being adopted alongside spring-probe (pogo-pin) architectures to reduce chip damage and improve contact reliability. WinWay's next-generation HyperSocket integrates elastomer materials between the DUT and spring probes, improving probe lifetime, reducing cleaning requirements and enhancing production efficiency. We believe HyperSocket could become an important differentiator as next-generation AI accelerators demand higher pin counts, bandwidth and thermal performance. We estimate HyperSocket could contribute approximately 5% of WinWay's revenue in 2027E while carrying a 20-30% ASP premium versus conventional coaxial sockets. The transition toward larger AI packages, higher pin counts and faster data-transfer speeds should continue to increase socket content per device. We expect this trend to support long-term growth in the socket market, with technology leaders such as WinWay well positioned to gain share through next-generation solutions including HyperSocket.

Beyond its existing product portfolio, WinWay is developing next-generation technologies including CPO electrical test sockets and liquid-cooled sockets for future high TDP AI accelerators, reinforcing its position within the AI/HPC testing ecosystem.

WinWay's competitive advantages are its 1) technology leadership with coaxial socket and HyperSocket, 2) proximity to the semiconductor testing value chain in Taiwan, and 3) historical relationship with key AI companies such as Nvidia and AMD. We believe these advantages may allow WinWay to capture significant upside in the growing semiconductor testing TAM driven by cloud AI proliferation, and gain share across its competition such as Smiths Interconnect for AI and HPC applications.

Compared with the probe card market, the socket industry is more fragmented. Competition include:

- WinWay (6515.TW): A major share gainer in AI/HPC sockets, with strong exposure to Nvidia and AMD. The company specializes in high-performance coaxial sockets and is developing its next-generation HyperSocket platform. It is also expanding into probe cards through its partnership with Technoprobe.
- Leeno (058470.KQ): Vertically integrated supplier focused on smartphone AP and memory sockets.
- ISC (095340.KQ): Memory socket supplier with elastomer expertise.
- Smiths Interconnect (Acquired by Molex): A key player in AI/HPC socket industry, with its DaVinci coaxial sockets able to support high frequency connectivity testing.
- Yamaichi (6941.T): Japanese socket supplier with substantial automotive exposure.
- Yokowo (6800.T): Major provider of contact probes and socket pins.
- Cohu (COHU.O): Broad test-solutions provider spanning ATE, handlers and sockets, with high exposure to automotive, industrial and consumer applications.

WinWay's margin is set to recover in 2027E/28E

Company GM hit a trough in Q226, at 38.3%. We view recent margin pressure as largely temporary. GM has been impacted by MEMS probe sourcing through Technoprobe (probe card GM now below 40% and dilutive to >50% coaxial socket GM) and start-up costs associated with WinWay's rapid capacity expansion. During the early part of 2025, WinWay's GM was high at 48.9% in H125, with more cobra probe cards (60% GM) in mix with solid pogo pin and socket yield. With MEMS probe card now accounting for more than 70% of probe card revenue and GM at around low to mid 30%, margin dilution from probe card business is unlikely to unravel for GM to return to above 45% in the near term due to the MEMS partnership terms with Technoprobe. However, we expect that as new facilities ramp and yields improve, profitability to recover gradually from the Q226 trough. We see GM improving to 43.1% in 2027E and 44.7% in 2028E.

Appendix: What are semiconductor test sockets?

Semiconductor test socket are electro-mechanical interface that are used post chip probing and chip packaging process to test the functionality of the chips. Sockets are placed onto load boards on top of testers during the final test/system level test processes. Handlers will place the chips onto the sockets, and pins inside the sockets will enable the testers to read the signals from the device under test (DUT, i.e. the packaged chips), with tester signals fan out from beneath the PCB load board.

Source: UBS

As AI accelerators become larger and more complex, socket requirements continue to increase. High-end sockets typically comprise a socket housing, alignment plate, integrated thermal-control components and contact elements that connect the DUT to the tester. Spring probes (pogo pins) are the most common choice for HPC sockets, with high durability, individual probe replacement flexibility, and consistent contact force. FT and SLT sockets account for more than 70% of the total socket market, with burn-in sockets representing the remainder.

WHAT'S PRICED IN?

