

UBS Global I/O Silicon Wafers

Silicon wafers: Meaningful price hikes necessary for sufficient wafer supply in 2 years

Tighter supply/demand outlook in 2027 and beyond

Our industry analysis suggests the silicon wafer supply vs demand outlook will continue to improve for the next 2 years, across all wafer sizes. We believe the 12"/8" wafer demand is tracking to grow 11% / 11% in 2026, above our prior estimate of 9% / 8% growth respectively, reflecting more robust customer restocking with healthier inventory. Our updated industry model forecasts 12" wafer utilization to rise to 84%/91%/99% in 2026/27/28, vs 82%/88%/94% previously. We forecast 12" wafer demand to grow 14%/13% in 2027/28 mostly through stronger restocking demand, and faster DRAM capacity expansion especially into 2028E. 8" wafer utilisation should also rise to 80%/90%/97% in 2026/27/28 vs prior estimates of 79%/87%/94%.

New industry expansion requires 40-50% price hike or more

We are optimistic about the price hike of silicon wafers and forecast this up-cycle to possibly hike 20%+ a year in 2027-28, as the up-cycle in 2017-18. Our key argument is that the large customers need to incentivize the wafer makers with higher prices in considering new expansion in 2028 and beyond, otherwise there could be a severe wafer shortage which could cap the industry growth. Major wafer makers are cautious about expansion due to the downturn after COVID in 2023-25 with only 12.3% op margin and 6.8% ROE vs 18.3% / 19.1% in 2017-2022. Our industry feedback suggests the wafer makers may need to see a 40-50% price hike or more to consider new expansion from here.

Manageable China competition

Chinese wafer makers have been expanding aggressively, but we see a limited impact on global supply vs demand in 2027-28. We believe the Chinese opportunity may mostly be limited to the new mature logic fabs in China, while the local leading-edge logic / memory clients are likely to prefer overseas wafers due to yield consideration. For non-Chinese clients, it is hard to use Chinese wafers in meaningful volume given the re-qualification required for mature logic foundry, and lagging performance for advanced logic / memory. NSIG, the largest Chinese wafer maker, reported 12" ASP at US$54 vs industry price of US$100-120, reflecting that most of its volume is still from non-production wafers, in our view.

Stock ratings

The wafer stock P/B has corrected from 3.3x in July 2026 to 2.6x currently, around the mid-point of the 1.0-4.0x cycle in the last 10 years, due to the market concern about overall AI demand sustainability and the risk to the wafer recovery. We believe the pullback presents compelling value for the structural up-cycle ahead. We have Buy ratings on ShinEtsu, GlobalWafers, and Siltronic. We lower GlobalWafers's EPS estimates by 7% in 2026E and 14% in 2027/28E, but expect its sales growth to accelerate into Q426 and 2027. We trim GlobalWafers's target to NT$1,750 from NT$2,000 based on 7.5x forward P/B from 8.5x, considering the broader market de-rating. In our concurrent companion report, we lift our price target on Siltronic from €105 to €120. We have a Neutral rating on SUMCO.

Valuation Method and Risk Statement

The semiconductor industry is cyclically sensitive to the economy and so upside and downside risks relate to macro drivers. Other, semiconductor capital equipment specific downside risks include the rapid loss of market share due to product timing/performance , design or distribution. The supply chain companies into the handset industry also operate in a highly cyclical market both from macro concerns and inventory cycles within the supply chain. These companies also operate in a highly competitive environment with product innovation and R&D investments critical to success.

For GlobalWafers, we derive our price target using a target PB multiple relative to industry peers. We believe GlobalWafers faces a variety of upside and downside risks, including volatile end demand, intense competition, high capital investment, industry capacity expansion and FX uncertainty. Key risks we identify for silicon-wafer manufacturers include lower semiconductor demand due to economic contraction, lower wafer demand caused by rapid miniaturisation progress, inventory adjustments in the supply chain, price competition stemming from oversupply caused by expansion of production capacity, the growing presence of Chinese manufacturers and FX fluctuation.

Investing in structured investments involves significant risks. For a detailed discussion of the risks involved in investing in any particular structured investment, you must read the relevant offering materials for that investment. Structured investments are unsecured obligations of a particular issuer with returns linked to the performance of an underlying asset. Depending on the terms of the investment, investors could lose all or a substantial portion of their investment based on the performance of the underlying asset. Investors could also lose their entire investment if the issuer becomes insolvent. UBS does not guarantee in any way the obligations or the financial condition of any issuer or the accuracy of any financial information provided by any issuer. Structured investments are not traditional investments and investing in a structured investment is not equivalent to investing directly in the underlying asset. Structured investments may have limited or no liquidity, and investors should be prepared to hold their investment to maturity. The return of structured investments may be limited by a maximum gain, participation rate or other feature. Structured investments may include call features and, if a structured investment is called early, investors would not earn any further return and may not be able to reinvest in similar investments with similar terms. Structured investments include costs and fees which are generally embedded in the price of the investment. The tax treatment of a structured investment may be complex and may differ from a direct investment in the underlying asset. UBS and its employees do not provide tax advice. Investors should consult their own tax advisor about their own tax situation before investing in any securities.

Important Information About Sustainable Investing Strategies: Sustainable investing strategies aim to consider and incorporate environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into investment process and portfolio construction. Strategies across geographies approach ESG analysis and incorporate the findings in a variety of ways. Incorporating ESG factors or sustainable investing considerations may inhibit the portfolio manager's ability to participate in certain investment opportunities that otherwise would be consistent with its investment objective and other principal investment strategies. The returns on a portfolio incorporating ESG factors or sustainable investing considerations may be lower or higher than portfolios where ESG factors, exclusions, or other sustainability issues are not considered by the portfolio manager, and the investment opportunities available to such portfolios may differ.