WinWay is trading at NT$6,130 as of 6 Oct 2026

Source: LSEG, UBS estimates

Despite a 120% YTD share-price increase, WinWay remains 43% below its April 2026 peak and trades at only 16x our 2028E P/E. We believe the market remains overly focused on near-term GM pressure while underestimating the company's multi-year growth opportunity. Our reverse DCF analysis indicates that the current market price implies only a 19% long-term sales CAGR vs our estimate of 25%, alongside long-term GM level of 32% vs our estimate of 45%.

We believe investors are not fully reflecting three key drivers:

1) CPU and TPU opportunities are becoming increasingly meaningful.

Beyond its core GPU socket franchise, WinWay is positioned to benefit from Nvidia's Vera CPU, AMD's Venice CPU, and Google's TPU. These programmes should broaden revenue sources and create an additional demand driver for high-end sockets and probe cards.

2) Larger AI packages are driving higher socket content per device.

As AI accelerators adopt larger form factors, higher pin counts and greater power consumption, socket complexity and ASPs continue to rise. We expect socket content growth to outpace semiconductor unit growth, creating a structural tailwind for WinWay.

3) Capacity ramp and margin recovery are not fully reflected.

Following substantial capacity expansion, we expect revenue growth of 105%/74%/71% in 2026E/27E/28E. At the same time, we forecast gross margin recovery from 38.3% in Q226 to 43.1%/44.7% in 2027E/28E as utilization and yields improve.

Our NT$8,900 price target is based on our valuation for WinWay at 30x average 2027E-28E P/E, in-line with its historical average of 30x and underpinned by a 30% 2027-31E earnings CAGR. Comparing with historical NTM peer average PE of roughly 25x (currently trading at 39x NTM PE), we believe WinWay deserves to trade at a premium given its leadership in AI/HPC sockets, expanding CPU and TPU exposure, and our long-term earnings CAGR estimate.

UPSIDE/DOWNSIDE SPECTRUM

WinWay is trading at NT
$6,130 as of 6 Oct 2026

Value drivers (2027/28E)	Test socket sales growth	Probe card sales growth	GM %
NT$10,000 upside	90%/87%	87%/93%	45.1%/49.7%
NT$8,900 base	75%/69%	72%/78%	43.1%/44.7%
NT$4,000 downside	35%/34%	32%/38%	38.1%/39.7%

Source: UBS estimates

Risk to the current share price is skewed (1.8:1) to the upside

UPSIDE (NT$10,000): Our upside scenario reflects stronger than expected market share gain among Nvidia's Rubin sockets and Vera CPU probe card strength, with strong TPU v9 shipment in 2028E, forming 90%/87% YoY test socket sales growth and 87%/93% probe card sales growth in 2027/28E, translating to higher sales growth of 82%/75% in 2027/28E and steeper GM recovery in 2027/28E.

BASE (NT$8,900): Our price target of NT$8,900 is based on 30x average 2027-28E PE. We expect an earnings CAGR of 30% in 2027-31E. With extending FT time and larger form factor coaxial sockets, we see these growth drivers driving YoY sales growth from a high base of 105% in 2026E to 74%/71% YoY in 2027/2028E, with OPM of 32.1%/36.7% in 2027/28E.

DOWNSIDE (NT$4,000): Our downside scenario reflects slow GM recovery of 38.1%/39.7% in 2027/28E, with weaker growth for both socket and probe card businesses for slower capacity ramp up, leading to YoY sales growth of 22.3%/34.8% in 2027/28E, respectively.

COMPANY DESCRIPTION

WinWay was founded in 2001 in Kaoshiung, Taiwan. It is a semiconductor testing interface solution provider, with final test sockets as its main business segment. The company has high-end solutions for AI/HPC testing, providing final test/system-level test and burn-in test sockets and probe cards through its own-made probes and a partnership with Technoprobe.

Industry Outlook

New iterations of semiconductors, especially for AI / HPC applications, are set to increase in both front-end wafer fabrication advancements and back-end packaging complexities with each iterations. With the industry now moves to utilize "shift left", chip probing and its relevant supply chain will be key beneficiaries of this trend which we believe will unlock multi-year, secular growth trends.

Company Description

WinWay was founded in 2001 in Kaoshiung, Taiwan. It is a semiconductor testing interface solution provider, with final test sockets as its main business segment. The company has high-end solutions for AI/HPC testing, providing final test/system-level test and burn-in test sockets and probe cards through its own-made probes and a partnership with Technoprobe.

Valuation Method and Risk Statement

We value WinWay based on PE methodology.

Risks for the semis industry:

- Geopolitical uncertainties: Geopolitical uncertainties including tariffs and more export control could negatively impact semis cycle, and a downturn would lead to slower demand in the overall market and moderating capacity expansion.
- Meaningful deceleration of new technology development: Slower demand and less investment are expected if there is meaningful deceleration of new technology development such as Cloud AI, autonomous driving, etc.
- Rising utility cost: Larger-than-expected utility cost increases would further pressure profitability. Rising utility costs in Taiwan have negatively impacted margins for Taiwan tech companies.

Company risks:

- Faster- or slower-than-expected CoWoS capacity expansion: This could result in WinWay gaining/losing socket/probe card orders from major end customers, foundries, and OSATs.
- Competitors achieving technological advancement: Potential risk of competition (from either local or foreign companies) achieving technological advancements could result in WinWay losing market share from major end customers, foundries and OSATs.
- Better- or worse-than-expected AI growth: Better- or worse-than-expected AI growth could lead to a ramp-up or a slowdown of equipment orders from major foundries and OSATs to WinWay, affecting long-term revenue growth potential.
- Slowdown or delay of new technological advancement: A potential slowdown or delay of the rollout for technological advancements for technologies such as SoIC, CoPoS, and CPO, would limit future socket/probe card orders.
- Increase of raw material costs: Rising raw material costs may directly impact WinWay's margins for socket/probe card shipments.

Quantitative Research Review

UBS Global Research publishes a quantitative assessment of its analysts' responses to certain questions about the likelihood of an occurrence of a number of short term factors in a product known as the 'Quantitative Research Review'. Source: UBS. Rating allocations are as of 30 September 2026.

1:Percentage of companies under coverage globally within the 12-month rating category.

2:Percentage of companies within the 12-month rating category for which investment banking (IB) services were provided within the past 12 months.

KEY DEFINITIONS:Forecast Stock Return (FSR) is defined as expected percentage price appreciation plus gross dividend yield over the next 12 months. In some cases, this yield may be based on accrued dividends. Market Return Assumption (MRA) is defined as the one-year local market interest rate plus 5% (a proxy for, and not a forecast of, the equity risk premium). Under Review (UR) Stocks may be flagged as UR by the analyst, indicating that the stock's price target and/or rating are subject to possible change in the near term, usually in response to an event that may affect the investment case or valuation. Equity Price Targets have an investment horizon of 12 months.

EXCEPTIONS AND SPECIAL CASES:UK and European Investment Fund ratings and definitions are: Buy: Positive on factors such as structure, management, performance record, discount; Neutral: Neutral on factors such as structure, management, performance record, discount; Sell: Negative on factors such as structure, management, performance record, discount. Core Banding Exceptions (CBE): Exceptions to the standard +/-6% bands may be granted by the Investment Review Consultation (IRC). Factors considered by the IRC include the stock's volatility and the credit spread of the respective company's debt. As a result, stocks deemed to be very high or low risk may be subject to higher or lower bands as they relate to the rating. When such exceptions apply, they will be identified in the Company Disclosures table in the relevant research piece.

UBS Global Research Disclaimer

This document has been prepared by UBS Securities Pte. Ltd., Taipei Branch, an affiliate of UBS AG. UBS AG, its subsidiaries, branches and affiliates, including former Credit Suisse AG and its subsidiaries, branches and affiliates are referred to herein as "UBS".

Any opinions expressed in this document may change without notice and are only current as of the date of publication. Different areas, groups, and personnel within UBS may produce and distribute separate research products independently of each other. For example, research publications from UBS CIO are produced by UBS Global Wealth Management. UBS Global Research is produced by UBS Investment Bank. Research methodologies and rating systems of each separate research organization may differ, for example, in terms of investment recommendations, investment horizon, model assumptions, and valuation methods. As a consequence, except for certain economic forecasts (for which UBS CIO and UBS Global Research may collaborate), investment recommendations, ratings, price targets, and valuations provided by each of the separate research organizations may be different, or inconsistent. You should refer to each relevant research product for the details as to their methodologies and rating system. Not all clients may have access to all products from every organization. Each research product is subject to the policies and procedures of the organization that produces it.

This document is provided solely to recipients who are expressly authorized by UBS to receive it. If you are not so authorized you must immediately destroy the document.

UBS Global Research is provided to our clients through UBS Neo, and in certain instances, UBS.com and any other system or distribution method specifically identified in one or more communications distributed through UBS Neo or UBS.com (each a system) as an approved means for distributing UBS Global Research. It may also be made available through third party vendors and distributed by UBS and/or third parties via e-mail or alternative electronic means.

All UBS Global Research is available on UBS Neo. Please contact your UBS sales representative if you wish to discuss your access to UBS Neo. Where UBS Global Research refers to "UBS Evidence Lab Inside" or has made use of data provided by UBS Evidence Lab and you would like to access that data please contact your UBS sales representative. UBS Evidence Lab data is available on UBS Neo. The level and types of services provided by UBS Global Research and UBS Evidence Lab to a client may vary depending upon various factors such as a client's individual preferences as to the frequency and manner of receiving communications, a client's risk profile and investment focus and perspective (e.g., market wide, sector specific, long-term, short-term, etc.), the size and scope of the overall client relationship with UBS Global Research and UBS Evidence Lab and legal and regulatory constraints. UBS HOLT and UBS Pharma Values are offerings of UBS Global Research. HOLT Lens is a corporate performance platform offering that provides an objective accounting-led framework for comparing and valuing companies and is available to clients of UBS Global Research; for further details and pricing please contact your UBS Sales representative. In particular, HOLT has a variety of warranted prices based on the scenario chosen; please mail UBS Securities LLC, 11 Madison Avenue, New York, NY 10010, USA, Attention: Investment Research, if you are interested in the warranted price on a particular company, again subject to commercial considerations. UBS Pharma Values is an analytical tool that involves the creation of a number of individual product net present value calculations, based on published forecasts of sales for pharmaceuticals, and is available to clients of UBS Global Research; for further details and pricing please contact your UBS Sales representative. For all other specific disclaimers, please see <https://www.ubs.com/disclosures>.

When you receive UBS Global Research through a system, your access and/or use of such UBS Global Research is subject to this UBS Global Research Disclaimer and to the UBS Neo Platform Use Agreement (the "Neo Terms") together with any other relevant terms of use governing the applicable System.

When you receive UBS Global Research via a third party vendor, e-mail or other electronic means, you agree that use shall be subject to this UBS Global Research Disclaimer, the Neo Terms and where applicable the UBS Investment Bank terms of business (<https://www.ubs.com/global/en/investment-bank/regulatory.html>) and to UBS's Terms of Use/Disclaimer (<https://www.ubs.com/global/en/legalinfo2/disclaimer.html>). In addition, you consent to UBS processing your personal data and using cookies in accordance with our Privacy Statement (<https://www.ubs.com/global/en/legalinfo2/privacy.html>) and cookie notice (<https://www.ubs.com/global/en/legal/privacy/users.html>).

If you receive UBS Global Research, whether through a System or by any other means, you agree that you shall not copy, revise, amend, create a derivative work, provide to any third party, or in any way commercially exploit any UBS research provided via UBS Global Research or otherwise, and that you shall not extract data from any research or estimates provided to you via UBS Global Research or otherwise, without the prior written consent of UBS. You agree not to use UBS Global Research in any artificial intelligence system, without the prior written consent of UBS.

In certain circumstances you may receive UBS Global Research otherwise than in the capacity of a client of UBS and you understand and agree that under these circumstances (i) the UBS Global Research is provided to you for information purposes only; (ii) for the purposes of receiving it you are not intended to be and will not be treated as a "client" of UBS for any legal or regulatory purpose; (iii) the UBS Global Research must not be relied on or acted upon for any purpose; and (iv) such content is subject to the relevant disclaimers that follow.

This document is for distribution only as may be permitted by law. It is not directed to, or intended for distribution to or use by, any person or entity who is a citizen or resident of or located in any locality, state, country or other jurisdiction where such distribution, publication, availability or use would be contrary to law or regulation or would subject UBS to any registration or licensing requirement within such jurisdiction.

This document is a general communication and is educational in nature; it is not an advertisement nor is it a solicitation or an offer to buy or sell any financial instruments or to participate in any particular trading strategy. Nothing in this document constitutes a representation that any investment strategy or recommendation is suitable or appropriate to an investor's individual circumstances or otherwise constitutes a personal recommendation. By providing this document, none of UBS or its representatives has any responsibility or authority to provide or have provided investment advice in a fiduciary capacity or otherwise. Investments involve risks, and investors should exercise prudence and their own judgment in making their investment decisions. None of UBS or its representatives is suggesting that the recipient or any other person take a specific course of action or any action at all. The recipient should carefully read this document in its entirety and not draw inferences or conclusions from the rating alone. By receiving this document, the recipient acknowledges and agrees with the intended purpose described above and further disclaims any expectation or belief that the information constitutes investment advice to the recipient or otherwise purports to meet the investment objectives of the recipient. The financial instruments described in the document may not be eligible for sale in all jurisdictions or to certain categories of investors.

Options, structured derivative products and futures (including OTC derivatives) are not suitable for all investors. Trading in these instruments is considered risky and may be appropriate only for sophisticated investors. Prior to buying or selling an option, and for the complete risks relating to options, you must receive a copy of "The Characteristics and Risks of Standardized Options." You may read the document at <https://www.theocc.com/publications/risks/riskchap1.jsp> or ask your salesperson for a copy. Various theoretical explanations of the risks associated with these instruments have been published. Supporting documentation for any claims, comparisons, recommendations, statistics or other technical data will be supplied upon request. Past performance is not necessarily indicative of future results. Transaction costs may be significant in option strategies calling for multiple purchases and sales of options, such as spreads and straddles. Because of the importance of tax considerations to many options transactions, the investor considering options should consult with his/her tax advisor as to how taxes affect the outcome of contemplated options transactions.

Mortgage and asset-backed securities may involve a high degree of risk and may be highly volatile in response to fluctuations in interest rates or other market conditions. Foreign currency rates of exchange may adversely affect the value, price or income of any security or related instrument referred to in the document. For investment advice, trade execution or other enquiries, clients should contact their local sales representative.

UBS notes that no globally accepted framework or definition (legal, regulatory or otherwise) currently exists, nor is there a market consensus as to what constitutes an "ESG" (Environmental, Social or Governance) or an equivalent-label, or as to what precise attributes are required for the Information (as defined below) to be defined as ESG or equivalently-labelled. Any information, data or other content including from a third party source contained, referred to herein or used for whatsoever purpose by UBS or a third party ("Information"), in relation to any actual or potential ESG objective, issue or consideration is not intended to be relied upon for ESG classification, regulatory regime or industry initiative purposes ("ESG Regimes"). Nothing in these materials is intended to convey, suggest or indicate that UBS considers or represents any product, service, person or body mentioned in these materials as meeting or qualifying for any ESG classification, labelling or similar standards that may exist under the ESG Regimes. UBS has not conducted any assessment of compliance with ESG Regimes. Parties are reminded to make their own assessments for these purposes.

The value of any investment or income may go down as well as up, and investors may not get back the full (or any) amount invested. Past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. Neither UBS nor any of its directors, employees or agents accepts any liability for any loss (including investment loss) or damage arising out of the use of all or any of the Information.

Prior to making any investment or financial decisions, any recipient of this document or the information should take steps to understand the risk and return of the investment and seek individualized advice from his or her personal financial, legal, tax and other professional advisors that takes into account all the particular facts and circumstances of his or her investment objectives.

Any prices stated in this document are for information purposes only and do not represent valuations for individual securities or other financial instruments. There is no representation that any transaction can or could have been effected at those prices, and any prices do not necessarily reflect UBS's internal books and records or theoretical model-based valuations and may be based on certain assumptions. Different assumptions by UBS or any other source may yield substantially different results.

No representation or warranty, either expressed or implied, is provided in relation to the accuracy, completeness or reliability of the information contained in any materials to which this document relates (the "Information"), except with respect to Information concerning UBS. The Information is not intended to be a complete statement or summary of the securities, markets or developments referred to in the document. UBS does not undertake to update or keep current the Information. Any statements contained in this report attributed to a third party represent UBS's interpretation of the data, information and/or opinions provided by that third party either publicly or through a subscription service, and such use and interpretation have not been reviewed by the third party. In no circumstances may this document or any of the Information (including any forecast, value, index or other calculated amount ("Values")) be used for any of the following purposes:

- (i) valuation or accounting purposes;
- (ii) to determine the amounts due or payable, the price or the value of any financial instrument or financial contract; or
- (iii) to measure the performance of any financial instrument including, without limitation, for the purpose of tracking the return or performance of any Value or of defining the asset allocation of portfolio or of computing performance fees.

By receiving this document and the Information you will be deemed to represent and warrant to UBS that you will not use this document or any of the Information for any of the above purposes or otherwise rely upon this document or any of the Information.

UBS has policies and procedures, which include, without limitation, independence policies and permanent information barriers, that are intended, and upon which UBS relies, to manage potential conflicts of interest and control the flow of information within divisions of UBS and among its subsidiaries, branches and affiliates. UBS does and seeks to do business with companies covered in its research reports. As a result, investors should be aware that the firm may have a conflict of interest that could affect the objectivity of this report. Investors should consider this report as only a single factor in making their investment decision. For further information on the ways in which UBS Global Research manages conflicts and maintains independence of its research products, historical performance information and certain additional disclosures concerning UBS Global Research recommendations, please visit <https://www.ubs.com/disclosures>.

UBS Global Research will initiate, update and cease coverage solely at the discretion of UBS Global Research Management, which will also have sole discretion on the timing and frequency of any published research product. The analysis contained in this document is based on numerous assumptions. All material information in relation to published research reports, such as valuation methodology, risk statements, underlying assumptions (including sensitivity analysis of those assumptions), ratings history etc. as required by the Market Abuse Regulation, can be found on UBS Neo. Different assumptions could result in materially different results.

UBS Global Research may utilise artificial intelligence tools ("AI Tools") in the preparation of this document. Notwithstanding any such use of AI Tools, this document has undergone human review.

The analyst(s) responsible for the preparation of this document may interact with trading desk personnel, sales personnel and other parties for the purpose of gathering, applying and interpreting market information. UBS relies on information barriers to control the flow of information contained in one or more areas within UBS into other areas, units, groups or affiliates of UBS. The compensation of the analyst who prepared this document is determined exclusively by UBS Global Research management and senior management (not including investment banking). Analyst compensation is not based on investment banking revenues; however, compensation may relate to the revenues of UBS and/or its divisions as a whole, of which investment banking, sales and trading are a part, and UBS as a whole.

For financial instruments admitted to trading on an EU regulated market: UBS (excluding UBS Securities LLC) acts as a market maker or liquidity provider (in accordance with the interpretation of these terms under English law or, if not carried out by UBS in the UK the law of the relevant jurisdiction in which UBS determines it carries out the activity) in the financial instruments of the issuer save that where the activity of liquidity provider is carried out in accordance with the definition given to it by the laws and regulations of any other EU jurisdictions, such information is separately disclosed in this document. For financial instruments admitted to trading on a non-EU regulated market: UBS may act as a market maker save that where this activity is carried out in the US in accordance with the definition given to it by the relevant laws and regulations, such activity will be specifically disclosed in this document. UBS may have issued a warrant the value of which is based on one or more of the financial instruments referred to in the document. UBS and its affiliates and employees may have long or short positions, trade as principal and buy and sell in instruments or derivatives identified herein; such transactions or positions may be inconsistent with the opinions expressed in this document.

Within the past 12 months UBS may have received or provided investment services and activities or ancillary services as per MiFID II which may have given rise to a payment or promise of a payment in relation to these services from or to this company.

Please note that all transactions conducted by UBS are consistent with sanctions regulations imposed by Switzerland, the European Union, the United Nations, the United Kingdom and the United States, per UBS' global sanctions policy. UBS opinion as to future investment worthiness assumes no new sanctions are imposed.

US persons are prohibited from purchasing or selling securities of certain companies designated as being associated with the Chinese Military in accordance with the amended US Presidential Executive Order 13959.

Risk information:

You agree that you shall not copy, revise, amend, create a derivative work, provide to any third party, or in any way commercially exploit any UBS research, and that you shall not extract data from any research or estimates, without the prior written consent of UBS.

This document is for distribution only as may be permitted by law. It is not directed to, or intended for distribution to or use by, any person or entity who is a citizen or resident of or located in any locality, state, country or other jurisdiction where such distribution, publication, availability or use would be contrary to law or regulation or would subject UBS to any registration or licensing requirement within such jurisdiction.

This document is for your information only; it is not an advertisement nor is it a solicitation or an offer to buy or sell any financial instruments or to participate in any particular trading strategy. Nothing in this document constitutes a representation that any investment strategy or recommendation is suitable or appropriate to an investor's individual circumstances or otherwise constitutes a personal recommendation. By providing this document, none of UBS or its representatives has any responsibility or authority to provide or have provided investment advice in a fiduciary capacity or otherwise. Investments involve risks, and investors should exercise prudence and their own judgment in making their investment decisions. None of UBS or its representatives is suggesting that the recipient or any other person take a specific course of action or any action at all. By receiving this document, the recipient acknowledges and agrees with the intended purpose described above and further disclaims any expectation or belief that the information constitutes investment advice to the recipient or otherwise purports to meet the investment objectives of the recipient. The financial instruments described in the document may not be eligible for sale in all jurisdictions or to certain categories of investors.

Options, derivative products and futures are not suitable for all investors, and trading in these instruments is considered risky. Mortgage and asset-backed securities may involve a high degree of risk and may be highly volatile in response to fluctuations in interest rates or other market conditions. Foreign currency rates of exchange may adversely affect the value, price or income of any security or related instrument referred to in the document. For investment advice, trade execution or other enquiries, clients should contact their local sales representative.

The value of any investment or income may go down as well as up, and investors may not get back the full (or any) amount invested. Past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. Neither UBS nor any of its directors, employees or agents accepts any liability for any loss (including investment loss) or damage arising out of the use of all or any of the information (as defined below).

Prior to making any investment or financial decisions, any recipient of this document or the information should take steps to understand the risk and return of the investment and seek individualized advice from his or her personal financial, legal, tax and other professional advisors that takes into account all the particular facts and circumstances of his or her investment objectives.

Any prices stated in this document are for information purposes only and do not represent valuations for individual securities or other financial instruments. There is no representation that any transaction can or could have been effected at those prices, and any prices do not necessarily reflect UBS's internal books and records or theoretical model-based valuations and may be based on certain assumptions. Different assumptions by UBS or any other source may yield substantially different results.

No representation or warranty, either expressed or implied, is provided in relation to the accuracy, completeness or reliability of the information contained in any materials to which this document relates (the "Information"), except with respect to Information concerning UBS. The Information is not intended to be a complete statement or summary of the securities, markets or developments referred to in the document. UBS does not undertake to update or keep current the Information. Any opinions expressed in this document may change without notice and may differ or be contrary to opinions expressed by other business areas or groups, personnel or other representative of UBS. Any statements contained in this report attributed to a third party represent UBS's interpretation of the data, information and/or opinions provided by that third party either publicly or through a subscription service, and such use and interpretation have not been reviewed by the third party. In no circumstances may this document or any of the Information (including any forecast, value, index or other calculated amount ("Values")) be used for any of the following purposes: (i) valuation or accounting purposes; (ii) to determine the amounts due or payable, the price or the value of any financial instrument or financial contract; or (iii) to measure the performance of any financial instrument including, without limitation, for the purpose of tracking the return or performance of any Value or of defining the asset allocation of portfolio or of computing performance fees.

By receiving this document and the Information you will be deemed to represent and warrant to UBS that you will not use this document or any of the Information for any of the above purposes or otherwise rely upon this document or any of the Information.

UBS has policies and procedures, which include, without limitation, independence policies and permanent information barriers, that are intended, and upon which UBS relies, to manage potential conflicts of interest and control the flow of information within divisions of UBS (including between Global Wealth Management and UBS Global Research) and among its subsidiaries, branches and affiliates. For further information on the ways in which UBS manages conflicts and maintains independence of its research products, historical performance information and certain additional disclosures concerning UBS research recommendations, please visit <https://www.ubs.com/research-methodology>.

Research will initiate, update and cease coverage solely at the discretion of research management, which will also have sole discretion on the timing and frequency of any published research product. The analysis contained in this document is based on numerous assumptions. Different assumptions could result in materially different results.

The analyst(s) responsible for the preparation of this document may interact with trading desk personnel, sales personnel and other parties for the purpose of gathering, applying and interpreting market information. UBS relies on information barriers to control the flow of information contained in one or more areas within UBS into other areas, units, groups or affiliates of UBS. The compensation of the analyst who prepared this document is determined exclusively by research management and senior management (not including investment banking). Analyst compensation is not based on investment banking revenues; however, compensation may relate to the revenues of UBS and/or its divisions as a whole, of which investment banking, sales and trading are a part, and UBS's subsidiaries, branches and affiliates as a whole.

For financial instruments admitted to trading on an EU regulated market: UBS AG, its affiliates or subsidiaries (excluding UBS Securities LLC) acts as a market maker or liquidity provider (in accordance with the interpretation of these terms in the UK) in the financial instruments of the issuer save that where the activity of liquidity provider is carried out in accordance with the definition given to it by the laws and regulations of any other EU jurisdictions, such information is separately disclosed in this document. For financial instruments admitted to trading on a non-EU regulated market: UBS may act as a market maker save that where this activity is carried out in the US in accordance with the definition given to it by the relevant laws and regulations, such activity will be specifically disclosed in this document. UBS may have issued a warrant the value of which is based on one or more of the financial instruments referred to in the document. UBS and its affiliates and employees may have long or short positions, trade as principal and buy and sell in instruments or derivatives identified herein; such transactions or positions may be inconsistent with the opinions expressed in this document.

Options and futures are not suitable for all investors, and trading in these instruments is considered risky and may be appropriate only for sophisticated investors. Prior to buying or selling an option, and for the complete risks relating to options, you must receive a copy of "Characteristics and Risks of Standardized Options". You may read the document at <https://www.theocc.com/about/publications/character-risks.jsp> or ask your financial advisor for a copy.

Investing in structured investments involves significant risks. For a detailed discussion of the risks involved in investing in any particular structured investment, you must read the relevant offering materials for that investment. Structured investments are unsecured obligations of a particular issuer with returns linked to the performance of an underlying asset. Depending on the terms of the investment, investors could lose all or a substantial portion of their investment based on the performance of the underlying asset. Investors could also lose their entire investment if the issuer becomes insolvent. UBS does not guarantee in any way the obligations or the financial condition of any issuer or the accuracy of any financial information provided by any issuer. Structured investments are not traditional investments and investing in a structured investment is not equivalent to investing directly in the underlying asset. Structured investments may have limited or no liquidity, and investors should be prepared to hold their investment to maturity. The return of structured investments may be limited by a maximum gain, participation rate or other feature. Structured investments may include call features and, if a structured investment is called early, investors would not earn any further return and may not be able to reinvest in similar investments with similar terms. Structured investments include costs and fees which are generally embedded in the price of the investment. The tax treatment of a structured investment may be complex and may differ from a direct investment in the underlying asset. UBS and its employees do not provide tax advice. Investors should consult their own tax advisor about their own tax situation before investing in any securities.

Important Information About Sustainable Investing Strategies: Sustainable investing strategies aim to consider and incorporate environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into investment process and portfolio construction. Strategies across geographies approach ESG analysis and incorporate the findings in a variety of ways. Incorporating ESG factors or sustainable investing considerations may inhibit the portfolio manager's ability to participate in certain investment opportunities that otherwise would be consistent with its investment objective and other principal investment strategies. The returns on a portfolio incorporating ESG factors or sustainable investing considerations may be lower or higher than portfolios where ESG factors, exclusions, or other sustainability issues are not considered by the portfolio manager, and the investment opportunities available to such portfolios may differ.

Within the past 12 months UBS Switzerland AG, its affiliates or subsidiaries may have received or provided investment services and activities or ancillary services as per MiFID II which may have given rise to a payment or promise of a payment in relation to these services from or to this company.
